MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Roses.

Crimson Rambler roses that have been potted two or three weeks will be getting hold of the soil and will not need the syringing that was necessary when first lifted. Keep them as cool as possible till the middle of December, when they can be put into a night temperature of 50 degrees and slowly started. They need very little pruning; just the unripened ends of the shoots, and if there are any lateral growths on the strong canes cut them back to two or three eyes.

I am by no means discouraged with the method of growing them in pots all summer from cut back dormant stock started in April, and last Easter had a number of well-flowered, medium-sized plants grown in this way. This year they did not make as good a growth in early summer because they were neglected in June and attacked by mildew. That is nothing against the method, but it shows what neglect will do. However, lifting the plants from the field is much the least expensive plan because you escape the long summer's care.

Brunners, Jacks or any of the hybrid perpetuals that have been grown in pots for forcing should now be laid on their sides to escape any more moisture. If laid down in a frame with glass over them, all the better. We have usually had a few hundred American Beauty in pots for Easter, and there is no other rose its equal for this purpose. We lift them from the bench in early November (strong plants that were put on the bench in April), cut them down to within six or eight inches of the bench and pot them in 6-inch pots, place in a cold-frame, where they stay till New Year's or a little later, according to the date of Easter. I have written of my method of doing this before and the reason for bringing it up just now is to tell you that although American Beauty belongs to the H. P. class and is quite hardy in our cold winters you must not let these plants in pots that have made very few or no roots be exposed to much frost. They will not stand it, particularly if the soil is dry. They have been all right in a frame up till now, but after this must be well protected or in a house that is kept just above freezing.

There is no rose that makes such a fine pot plant for Easter as American Beauty. Every eye sends up a flower and with stems 12 to 15 inches long. I know of some who have tried to do this and failed. They lifted them in early November, left them 18 inches tall and put them in a greenhouse. That won't do. They must be cut back hard and kept very cool till starting time. You can force them into flower in two months, but three months is much better, beginning at 45 degrees and finishing at 55 degrees, then the color will be fine and the plants sturdy.

Carnations.

Some people are so stubborn and knowing, that they will learn from no one; others are too ready to adopt any plan that is advocated. The writer, I hope, belongs to neither class, but is a little inclined to attach too much importance to the views of men who set themselves up as authorities.

For instance, we have heard specialists in carnations with two years' experience in gardening say that carnations should be rooted without bottom heat, and we heard it so often that our 25 years' experience to the contrary we adopted it and for five years past have been rooting them in three inches of sand on the board benches of a carnation house. We are tired of it. It is too slow and some varieties will hardly root at all unless the sand is warmer than the house. So this fall we took up the boards and put in their place roofing slates 18 by 12 inches. Beneath the bench are six 1½-inch hot water pipes, and we boarded up the bench back and front, leaving a board on the path side hinged so we could let the heat into the house and avoid so much in the sand. This is precisely the kind of propagating bed we rooted carnations in for 25 years, and where we used to put in 1,000 cuttings of old La Purite and take out 1,017. As long as the house is cool no harm at all is done by having the sand at 65 to 70 degrees. In this bed the carnations will root in 20 to 25 days; in the cool sand it takes 35 to 40 days, and with some varieties more if they root at all. You may think there are a good many pipes, but the bench is 3 feet wide and the pipes are spread and 18 inches below the slates.

On many places it pays well to have a good batch of carnations for flowering in July, August and September out of doors. You get very little from inside during those months. For this purpose you should propagate at once so that you have well branched plants in 3-inch pots to plant out next April. There are so many new kinds untried for this purpose that I would rather depend upon the older varieties. But the trouble is you have perhaps discarded some varieties that gave excellent results in the field. Portia, that became useless in winter, gives you fine flowers outside. For a white, Evelina is grand. Daybreak is first-class. Scott will give you thousands of flowers. We can judge from the habit of some of the newer kinds and I am sure that Crane will be a dandy for the purpose, and of the new pinks Genevieve Lord has just the habit.

Rust has about disappeared with us. I hope it has everywhere. I am sure it was not from syringing the plants with Bordeaux or any other mixture, but for several years we have always kept a tub of "ammoniacal copper carbonate" very near the propagating bench, in which we immersed the handful of cuttings for a second or two just before we put them in the sand. And we do the same just before they are potted. We believe this is an excellent plan and shall continue it. In a cool house the sand is seldom troubled with the fungus that carries off thousands of cuttings in a warm house, but as a preventive, between batches of cuttings we always water the sand with this mixture.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Group of Crotons shown at the Chicago Exhibition by M. Luetschg, gardener to F. R. Chandler, Lake Geneva, Wis.

CROTONS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a group of crotons shown by Melchior Luetschg, gardener to F. R. Chandler, Lake Geneva, Wis., at the recent Chicago exhibition. These plants attracted a good deal of attention, not only because they were in good condition but even more on account of the fact that they had been bedded out all summer and lifted and potted in the fall.

Mr. Luetschg accomplished this without losing the leaves by cutting the roots back severely when potting the plants after lifting, keeping shaded for a few days, giving a temperature of not less than 70 degrees at night, syringing at least twice a day and maintaining a very moist atmosphere, thus inducing a quick, healthy growth of new roots. With this treatment no leaves were lost and the plants were in condition to show at the exhibition early in November.

Mr. Luetschg believes that the croton merits more attention as a summer bedder, and considers it a most desirable subject to give a tropical effect in the home grounds.

Carrieri has been especially good with him, being the hardiest of all, growing fast and symmetrically and showing the color to good advantage. Other varieties that he has been successful with are Andreana, Baron Joseph Rothschild, Baron James Rothschild, Baron Alphonse Rothschild, Aureum, Dayspring, Disraeli, Evansianum, Lady Zetland, Queen Victoria and Veitchii. He has no doubt that many other sorts would prove equally desirable.

CARNATION NOTES.

Temperature.

These past few weeks have been extremely hard on carnations. We have had all kinds of weather you could ask for. Cold, hot, sunny and rainy; mostly rainy during the past few days.

Carnations like, above all things, a steady, uniform temperature, and it keeps one guessing just how to handle them so as to keep them in such condition that they will not suffer too much from any kind of a change. This is perhaps the hardest part of the whole season for the growers. During this dark weather they are inclined to make a soft growth, so keep them a little on the dry side until we get more sun again. Give all the air you can on all occasions. Keep the steam around and open the ventilators rather than have a stuffy, close atmosphere. It will do no harm to keep them up to 55 degrees at night if you keep the ventilators up an inch or two. The more air the better, as long as the temperature does not fall below 50 degrees at night and about 60 degrees during the day. When the sun does come out again your carnations will not wilt down flat if you keep them hardened up. You can also give more water without causing a soft growth.

Forcing.

Christmas is not far off, and if any of your carnations need any forcing it would be best to begin at once. Raise the temperature a few degrees this week and a few degrees next week, until you have them about 55 degrees, and then do not allow it to vary either up or down until you are through foreing them, when you can reduce the temperature gradually. Do not go over a 55 degree night temperature if you want to keep the stems strong and the plants in good health. I do not believe in foreing carnations much at this time, and especially should we avoid sudden changes. Of course we hate to be caught with our carnations off crop during the holidays, but the few dollars you could gain then you would lose over and over again afterward by weakening your plants so that they cannot produce first grade blooms.

Tying.

If you have not tied up all your carnation plants, do so at once. Your blooms will not command a fair price, even at Christmas, if the stems are not straight and strong. A good straight stem is as essential as a good bloom. There are many ways of supporting carnations and nearly every grower has his own idea about how it should be done. We like the following method: Stretch No. 18 wire lengthwise of the bench between the rows, one wire to each row of plants, and then tie strings crosswise, two strings to each row; tie the string to each outside wire and wrap around each wire between. This makes a square for each plant and leaves a space between each plant for air, etc. Make the first mesh about 6 inches above the ground and then put another mesh about 8 to 10 inches above the first one. The lower one is to hold the plant and the top one the stems, and sometimes we find it necessary to add a third mesh for tall varieties like White Cloud. Stretch the long wires as tight as possible and put cross wires under them about every fifteen feet to keep them from sagging. Get all the weeds out and do all necessary cleaning before you put on the mesh.

Mulching.

If you planted as early as Aug. 20 the plants will likely be benefited by a light mulch of well-rotted manure. But don't do it unless the roots have taken a good hold on the soil. Plants benched later than the above date will be better without for some time yet. It makes little difference whether it is cow manure or from the stable, as long as it is well rotted. Put it on about a half inch thick, which is plenty this time of year. A heavy mulch put on now would keep the soil from drying out and make it sour, while the light mulch will soon wash into the soil and then you can change the food and put on another light mulch. Mulching, like liquid feeding, should not be made too strong at this time of year, but applied in weak but frequent doses.

If you can mulch them before you tie them up it will save some time, but get them tied up as soon as possible.

A. F. J. Baur.

DISEASED CARNATIONS.

Will you tell me what to do to a bench of carnations the plants in which are spotting like sample enclosed? They were planted early and have had good care. J. W. H.

The sample leaves show a bad ease of bacteria, and that it is hereditary is indicated by the fact that the plants have had good treatment. I would suggest picking off the affected leaves. It is quite likely that the new growth will show little if any signs of the trouble. I would not take any cuttings from the plants showing the least sign of the disease. The cuttings will sometimes look all right but if you use them you will be almost certain to have the same trouble again next year.

James Hartshorne.

CARNATION GUARDIAN ANGEL.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a vase of the new carnation, Guardian Angel, a pink sport from Armazindy, that originated in the greenhouses of the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, Chicago, where N. A. Schmitz is gardener. It is a pretty shade of pink, and, possessing the free flowering qualities of Armazindy, should prove useful. At the recent Chicago show the vase illustrated took first prize in the class for any other pink carnation not lighter in color than Scott. The variety will, we understand, be introduced later.

ROSE NOTES.

The continuous cloudy and stormy weather has caused the grower much worry. Stock is getting soft and the roses are beginning to show the result of the unfavorable weather by the pale color. By no means try to make up for the missing sunshine by keeping the houses closed and giving extra fire heat. If you do this you will soon be obliged to support each rose with an extra stake or wire to help the weak neck hold up the flower. You will also considerably diminish the cut of blooms for the whole season by encouraging a soft and spindling growth which in turn will produce small and weak stemmed flowers, together with lots of blind wood.

Keep the houses on the dry side and get as much air as possible, even at night. Guide the inside temperature somewhat by that outside and at all times have the atmosphere in a good and healthy condition for yourself, so that you can draw a long breath and still feel at ease. This condition is best for the roses as well as for yourself. When entering your houses in the morning, or even during the day, you may have noticed a depressing effect in the atmosphere, giving you a suggestion of asthma. The thermometer may register only 59 to 60 degrees; you begin your work and soon get used to the dead air just as you do when you go into a smoking room, but it would have been far healthier for you and the plants had you given just a little air. We cannot keep our roses in a healthy condition and have good colored flowers without the necessary fresh air. Draughts should, of course, be avoided. If ventilation is closely attended to you will have a great deal less trouble from greenfly and mildew.

Tying and disbudding should never be neglected. If you wait till the bud is about ready to cut the benefit is almost wholly lost. Disbudding is of the greatest importance, as it not only helps the development of the flower but is a benefit to the stem also. M. Stauch.

BRIDESMAID AND BEAUTY.

Replying to T. M., the sport from Mermet, so well known as the Bridesmaid, originated with Mr. Frank L. Moore, Chatham, N. J. It was first named The Hugh, and Mr. Moore made no special effort to introduce it, as the Waban, another sport from Mermet and almost identical in color with The Hugh, was being introduced by other parties. The Waban, however, did not prove a good commercial rose away from the establishment of the originator and The Hugh was then rechristened the Bridesmaid and introduced.

Probably no other rose has been so largely grown for cut flowers in America as The Bridesmaid. Its parent, Catherine Mermet, was at one time very largely grown for cut flowers but for this purpose has now been universally abandoned. As is well known, The Bride was also a sport from Mermet. This sport originated with Mr. James Taplin, Maywood, N. J., who sold it to John N. May, Summit, N. J., by whom it was introduced. Niphetos and Cornelia Cook were the white tea roses depended upon before the advent of The Bride.

The story of the American Beauty has been several times published in the trade press. Briefly: An unlabeled rose in the collection of Geo. Bancroft, the historian, Washington, D. C., was purchased by Field Bros., florists, of that city, who, believing it to be an unnamed rose, christened it American Beauty. Plants were later sent to France and the French rosarians at once recognized it as Mme. Ferdinand Jamain, a rose that had been introduced some years before by a French grower, but soon discarded. It is said to be a poor flower with the French rosarians and its popularity in America has been a surprise to them.

ROSE TEMPERATURES.

Replying to C. O., would say that 50 degrees is entirely too low a night temperature for roses. It should be 56 to 58 degrees for Bridesmaid, and do not allow it to rise too rapidly in the morning.

Perle should have a slightly higher temperature, say 62 degrees, and Kaiserin does best at 60 degrees. Maintaining an even temperature is a very important point in the production of high grade roses.

Perle should have a lighter soil than other roses. Perles in a heavy soil are much more apt to produce bull-heads.

M. A. C.

THE METEOR ROSE.

Some growers still fail to get the best results in growing Meteor and some of the blooms seen in the market are far from creditable.

There is a good deal more in growing the Meteor than merely giving it a higher temperature. To produce first-class blooms Meteor must be planted in a heavy loam and one part manure to three parts soil is none too rich. We feed with liquid, but do not begin this until about Jan. 1. We give Meteor more water and syringing than other roses. In fact, this is essential in view of the higher temperature.

As to temperature we find 65 to 68 degrees at night and 70 to 85 degrees in the daytime, when the sun is shining, about right.

New Pink Carnation Guardian Angel.

AWAY FROM HOME.

Queens, N. Y.

It is quite a step from Flatbush to the home of Governor Roosevelt. I don't mean His Excellency; I mean the home of the well-known carnation. But when you have Mr. Paul Dailledouze to guide you, any place on Long Island is easily found. We were fortunate enough to find Mr. C. W. Ward just bidding good-bye to some visitors, and when he saw us he knew he was in for another trudge around his large establishment. If you want to see sub-watering carried out extensively, here you can see it. Being asked what he thought of it, Mr. Ward said he would rather wait a while. If there is anything in this system Mr. Ward's place should prove it, for it is done there scientifically. One thing Mr. Ward admits which is rather disappointing, and that is that watering must be done more carefully with the sub-watering system than with the ordinary method of culture. If I am allowed to advance an opinion, I believe that it will never be much practiced. If there is any advantage in it it will be during April, May and June that the system will be of most benefit.

I saw there two houses of Glory de Lorraine begonia. If I had not seen perhaps the best in the country earlier I would have called them very fine, and they are good. The carnation that impressed me most was Gov. Roosevelt, looking very fine. Morning Glory is a beauty and a variety that we shall all have to grow. This place has been described often and I can only add that everything is in first-class order. I was sorry to hear Mr. Ward complain so much of the stem rot. What troubles both Mr. Dailledouze and Mr. Ward is that they know of no cure for it. In some varieties it is very serious; with others not so bad. They all agree that it is a fungus that attacks the plant in the field and they succumb to it after removing to the houses.

Carnations are not the only thing to be seen here. Mr. Ward is away to the front in zonal geraniums and pelargoniums. His collection of zonals is very complete and anything new is bought or imported. Amongst geraniums that pleased me very much I noticed Madame Landray, a beautiful apricot; Marvel, an improvement on the well-known S. A. Nutt; Richelieu is also said to be better than Nutt; Pasteur is better and brighter than Alphonse Ricard; John Doyle is also of the style of Ricard, but still better; Rene Bazin is a deep salmon; M. de Castelaine is a fine amaranthe; Eulalia is Mr. Ward's best white; Madame Barney is a pure pink; Le Soliel is of the same style as old Raspail, but much better, and being a newer variety is, of course, healthy; Jean Viaud is a pure pink Poitevine. All of the above are semi-double. In single varieties S. Chauteaubriand can be described as a dwarf Atkinson; Madame Charlotte is a dwarf improved Poitevine; George Sands is a white dotted with pink, said to be an excellent pot plant; Grand Villa, a carmine penciled white; Hall Caine is a scarlet cerise, an immense flower; Andrew Lang is a very fine scarlet with white center, said to be an excellent bedding variety; Barbara Hope, a beautiful peach bloom pink, very large round flower; Mrs. Charles Pierson is a grand salmon. These single geraniums are not generally used for bedding, but that is sometimes a mistake, as what finer bedder have we today than the old single General Grant? Most of them make magnificent plants for the conservatory.

Mr. Ward has a great collection of ivy leaved geraniums. He speaks very highly of Leopold, pink with a crimson spot; Mrs. F. G. Day, a grand scarlet; and Bride, a pure white. Amongst geraniums there is a great curiosity to be seen here. It is a cross between Madame Salleroi, the little dwarf, compact, variegated bedding geranium, and S. A. Nutt, the well-known semi-double. The foliage partakes very strongly of the Salleroi, while the truss of flowers is almost identical with the Nutt. I believe there is a place for this very distinct variety, not as an edge plant but as a solid bed of itself. The darkness came over us before we could have a look at the acres of cannas which are grown there, but we had a thorough look at everything under glass. Mr. Ward is an enthusiast in everything he enters into and his place is well worth a visit.

New Rochelle, N. Y.

My next jump was to the immense establishment of Siebrecht & Sons, New Rochelle. The quantity of palms grown here is prodigious. "How many kentias do you think you have, Mr. Siebrecht?" And Mr. Siebrecht, junior, answered: "We have something in the neighborhood of three millions." Just fancy that quantity. That, of course, includes plants in seed boxes. Some long, broad new houses recently erected are filled with splendid plants. But palms are not the only thing to be seen at New Rochelle. There is no end to orchids, cypripediums, dendrobiums and cattleyas. One house of palms particularly worth notice was a house 280 feet by 32 feet, all filled with Kentia Belmoreana, and every plant perfect and from four to five feet tall.

I was very much interested to look over the nurseries. They are taking on land and turning it into nurseries as fast as they can. Here is to be seen a me that all of their conifers will be regularly transplanted every two years. If they keep that up you can depend upon what you buy growing. Among herbaceous plants I noticed Rudbeckia purpurea, which is a very strong growing plant with a large showy flower. Their cannas are not yet touched with frost and I thought Duke of Marlboro, a bright scarlet, was very desirable, as was Crimson Bedder, a fine dwarf variety.

splendid collection of conifers of all the leading hardy species. Particularly I noticed some grand plants of Picea pungens, also an immense lot of specimen Austrian pine. Here, as well as at some other places, I was much impressed with the beauty of Rosa rugosa. Every one knows this plant, but it seems to me that it is not nearly as much used as it might be. What hardy shrub is there to compare with it? There it was, in the middle of October, with its beautiful flowers and at the same time covered with its brilliant fruit.

A man does not need to have much riches besides the pleasure of living at such a beautiful place as New Rochelle. Young Mr. Siebrecht drove me through the town and pointed out several authors and actors who made their home in this beautiful locality. He also pointed out to me the resting place of Thomas Paine, the great free thinker. I took off my hat as I passed, as lots of others have done. Thomas was seventy-five years ahead of his time; that was all that was the matter with him. From beautiful Rochelle to the swamps of New Jersey is quite a change. A street car ride from Hoboken to Carlton Hill is anything but picturesque, but after a few weary miles you begin to ascend the hill and then it is very pleasant.

Rutherford, N. J.

I went to see that young and thrifty firm, Bobbink & Atkins. They are quite new but have made great strides for so young a firm. It is principally nurseries they have to show you. I thought a great deal of their cellars for storing half hardy plants and nursery stock. I think they are admirable. Their whole place is full of most desirable young stock and they have the land to increase. This firm understands how necessary it is to transplant. They told beautiful Hudson I, of course, stopped at Tarrytown to see Mr. Frank R. Pierson. His Tarrytown place is not as large as the reputation of the firm, but it is full of good stuff and he has one jewel there which I am not allowed to say anything about. Not even can I tell you whether it is a rose, a palm, or a hollyhock, but some day it will appear and I predict for it a most unprecedented popularity.

The carriage ride from Tarrytown to Scarboro was most enjoyable. If F. R. smoked it would be more so. It is really the continuation of Broadway and you pass between the homes of millionaires. One we did not pass by but went in and drove around the grounds. It was the home of William Rockefeller, a magnificent place. There is perhaps no locality in the world where more wealth can be found in a few square miles than right here in Scarboro. You enter Mr. Pierson's Scarboro place from the highway and nothing can be finer than the view of his thirty acres as it lies in the valley almost entirely surrounded by higher ground. Down in the bottom of the valley lie the seven immense houses, each 300 feet long by 20 feet wide, and being separated some 25 feet they appear to cover a great area. Looking down and seeing them all at once it is really a fine sight. There is another range of houses nearer the entrance where Mr. Pierson has a general collection for his catalogue trade and where we now and then hear of something new being sent out. Here also is an extensive nursery, and particularly a fine collection of conifers.

As usual the houses were in the very best order. Every inch and foot in these big houses was filled with American Beauty roses. There were a large number of flowers being cut, but I could see plainly that the promise of a large crop later on was most excellent. I have never yet seen such a fine uniform lot of American Beauties. Last year Mr. Pierson sent out the now famous chrysanthemum, Col. Appleton. I was too early to see it in flower, but have since seen it in several places and it has proved to be one of the very finest chrysanthemums sent out for some time. Mr. Pierson must have spent a great deal of money to make the place as beautiful as he has, but there is plenty to show for it and some day it will be a wonder, a place to be proud of.

A mile or so inland from the Hudson is a rich man's home where you will find some of the grandest carnations in the country. Mr. Paul Pierson is running them. The houses are all of the most substantial and modern build. From memory I would say that each house is 250 by 75 feet, with benches about 5 feet wide and each one dropping a foot or so as the level of the ground slopes south. Every new and old desirable variety is represented and they are in the grandest condition. When looking at this magnificent field of carnations it made me think that with our 19 foot houses we are only amateurs just playing at the business. They hardly know what stem rot is. They may later. At present it is a grand sight and the young man in charge appeared to be an enthusiast.

Utica, N. Y.

My last stop was at Utica to see the cups and medals that Peter Crow captured at New York. Peter has his own peculiar style of growing roses. He gets there every time, if it is peculiar. We had a pleasant call with Alderman Frank Baker, who is one of the most sensible and agreeable young men in the business and knows how to raise young ferns to perfection. We are very sorry to find the health of young Mr. Crow anything but good. He had to leave business entirely and has since gone to Denver for a stay, where it is greatly to be hoped the mountain air will bring about perfect health. W. S.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOWS.

It is hard work and seems almost impossible to make a financial success of a chrysanthemum show. If they could only be society events, as they are considered in many places in Europe; if they were the fad, so to speak, then we could offer prizes worthy the labor and trouble of growing and exhibiting, and still have an overflowing treasury. Look at the horse show. The violets worn by the ladies attending this annual affair in New York are of as much value as all the premiums given at the mum shows. We must not grumble at people paying extravagant prices for a box at a horse show. At the present development 95 percent of our people would rather pay to see a handsome horse than a handsome flower. Whether it is only the most refined that will pay to see the flowers is perhaps correct, but all of us admire action. The sweet, silent flowers do not amuse. Some of the best literary dramas have been dismal failures for the lack of action. You have action in a horse show and a bull fight. Man fight, including football, is full of action, and they draw the crowds. You will get a much larger crowd to see a vaudeville lady kick two feet above her head than you would to hear her recite "Sweet Bingen on the Rhine." And so it always will be till human nature undergoes a wonderful change, or, rather, till we lose our human nature.

If we could get our flower shows to be society events, where the people came really to see and be seen, as most people go to fashionable churches; admire and enjoy the music and incidentally have a look at the flowers, then we would be in great luck, but that day is not the present. Some cities have fine halls in which to hold their shows, notably Boston, Philadelphia, Toronto, and there may be others, that lightens the risk of a deficit very much, but even with that they are not financial successes, and where a heavy hall rent is paid, to make them pay is out of the question. Still for the good of the trade at large they should be continued against all obstacles.

We notice that in every city there are found some patrons and lovers of horticulture who help to encourage our flower shows. They are likely to increase in numbers if properly handled. A greater success could be made in many localities if all the florists of the neighborhood would lend a helping hand. They may not be able to make an exhibit, although many could that do not, but they could give their good will and help. They could talk to their customers, praise it up, get them interested and do many things to help along the good work, instead of a sneer and a turn up of the nose, as we are certain is often the case.

My particular reason for troubling you now on this subject is that I have just noticed a flagrant case of the old story where a firm has run a show of their own in opposition to the show held by the society. Everybody expects that the florists will make a good display during the exhibition week, and in large cities a little extra advertising by any firm will make no difference to the success of the exhibition. But in small cities, where the largest firm has a most prominent advertisement in the daily papers the very day of the show, which reads: "Chrysanthemum Show every day at R——", is anything but friendly. How can you succeed with a flower show with such help as this? The only consolation—and that is not a certain one—is that the public will notice these things and in their good moments weigh them over and pass judgment accordingly. We all know that you can do this lawfully, and many other things without infringing the law, but the spirit of the thing is bad and contemptible and emanates from small motives.

Trade Conditions.

The situation has been an interesting one for the past week. Violets, roses and carnations became scarcer and scarcer so that prices gradually crawled up hill, but against fierce competition on the part of the buyers, because there is no increase in retail trade and they rightfully protest against exorbitant figures on goods under such circumstances.

Chrysanthemums, stevia and paper white, with a little assistance from hyacinths and lilies, have kept prices from ranging too high, except in the case of violets for the Yale-Harvard contest, when the figure ran up to $1.75 to $2 per 100, from 50 cents to 75 cents and $1 during the rest of the week. Red roses have been much perturbed on account of scarcity. Best American Beauties, about 4 feet long, bringing $6 per dozen. A few of the best pink and white have stood at $2 per dozen and nothing has been sold at less than 2 cents each. Carnations are selling at from 1 to 2 cents on ordinary kinds and chrysanthemums range from 25 cents to $3 per dozen; $1.50 gets pretty good ones, and those at 50 cents are not to be despised. The crop is expected to hold out in force until Thanksgiving.

As the growing crops are all getting better and better it is worthy of note that the Lawson pink seems to be developing better than last year, if not better than ever. Some of the best I have seen were on the stand of Denys Zirngiebel at the Park street market. But Mr. Zirngiebel has a habit of expecting his product to look well.

Various Items.

John Spalding, the venerable florist of New London, Conn., has been in Boston consulting the oculists concerning his gradual loss of eyesight, as the result of catarrh and other complications. They tell him there is nothing to be done at present, but his many floral friends will hope for speedy relief from the affliction. The old gentleman passed his "three score years and ten" four presidential campaigns ago, being now 86.

E. Holmes is bringing in sweet peas from his Dorchester place and means to cut them right along. I don't know whether they are late ones of 1900 or early ones for next year.

A Visit to J. W. Howard, Somerville, Mass.

There are really but few men who make good business acquaintances and good personal friends at one and the same time. But I am not thinking of J. W. Howard at Winter Hill, Somerville. In scurrying across the country I ran across his place the other day and went through it as being preferable to going over the top of the new $500 chimney, some sixty feet tall. I was astonished. His street front simply consists of a nice store about 30x40 feet, where the better part of the elegant Doogue fixtures seem to feel as much at home as they ever did in their palatial Boston quarters. Here he carries in stock as fine a collection of cut flowers as almost any retail store in the state. A force of six men besides himself are employed here, two at the retail branch in Charlestown, and Mrs. Howard makes herself as useful to the business as any of them.

Behind the store his territory develops into ten times what I supposed he had there and contains the most stupendous collection of potted plants I ever saw. All kinds and all sizes and room enough yet for growing a lot of bench goods besides, and a remarkable feature is that it all looks in A1 condition except one small bench of late-planted white pinks, which I will not mention, just out of pure politeness. There are three large cellars on the place stocked full of boxes of bulb goods piled cob-house fashion, and dry storage room enough to fill a large farm full of envy. But his large traffic utilizes it all, including a roomy and substantial dwelling and a large stable.

Mr. Howard hitched up one of his four teams and took me over to his Woburn greenhouses. The drive is one of eight miles, through as pretty a residential part of the old Bay State as can be found except for the last mile, where we diverged into what seemed like wood-road through one of nature's back lots. Strangers in that section must be surprised at finding his 20,000 feet of glass in this out-of-the-way locality. It is as honest looking a range of houses both inside and out as New England can boast. Here Howard points out with just pride many points in the make-up as that of his own hands.

Two of the ten houses are so new as to be unfinished, but are full of rose bushes set in August and September. A third house is full of three-year-old bushes and all three of them are just shouting promises for Christmas and later. The old house has also cut a surprising amount so far this season as well as during the past two years. The remainder of the glass covers some robust pink plants, smilax, asparagus, ferns, antirrhinum, etc. As a usual thing about three men are employed here.

The farming operations here are quite interesting, all kinds of live stock being kept on the place, including a monkey, and all sorts of outdoor crops are raised.

Mr. Howard's compressed energy is infectious and pervades everything about his establishment, and I mistrust his bank account is as active as the rest of the plant. May he long enjoy his present conditions. J. S. Manter.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of the Committees.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited Chestnut Hill, a yellow Japanese incurved variety, which scored 85 points commercial and exhibition scales. Last year this variety scored 90 points commercial scale, 88 points exhibition scale at Philadelphia.

New York, Nov. 24.—Chestnut Hill, exhibited by John N. May, scored 81 points commercial scale.

Boston, Nov. 24.—John N. May exhibited the following two varieties: Chestnut Hill, which scored 88 points commercial scale; and Zampa, a brownish crimson, salmon reverse, scoring 78 points exhibition scale.

Cincinnati, Nov. 24.—Chestnut Hill, shown by same exhibitor, scored 86 points commercial scale.

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, yellow, which scored 93 points commercial scale.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited Mary Hill, pink, which scored 78 points commercial scale. Malcolm Lamond, crimson, by same exhibitors, scored 81 points commercial scale.

New York, Nov. 17.—H. A. Molatsch, Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited No. 19, a bright yellow Japanese incurved variety, which scored 87 points commercial scale. E. H. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited Malcolm Lamond, crimson, reflexed, scoring 85 points commercial scale. John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, light pink, reflexed Japanese, which scored 85 points commercial scale.

Philadelphia, Nov. 17.—Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Ontario, Can., exhibited Timothy Eaton, white, Japanese, incurved, which scored commercial and exhibition scales 92 points. E. G. Hill & Co. exhibited Malcom Lamond, which scored 90 points commercial scale, 91 points exhibition scale. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, a yellow Japanese incurved variety, scoring 91 points commercial scale, 90 points exhibition scale. Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, exhibited by John N. May, scored 83 points commercial scale, 85 points exhibition scale. No. 112, by same exhibitor, a chrome red, Japanese reflexed, scored 84 points commercial scale, 85 points exhibition scale. Ferdinand Heck, gardener to George F. Baer, Esq., Reading, Pa., exhibited a yellow, Japanese incurved variety, which scored 84 points commercial and exhibition scales.

Boston, Nov. 17.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, scoring 94 points commercial scale, 87 points exhibition scale. Mrs. Ritson a white sport from Viviand-Morel, reflexed, by same exhibitors, scored 90 points exhibition scale. The flowers arrived in poor condition, but judging from the excellence of its parent we consider this sport worthy of this score. John N. May exhibited Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, which scored 88 points commercial and exhibition scales.

Cincinnati, Nov. 17.—H. L. Ragan, Springfield, Ohio, exhibited Gold Smith, a bronze yellow sport from President W. R. Smith, Japanese reflexed, scoring 83 points commercial scale. E. G. Hill & Co. exhibited Mary Hill, a pink incurved variety, scoring commercial scale 89 points. Malcolm Lamond, by same exhibitors, scored 85 points commercial scale. Nathan Smith & Son exhibited Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, which scored exhibition scale 93 points.

Exhibitors should make an effort to mail to the undersigned the name of the variety or varieties, legibly written, which they have sent for examination to any of the committees, in ample time so that they may be correctly spelled when reported to the horticultural press.

The announcement has already been made that Nov. 24 would be the last day that the various committees at the different centers would be on hand to examine seedlings and sports. To judge late seedlings it has been the custom for the committees to meet on following Saturdays when requested. Arrangements can be made for those having late blooms to show if a letter to that effect be addressed to any of the following chairmen in good time to give them an opportunity to get their committees together:

A. H. Fewkes (chairman of Boston committee), Newton Highlands, Mass.

E. Dailledouze (chairman New York committee), Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

A. B. Cartledge (chairman Philadelphia committee), 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

James S. Wilson (chairman Chicago committee), Western Springs, Ill.

R. Witterstaetter (chairman Cincinnati committee), Sedamsville, Ohio.

The following letter, which has been received from Monsieur A. M. Ph. Rivoire, Secretaire general, Societe Francaise des Chrysanthemistes, under date of Nov. 10, 1900, will be of interest, we believe, as follows:

SOCIETE FRANÇAISE DES CHRYSANTHEMISTES.

LYON, Nov 10, 1900

Monsieur Edion Lonsdale, Secretaire, de la Chrysanthemum Society of America, Wyndmoor, Pa., U. S. A.

I have the honor to inform you that the variety which has taken the prize of 25, which the Chrysanthemum Society of America has been good enough to offer to our society to be competed for under its auspices, is a variety called "Mademoiselle Marie Liger," exhibited by Monsieur Liger-Ligneau, horticulteur, Orleans. * * *

The award of the prize was made by the vote of the members of the floral committee, which was the committee on awards to examine novelties at the Exposition of Paris. There were other varieties competing, among them may be mentioned "Calvat's Sun" and "Sada-Yacco."

I renew in the name of our society our thanks for the generous gift from the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and beg you to receive the assurance of our best regards.

Le Secretaire General:
PH. RIVOIRE.

T. S. V. F.

P. S.—I hear, at the moment of closing this letter, from Monsieur Dubreuil, that he has received from your treasurer, Monsieur John Newman May, the amount contributed. It will be forwarded forthwith to Monsieur Liger.

I must add that the variety which has taken the prize is not so extraordinary as we could have wished, but we have chosen the best among the many varieties exhibited. It is a Japanese incurved, with tubular florets of a very pretty rose color.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday evening last for the purpose of considering immediate action regarding the holding of a flower show in New York City next year. The plan and scope committee recently appointed to work out the preliminaries had sent a sub-committee to interview the Madison Square Garden Co. on the subject and it was rather the urgency arising from this interview which called for the meeting. A meeting of the plan and scope committee was held on Monday night and a full discussion of the matter was gone through before presenting it to the club.

President O'Mara presided at the general meeting and put the case before it in his usual way and called upon those present to offer opinions and advice. The report from the committee was to the effect that the Garden people would consider the flower show from a strictly business standpoint and that the hall was available for the week commencing Oct. 21st. The impression was given that if the club would provide the premium fund and give the assurance of furnishing a good show the Garden people would assume the rent liability, of course on the understanding that they would be paid from the gate receipts; in this way the Garden company are in a position to secure themselves, but it was not clear how the club would have any protection. Mr. W. A. Manda thought that whilst the early date named would be a detriment in one way it would be an advantage in others. The early varieties of chrysanthemums could be grown and the flowers were safe and greenhouse plants, and especially orchids, Oncidiums, cypripediums and cattleyas would be in and he thought a good show could be put up at that time providing the schedule was properly arranged. He hoped proper appreciation would be shown to specimen plants and that as a parallel case the same value of premiums would not be offered for a tree fern and a vase of six chrysanthemums. Mr. Julius Roehrs preferred to hold a spring show. He said a better supply and a larger variety of flowers and plants were available at that time of the year. Mr. Eugene Dailledouze had nothing to add to what the previous speakers had said.

Messrs. Withers, Wallace, Butterfield

and May discussed the financial end and Mr. C. W. Ward moved that a committee be appointed by the chair to wait on the Madison Square Garden Company and find out from them what percentage of the gate receipts will be offered to the club providing the club supplied the premium fund and attended to the staging of the exhibits. Mr. Ward thought it necessary to have a proper understanding on that point before the club could run the risk. This motion was passed and Messrs. Sheridan, Ward, Weathered, Withers and May were appointed the committee to see what terms could be made and report at the next meeting of the club, which is to be held two weeks hence.

The Market.

The continued warm weather is a great detriment to the cut flower trade. In cut chrysanthemums, however, there was some keen competition. The silver cup for best fifty blooms was captured by Miller & Sons, of Bracondale, Ontario, Can., for their new white chrysanthemum, Timothy Eaton; these were of immense size, and created a favorable impression on all who saw them. Second prize went to A. Herrington for fifty Golden Wedding. Twenty-five blooms, twenty-five varieties, Wm. Scott first, with a grand lot; George Hale second. Twelve blooms, twelve varieties, first, A. Herrington. Six varieties, six of each, A. Herrington first; second, George Hale. John McNichol won first for six incurved, and Geo. Hale first for six reflexed. Ten red, first, J. McNichol. Ten white, first, William Scott. Ten yellow, first, Wm. Scott. Ten any color, first, Wm. Duckham. John N. May exhibited a beautiful lot of pompons and his new

It was a good show and was well attended. J. W. Withers was manager and the judges were Wm. Turner, Andrew Grierson and Albert Small.

The Horse Show.

The great National Horse show at the Madison Square Garden is an event eagerly looked forward to by society and every florist in these parts. It is quite safe to say that no other event on this continent occasions the same expenditure. Millions are spent on dresses for this affair, and thousands once upon a time were spent for flowers. As the years pass along, however, less flowers are being worn, and this must not be attributed to a lack of devotion to flowers but to the increasing elaborateness of dress. Madame or miss refuses to hide her rare lace or embroidered vest behind a mass of flowers, and then, you know,

Stock is flabby and off color and crops are all astray. Chrysanthemums are on the decline in supply, though there will be more than sufficient for the wants for some time to come. Poor stock, poor business, would describe the situation in brevity. Once in a while a little good stock comes to town and there is a raid on it, but the average supply is poor and the unusually warm weather is responsible. From present indications, many large growers tell us, the supply of good American Beauties for Christmas looks very dubious; but few buds are showing so far. There is, however, every prospect for an immense trade whether it be in plants or flowers or both and growers are putting forth every effort to be in a position to supply that demand.

Following are the prevailing prices per 100, the range being from the best down to the poorest grades: Beauties, 40, 25, 20, 15, 5; Brides and Maids, 12, 10, 8, 6, 2; Meteors, 12, 10, 8, 3, 1; Cusins and Morgans, 12, 10, 8, 4, 2; Kaiserins and Carnots, 15, 12, 8, 6, 2; Perles, 4; Liberties, 15, 8; carnations, 3 to 1; violets, 2 to 1; valley, 3 to 2; cattleyas, 5 per doz.; cypripediums, $12.50 per 100; gardenias, 3 per doz.

The Exhibition.

At the American Institute show some very fine blooms were shown, in fact, none better were seen at the shows this year. Julius Roehrs staged a choice assortment of foliage and flowering plants; Lager & Hurrell some choice orchids; Siebrecht & Sons exhibited a few specimen ferns and palms. There was very little competition in classes for plants.

mum Yanariva was in good form here.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, showed an elegant lot of carnations, among which Gov. Roosevelt and another new crimson were the stars. There was also a very good yellow seedling in the batch, and the exhibit attracted considerable attention. The Briar Cliff Greenhouses were the largest exhibitors in carnation classes; they won first on collection and several firsts and seconds in other classes. Chris Besold showed his new Admiral Cervera, a Spanish combination of color, and Goethe, a charming pink seedling. Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., exhibited several vases of their fine seedlings; a white, labeled 110, similar to Flora Hill, was favorably commented on; a pink, No. 11, very much like Genevieve Lord, was awarded a certificate of merit. Geo. M. Hall and Wm. Turner put up fine vases of carnations. The former showed Lawson in fine form and won first in the class for varieties.

J. M. Feeter won first in violets with a bunch of fifty. Nathan Smith & Sons, Adrian, Mich., exhibited some new chrysanthemums and a choice collection of cypripediums.

Wm. Turner showed a fine vase of Liberty. The first prize for twelve Beauties went to Dr. Seward Webb's gardener; second, Wm. Turner. First for Carnots to G. M. Hay, who also won first on Bridesmaids, and Geo. Hale's Morgans were well worth the first prize they won. A vase of Dailledouze Bros.' new carnation Prosperity was the center of a group of admiring gardeners; it looks as if all must have this in their collections next season.

there are the diamonds, which must get a fair chance to sparkle.

We visited the horse show to see what flowers were worn, and out of 150 ladies occupying the boxes twenty-five wore violets, fifty were chrysanthemums; there was a spattering of orchids and roses among the remainder. In the second grade seats the wearing of flowers, both violets, chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, was more general, and though the great majority of florists may not have noticed increased sales it is safe to assume that an event like the horse show is of immense benefit to the florist trade still. No sane man can expect a doubling up of prices for it, though; those times are gone when such was possible.

Various Items.

It has been a bad year so far on prices, and in consequence there has been considerable hard thinking done in the greenhouses. It cannot be helped, boys, such things will occur again, and it will be worse in years to come, for the reason that many farmers are stopping the cultivation of cabbage and corn and are going into the growing of violets, roses, etc., etc. The business has more and more become like that of the races—the best horse comes first. The track is wide. Growers hereabouts tell us it has been a difficult fall on roses; good grades of stock are scarce; Beauties, most of all, seem to be off crop at present; it is better to have them so now than when they will be more badly wanted and crops which are off now will stand a better chance to be in again for Christmas. And don't have any doubts about it, Christmas is going to be very good, especially for flowering plants and baskets of mixed plants—have your stock good. Cattleyas have suddenly become very scarce and consequently more respected; good blooms bring 50 cents. Carnations promise to be good and plentiful this season; they to a considerable extent help out the shortage on roses just now.

Every grower seems to have a new seedling. Chris Besold, of Mineola, has perhaps the most remarkable seedling carnation seen this year. The color is sublime pink and on that account—independent of technicalities—there is a great future before it. Mr. Besold has named it Goethe.

Some of the principal retail establishments made horsey displays last week. Some transformed their windows into saddlers' shops, stables and carriage houses. The Waldorf-Astoria was very prettily decorated by Small & Sons. A large quantity of wild smilax, evergreens, palms and yellow mums were used, and the work was well done.

If any one wants to see Liberty growing, or inquire about it, Wm. Turner, gardener to Wm. Rockefeller, has a house of it in full bloom. Mr. Turner has been showing some grand blooms of it at all the shows, and he informed us he has been cutting the rose by armfuls. He considers it easy to grow and a good rose.

John Condon, the Greenwood cemetery florist, held a chrysanthemum show at the Eden Musee, and for a one man's show it was very creditable. The center of the main hall was laid out with benches of pot plants, and at the sides were arranged some good blooms on boards. There were many of Mr. Keenan's seedlings on exhibition; they are called after more or less popular names. Richard Croker is a claret red with tiger-like whiskers; T. C. Platt is white, like Tom's grey beard; Paul Kruger is a bronze red, like the mouth of his cannon, we are told; David Harum, a pink anemone, is good. There were several good new chrysanthemums in Mr. Condon's exhibit, and they deserve to be watched.

It is expected that the next exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held in March next, will take place at the Waldorf-Astoria. Negotiations are in progress for same. C. W. Ward's house of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both for present use and Christmas supply, is a picture worth traveling a long way to see. The stock is grand.

Bobbink & Atkins have received and are shipping an immense stock of azaleas. We never saw a better average of quality.

Bowling.

The New York Bowling Club decided to invite the Flatbush bowlers to play an informal match on the alleys at 19 St. Mark's Place, New York City, on next Monday evening. Last Monday evening the scores were:

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business was reported good the past week from all over the city, and especially so in the West End, where they furnish the decorations for nearly all the fashionable weddings and parties. The downtown florists claim that transient trade was never better, and funeral work is plentiful. The wholesalers report that stock of all kinds is plentiful, and both local and shipping trade brisk.

Chrysanthemums are abundant, but the price on them has not been so high as it was and they have ceased to be a factor in depressing prices on other stock. Good blooms are now bought for $10 and $12.50, and from that down to $5 per 100.

Thanksgiving day prices go into effect today (Monday).

The roses coming to this market have improved in quality. Beauties have been scarce and the best brought 20 cents and from that down to 5 cents for shorts. Fred Ammann, Joe Heinl and Geo. Kellogg are sending in the best, and as the demand is good they bring top prices. Brides and maids are good, some of them extra fancy. Kaiserins and Meteors sell well and Perles and Carnots have a good call, selling from $2 to $6 per 100.

Carnations are unsurpassed in quality just now, and all the new fancy varieties sell out clean at $2 and $3; other varieties, such as Scott, Daybreak, Flora Hill and Portia, bring $1 and $1.50. The latter are quite plentiful just now, but by the end of this week the market will find them scarce, as Thanksgiving Day will use many thousands of all kinds.

Violets are extremely scarce, and the few warm days the past week did them no good, and this week, when plenty of them could be sold, few will come in; 50 cents is asked for the best California's and 25 cents for singles; no doubles to be had.

Romans and paper white narcissus are in the market in good shape and are plentiful from the jump. Romans sell at $3 and $4; paper whites, $4; stevia, $1 per 100. Smilax sells at $12.50, with plenty of it in the market, and the demand good.

Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held here on Thursday, Dec. 13, at 3 o'clock, and will be an important one. A report will be made by the exhibition committee on the last show, and Messrs. Ude, Halstedt and Ude, Jr., will read their essays. President Guy expects every member of the club to be present. The meeting will be called promptly at 3, as it will be quite lengthy.

Martin Reukauf is in town, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., selling holiday novelties.

Otto Fehrlin, late of Galveston, Texas, has located in St. Louis, having bought out the Vale of Cashmere Company's place in Grand avenue. Mr. Fehrlin reports that he is doing quite well, and we hope he will continue so.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers reports business good. The opening of the Castle Square Opera Company at Music Hall kept her busy the past week.

John M. Hudson is out and around again looking better than for a long time. John is talking of opening a store downtown during the holidays.

Chas. Connon, Sr., of Webster Grove, is reported very sick. Mr. Connon is still abed, but much improved at this writing.

Charlie Kuehn and J. J. Beneke are now members of the Marquette Bowling club, which is a member of the city league. They are still members of the Florists' club, and bowl every Monday night. The Marquettes are third in the race of the clubs. Arthur Ellison and Billy Adels are members of the Court House team of the same league.

Ellison & Tesson will close their uptown store some time next month and will do their business at 625 Olive street, which is their downtown branch.

Frank Ellis, Chas. Kuehn and Henry Berning, our wholesale men, are making great preparations for supplying the trade during the holidays. Now that we have three houses the trade will not have to suffer for the want of good stock and plenty of it. All report good orders ahead for Thanksgiving Day.

Bowling.

The bowling club was well attended Monday night and great interest was taken by the younger members. Frank Ellis joined the club and will roll every Monday night. Martin Reukauf of Philadelphia was a visitor and rolled with us. The scores were as follows:

A WESTERN PLANT.

Few who have met the genial Mr. J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, understand that while he is one of the largest growers of cut flowers in the country this is only a department of his business. In addition to his great range of glass devoted to cut flowers he grows plants and vegetables on a very large scale and also has an extensive fruit farm

We present herewith a group of views showing the different departments of his diversified business. He has a total of 500,000 feet of glass and in the cut flower department alone 5,000 tons of coal are used annually.

Besides his large trade in Council Bluffs and Omaha he ships his cut flowers and vegetables into every western state and to many of the larger eastern cities. He sends thousands of packages annually to Denver, Salt Lake City, Portland, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, in fact, all the principal cities of the west and middle west. His store is located at 521 Broadway, where he supplies the local demand for flowers and plants of every description. A department of Mr. Wilcox's business that has immensely grown in importance during the last few years in his horseradish factory. Thirty acres of ground is devoted exclusively to raising horseradish, which is grated by steam and specially prepared and bottled for him. This product, also, is shipped all over the country.

As a grower of cut flowers Mr. Wilcox has acquired an enviable reputation. The roses and carnations he sent to one of the Chicago club's displays one winter created quite a stir, especially his Beauties.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The fourteenth annual fall exhibition of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was formally opened on Nov. 6 and lasted three days. Days of rare treat to flower lovers, but making scant returns to the treasury. Why will the general public flock to an entertainment which bills some buffoonery or coarse horse play as part of the show when they will not go to the slight trouble and expense of seeing the truly named "Queen of the Autumn" at an exhibition?

People say that choice flowers can be seen at no expense in the greenhouses. True, but there each plant cannot be placed to show all its beauty and fine points, and seldom do you see a label with the variety name thereon. That is something that flower lovers look for—how much pleasanter it is to know these sweet acquaintances by their given names, how much more individuality they have.

Perhaps the most popular exhibit in the hall was a number of that splendid new rose, Queen of Edgely, sent by the distributors. Their fine foliage, extra long stems and surpassingly beautiful tint, made them striking, even in all that wealth of gay coloring.

There were a large number of very fine bush mums which showed a high degree of skill in growing, notably those exhibited by Thomas Dryden, of Hartford. His Viviand-Morel, C. W. Ward, Miss Georgiana Pitcher, Mlle. Lucie Faure, Belle of Castlewood, and Mrs. H. Weeks were among the best. In the cut blooms Modesto, Mrs. H. Weeks, Solar Queen, Mrs. Trainor L. Park, Autumn Glory, Wm. H. Chadwick, Marion Cleveland, Mayflower, Philadelphia, Black Hawk, Viviand-Morel, Pennsylvania, Frank Hardy, Golden Wedding, Minerva, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Queen were especially prominent for size and beauty. The largest bloom was an enormous Wm. H. Chadwick, about the finest mum ever shown in Hartford. Second prize was for Viviand-Morel.

The geranium exhibit was fine and was quite popular, too, Ian MacLaren and Mme. Malin being about the handsomest and best grown. Carnations, violets, roses, hot house grapes and other good things made up the show and came in for their share of attention.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The reports on Thanksgiving trade by the various wholesalers are somewhat at variance, some noting a decrease and others an increase as compared with last year. On the average the trade was probably somewhat less than that of last year in money value, for while a large amount of stock was handled the average price was lower, and this no doubt brought down the receipts in dollars.

High grade stock, especially in roses, was hard to get and prices ruled above printed quotations, but there was a decided surplus of lower grade stock, and this was moved at low figures. In carnations there was a shortage in colored sorts, but there was plenty of white. Chrysanthemums, especially yellow, moved slowly, and an enormous number had been sent in. An abundance of poor violets and but few good ones.

The bulk of the demand up to Tuesday was from outside points, and there was little indication of the local trade awakening at the last moment.

Certain it is that prices averaged some little lower than last year, though it cannot be told with certainty yet whether the cash receipts in the aggregate will even up or not.

The local retailers will not be able to make a definite report until Friday or Saturday. But few advance orders had been placed by customers.

Various Items.

Kennicott Bros. Company's new catalogue of cut flowers and florists' supplies is a beauty. The three red roses in color on the cover are very striking and handsome, and the half-tone illustrations of wire designs are certainly novel and effective. An excellent feature is the series of illustrations showing how many of the wire designs look when filled. There is quite a long list of supplies, and this and the fine engravings make it a book that every florist will want to keep.

Bassett & Washburn did a heavy shipping trade for Thanksgiving. They had a big supply of fancy carnations, of which 4,000 sold readily at the fancy rate of $5 a hundred. Their place on Tuesday was a whole carnation show in itself.

Architect Richard E. Schmidt has made plans for a one-story and basement conservatory, with a dome forty feet high, of brick, stone, iron and glass, which Montgomery Ward is about to build for John Mangel, the florist, in Lake avenue, south of Forty-seventh street, on a lot 90x130 feet. A lease of the holding for twenty years has been agreed upon.

Mr. M. F. Kyle, of Kalamazoo, Mich., was in the city visiting old friends last week.

Bouquet green is scarcer than ever. It is reported that there is two feet of snow in one district that has heretofore sent a good supply to this market.

Roses will be the subject at the first meeting of the Florists' club in December.

The date for the next games to be bowled by the florists in the Anson league is Dec. 12.

A notice has appeared in the daily papers of the incorporation of the "Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago." The capital stock is given as $5,000 and the incorporators as S. L. Adams, R. S. Ludington and D. M. Moore. We are assured that the action was not taken by the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, and as the incorporators are not known in the trade the probability is that they are attorneys acting for some one whose name does not appear. The duplication of names will surely cause confusion and is to be deprecated.

BUFFALO.

Another foot of wet snow yesterday, a regular suicidal day, but this Tuesday morning the sun is shining brightly and all troubles are forgotten. But we never will forget the wet November of 1900. In spite of clouds there seems to be a good supply of flowers, except violets, which are in very short supply. Choice flowers went up to $4 per 100. We don't mind a short crop now if we can have plenty for the holidays.

Mr. Guenther, of Hamburg, this county, is now sending in grand blooms of several varieties of chrysanthemums, the best of which is Golden Wedding. What a pity that more cannot grow this fine sort, for it is the king of them all when well done. It has the size and form and grace and color that none other possesses.

You hear every day or two from one or other of the Main street florists that business has been "first-class." When this is admitted you can conclude that it is generally good and no doubt it is quite an improvement over last year.

There came very near being a $1,400 florist's locomobile delivery wagon in the streets for Christmas, but the deal fell through and "S. A. A." says "we'll bide a wee."

There is a new establishment in town. Mr. Foss, who has been working in the greenhouses of the Pan-American, has built two very substantial houses very near the corner of Main and Amherst. This is right in the heart of what is known as the Central Park district, which contains hundreds of our finest homes.

Mr. John Battolph, who by profession is an expert draughtsman, but always showed great taste for gardening, has built a 75x20 house and will run it semi-professionally. I expect to see an addition next summer and then John will blossom out as a full-fledged florist.

You will remember that about a year ago the trade here took a bold stand and all agreed that no more flowers or plants should be donated for any purpose whatsoever. We cut it out short. We had to. To send a dozen palms on certain occasions and donate a few flowers for charity's sake was a pleasure, but it grew simply unbearable. We were appealed to four or five times a day and all felt a great relief when the agreement was reached. Being published in the papers it worked charmingly. Hardly a single request has been made and you can depend on it, reader, that you will offend no one by such action whose trade is worth much. The beggars are those who would spend very little money for flowers for any occasion.

We have sailed along in peace for months, almost forgetting that we were ever pestered with beggars, till two weeks ago we ran against a snag. A number of our leading society ladies got up a ball, the proceeds to go to the fund for support of the district nurses, a splendid organization that does great good among the poor and needy. We will have everything donated, my dears. We won't have any expense, so that we must make money. Mr. Jones will pay for the ice cream, Mr. Robinson will pay for the music, Mr. White, I know, will pay for refreshments, in fact I feel sure that we can get everything, and we will get the florists to decorate our hall. Won't that be just lovely; let's telephone to the florists at once to meet us tomorrow morning." We met and the five Main street florists offered to decorate the hall at cost, each one sending a man to do the work. The ladies felt a little hurt at our refusal to donate the whole job, but we made no bad friends. Seeing that we were all united and meant to adhere to our agreement, I think they rather admired the stand we took and they very sensibly made up their minds that some flags and ribbons would do just as well for the occasion.

Now, you see, the man that played the fiddle got his pay and the man who made the cakes and ice cream, etc., got his, but a wealthy man paid for it, and as no wealthy man offered to pay for the floral decorations they went without any. This is the first serious snag that we have run against and the snag had to give away, and as our agreement was not wrecked in this encounter we expect to go sailing along serenely. Take notice many of you Buffalo florists who were not approached about this job that those who were stuck to each other and to our agreement.

PHILADELPHIA.

The business conditions during the past two weeks have been very encouraging. The supply of nearly all kinds of cut flowers has been sold at fair prices with little waste, possibly excepting in the poorest grade. From the 12th to 17th days of the month or during the first of these two weeks the demand for some varieties of choice flowers exceeded the supply. This applies particularly to good violets on Saturday, the 17th. On that day Yale was playing football at Princeton and Pennsylvania was also playing at Franklin Field against the Indians. This made a great demand for violets, blue being Yale's color and also Pennsylvania's when combined with red. The violet growers were hardly in a position to take full advantage of the opportunity, for the weather, which had been warm and bright, became dark and cool a day or two before the football contest took place.

Last Saturday saw another tremendous demand, this time pink carnations being favored. The occasion was the Union League's dinner to the president and his cabinet. This dinner is said to have been the finest, from a florist's standpoint, that has ever been given in Philadelphia. It was Founder's Day at the League and that great club had among its guests every member of the administration, excepting the Secretary of War, who is in Cuba. For this gathering of celebrated men, unique in any city outside of Washington, the whole club house was elaborately decorated. The daily press praise the beautiful effects produced, especially in the banquet hall, and to give some idea of the quantity of the stock that was used, offer the following figures: 12,000 pink carnations, President McKinley's favorite flower, lavishly used on the dinner tables; 550 orchids, chiefly cattleyas; 500 lilies of the valley; 300 yellow chrysanthemums; 200 pink and white chrysanthemums; 500 red roses; 200 white lilacs; 2,000 palms(!); 6,000 yards smilax (presumably wild smilax from the south). Truly a vast collection.

Prices are about as follows: Beauties, the best, $3 to $4 a dozen; Brides and Maids, firsts, only $4 to $6 a 100 (these brought $8 to $10 in the scarcity one week ago); Kaiserins, $6 to $8; carnations, common, $1 to $1.50; fancies, $2 and upwards; violets, single, 50 cents a 100; doubles, not much more; valley, $4; chrysanthemums, good blooms, $1 to $2 a dozen; fancies, a few bring $3.

Good chrysanthemum blooms have sold well this season. The supply has rarely exceeded the demand; it might almost be said that it has rarely equaled the demand. It is safe to say that all well grown flowers have paid the growers, though the margin of profit has in most cases been small when all expenses are counted.

Referring again to the show, I wish to add that the pretty flowering begonia exhibited by H. A. Dreer is named Begonia erecta compacta and that the new rose, cross between Belle Siebrecht and Merveille de Lyon, from Robt. Scott & Son, is named Robert Scott.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Items.

In this latitude we are having phenomenal weather, that of last week resembling June, with the brightest blue skies and southerly winds, and last night (Nov. 25) a thunderstorm of considerable violence. One or two days the mercury ranged from 75 to 78 degrees, but today we have leaden clouds and gloomy outlook, lower temperature and occasional showers. These conditions have not been entirely favorable to business, but the dealers say that for the season trade is fairly encouraging, and good stuff is in steady demand. Unfortunately, the warm weather has provoked a soft growth in the plant houses and taken the vigor and brightness out of the blooms, so that really first-class flowers have been exceedingly hard to secure.

Numerous weddings have tended to increase the demand for flowers. Two notable ones of the past week were the Taylor-Gary and the Cooper-Jenkins nuptials. The former event made a great stir in the social world, the bride being a daughter of Mr. James A. Gary, former postmaster general, and the unusual distinction being accorded the ceremony of the attendance of President McKinley and a number of the members of his cabinet. The decorations were furnished by William J. Halliday and are described as tasteful and striking. A delicate and appropriate compliment was paid to the guest of honor, the chief magistrate of the nation, in the selection of his favorite flower, the pink carnation, as the conspicuous feature of the wedding adornments, and it was used lavishly and effectively. Great banks were placed on the mantels, and the table occupied by the bridal and the presidential party was decorated with gorgeous bouquets tied with pink satin ribbon. Through the rooms and halls graceful groups of palms and other foliage plants were arranged with fine skill, and the employment of smilax, ferns and asparagus was profuse and effective.

Another noteworthy decoration was at the Cooper-Jenkins wedding, which was gorgeous in the abundance and beauty of the flowers and vines, the artistic services of S. Feast & Sons being here availed of. One room was adorned with Harrisii lilies, another with American Beauty roses, a third with pink chrysanthemums and still another with carnations. The table was beautiful in a mass of Harrisii lilies, white hyacinths and lilies of the valley. There were portieres of smilax, covered with white and pink roses. Both of these decorations are described as being amongst the most beautiful seen in this city of late years.

The windows of the Charles street florists were unusually handsomely dressed today. It would seem that the mum season is about passing, and that with one consent the decorators gave change of material and new touches to their windows. John Cook displayed fine ferns and orchids; Halliday Brothers, carnations and roses; S. Feast & Sons, roses, and William J. Halliday eclipsed all by a splendid display of the new pink Queen of Edgely, which he placed on exhibition and sale for the first time in this city, the lovely new candidate for popular favor being offered in large numbers and fine condition. In another window were handsome Beauties and some wonderfully well-done La France.

A recent visit to Patterson Park disclosed the fact that the old conservatory there, which had been condemned by a former park board to destruction, has been, under the economic present regime, patched up, painted and puttied, and made to do longer service. The plants are as effectively arranged as their character and condition will allow, and present many attractions to the visitors at this popular public pleasure ground.

New structures are being erected here looking to the production, following the policy of the park management, of supplies of bedding stuff for the various squares, a number of which have been erected under the management of the superintendent of Patterson Park, Mr. Charles Seibold, who is a man of decided skill as a gardener and with ideas entirely out of the everyday ruts, which follow only routine and precedent. He has introduced already some improvements which are real and telling and has others behind. One of his schemes, which has official sanction, is the establishment within the park enclosure of a model nursery, where the various operations will be open to public view and where the plants grown for park uses will be plainly labeled, to the edification of all seeking information in this line.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Various Items.

During the past two weeks trade has been anything but satisfactory. A very large oversupply of mums, coupled with a rather light demand, caused a glut in the market.

Roses and carnations have not been in oversupply in first quality stock, but the medium and poorer grades had to suffer with the mums. But mums are rapidly decreasing in quantity and the growers are hoping for better prices all around. There will be some mums for Thanksgiving trade, but that will likely end most of the growers' stock except some late varieties.

These midseason gluts are very apt to set one to thinking and it becomes more apparent every season that nothing but the highest grade stock pays in midseason and even such stock sometimes has to go below cost of production. Some fancy blooms were sold as low as 5c, which is less than they can be grown for. The retailers have also been complaining of a light demand, but the weather has been entirely too warm for good business in their line. For many years there has not been so little cold weather by this date. The past three days have been rainy, which makes it still worse. A good cold snap and bright weather would improve matters wonderfully, and no doubt it will come sooner or later and in good force, too.

The main topic among the florists at present is "Can we hold a big mum show next year?" The one we had on Nov. 14 was a grand success in its way. The quality of the stock exhibited was very good, but the premiums were small and those who won them hardly received a fair market value for their product. This show was free to the public, and all the premiums were paid either out of the society treasury or else donated by members of the society, so the expenses were light and no one had to worry about a possible deficit. It was held in the horticultural rooms at the state house, of which we have free use.

But some of the members want to hold another big show in Tomlinson hall, and are studying up all kinds of schemes to make it a success. There is a rumor of the Commercial club lending its aid, which would be a sure guarantee of its success. In that case it would be made a society event, and that is what the florists have been unable to do. We sincerely hope that it will be pushed to a successful conclusion.

In making the rounds of the growers we find them all in fair shape for the coming season. Some are a trifle late with their carnations and will have to push them along if they want a good holiday crop. At one place I saw a batch of poinsettias that were a fair illustration of how they should not be grown. They were in five-inch pots and plunged in about five inches of soil, and they looked as though they were starving for a little manure water. They each had from three to five shoots, and each pot had one wire stake to which the shoots were tied so closely that one could

MILWAUKEE.

Stock for Thanksgiving was well ordered up, especially in roses, and good shipping roses were exceedingly short of demand. In carnations all colored stock found ready market, but some white went begging. All mums fit to cut were crowded on the market and prices averaged up pretty well, due probably to the shortage in roses. Violets were badly off crop and prices almost went beyond reach of buyers. American Beauties were unusually scarce for this season of the year. Stevia and paper whites were equal to the demand.

The Florists' Club bowlers turned out in full force Monday night. Several turkeys were hung up for prizes and C. C. Pollworth, Wm. Zimmerman and Nic Zweifel will enjoy free turkey on Thanksgiving Day at the expense of the club.

COLORING FLOWERS.

A subscriber sends us a clipping which he says was cut from a Sunday school paper in which some remarkable misinformation is given, of which the following is a sample:

Suppose you had a white carnation and some one would say he could make the plant bear blue and green flowers. Suppose he would tell you he could make the pale yellow daffodil, scarlet, and the spotless lilies-of-the-valley pink, what would you say? Yet florists have learned that by putting certain dyes in the water with which they nourish their plants, the color of the flower can be entirely changed.

The writer goes on to say that many flowers can be "artificially colored by this process." That is probably where the paragrapher got mixed. He read something about the artificial coloring of natural flowers by absorbing aniline dyes when placed in them after being cut, and elaborated the rest out of his own mind.

A number of artificially colored carnations once sent the writer were a remarkable aggregation. Rings of several different colors appeared in each flower. It was, of course, accomplished by the absorption through the stem of various dyes, but the process has no commercial value and the flowers sent were merely curiosities.

MASON CITY, IA.—Krieger & Klemm have remodeled their greenhouses and added a palm house, giving them a total of 5,000 feet of glass.

WEST MOORESTOWN, N. J.—G. G. Papsch, formerly with LaRoche, at Collingsdale, Pa., has established himself in business on his own account here.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Chas. L. Dole bought a Lehman wagon heater last season and reports that it works to perfection, is very economical and satisfactory in every way.

BANGOR, ME.—Carl Beers, the florist, has invented an appliance for reducing the cost of fuel. An aluminum fan is made to revolve in the tail chimney in such a way as to force the draught and make it possible to use coal dust as fuel. He has also applied for a patent on what he calls "Coaline," formed of coal dust and other ingredients pressed into cakes.

HUNDREDS of Florists are using our Pulverizers. You can regulate it.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnations Registered.

Lorna—Pure white. A great improvement on White Cloud in the following: Longer and stronger stems, larger and better formed flowers, earlier bloomer, and a much more satisfactory growth. The habit is all that can be desired. By F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind.

Midnight Sun—A bright crimson, much brighter and livelier in color than Maceo; also much larger in size; stems long and strong. A free and early bloomer with good habit and a good, strong calyx.

Lancaster Pink—A good, rich color, very large flower, with good calyx and long, strong stems. An early and continuously free bloomer. In growth strong and healthy. By Elmer J. Weaver, Bird-in-Hand, Pa.

Special Notice.

Any carnation enthusiast who wishes to award any special premiums at the exhibition to be held in Baltimore, Md., Feb. 21st and 22d, should forward full information of the same at once to the secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., so as to get them into the premium list, which goes to press early in December.

In connection with the exhibition there will be held a general lecture on carnation diseases by Prof. Wood, of Washington, D. C., and a general discussion on the subject of stem rot. Also a paper on Hybridization, by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., and other subjects of importance to carnation growers.

All who are interested in carnations should attend the meeting, and questions of interest for the question box can be sent to the secretary at once so that suitable answers can be secured.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

A prominent feature of the chrysanthemum season has been the really fine display made at the new city greenhouses at Walbridge Park. Upward of sixty varieties were shown, and as no pains have been spared in their development the collection would be hard to surpass. The park commissioners have made special efforts to popularize the exhibition, and in addition to frequent public days have had the greenhouses open on certain evenings, lighted up by electricity, with a band in attendance, thus giving promenade concerts, which proved very attractive. No flowers are sold, but many have been sent to public institutions, such as the library, hospitals, etc. So, as Superintendent Ziems remarked in speaking of the matter, they do not come into competition with the florists, but rather help them by educating the public taste.

Most of our local florists have put up an unusually good show of chrysanthemums this season, and with a fairly steady demand all desirable stock will be pretty well cleared out by the close of Thanksgiving week.

Mr. Chas. R. Rode, who has been engaged with a leading local florist for several years, has embarked in business for himself in a good location out Adams street, where he will make a specialty of cut flowers, designs, etc. Mr. Rode is an energetic young man, and his experience and wide acquaintance betoken his success. THE Cape Jasmine is being urged for adoption as the state flower of Mississippi.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO. — Smith's greenhouses, in Ivy Wild, a suburb, were blown down and burned during the storm Nov. 21. The wind reached a velocity of eighty-five miles an hour. Many buildings were injured, but there was no loss of life.

OMAHA, NEB.—Fire did some little damage in the seed store of S. B. Stewart Nov. 20. Loss not serious and covered by insurance.

PENN YAN, N. Y.—The chrysanthemum show was very successful. Among the out-of-town exhibits were the following: Chryaanthemums from the private greenhouse of Mrs. W. S. Kimball of Rochester; a large exhibit of the prize flowers that received the first prize at the exhibit recently held in New York City; and exhibited by John Roody, gardener for John Sloat Fassett, of Elmira; Salter Brothers, Rochester; Miller & Sons, Honeoidale, Canada; Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.; Hoffman, Elmira; Rawson, Elmira; E. A. Higgins, Avoca and Cass Brothers, Geneva.

FIVE REASONS Why You Should Place Your Orders for..... AZALEAS

With Us At Once.

BECAUSE You can still take advantage of the mild weather, and have the plants come through safely by freight.

BECAUSE We are the largest buyers of Azaleas in the world, and make personal inspection of the stocks before they are shipped to us, and buy for spot cash, which enables us to secure the lowest prices, and you the benefit in quality of the plants.

BECAUSE Our importations are all repacked at our own nursery. Plants that have suffered in transit, and which are not well set with buds being discarded, you receive nothing but first-class stock, which is certain to give satisfaction.

BECAUSE We can give you any special assortment of varieties that you may wish. This is a great advantage over the usual assorted case lots, sent over from Belgium, which invariably contain many varieties not at all suited to the American market.

BECAUSE We wish to convince you as we have convinced many of the leading florists of the United States, that you can buy Azaleas from us to better advantage than if you make your own importations.

DETROIT.

On Nov. 19 thirty-five members of the Detroit Florists' club went to Mount Clemens to pay their annual visit to the florists of the "Bath City." The large establishment of Breitmeyer & Sons was first on the list, and the unanimous opinion of the visitors was that the condition of everything was far superior than at any previous visit, the chrysanthemums being especially fine. Some of Smith's new ones were in splendid form, notably Arline.

Robert Klagge's was the next stop, where the finest house of Daybreak carnations that it has ever been the writer's privilege to see was found. Violets grown in bottomless pots were also fine, but Mr. Klagge would not as yet say whether the growing in such pots was any advantage.

James Taylor's and John E. Carey's plants were also found in the usual good condition. Each of these growers has added more glass this season, Mr. Carey having built a house for Beauty, but could not complete it in time to plant this year. After a wind-up at the bowling alleys the party came home, all well pleased with the outing.

The club has arranged a program for all its meetings until June, and President Rackham has partially arranged with Prof. L. R. Taft, of the Agricultural college, to give a lecture to the club in March. Several applications for membership are to be balloted on at the next meeting, so we are in a prosperous condition, so much so that we think we would like to have the Carnation Society come here in 1902.

Oh, this summer weather—60 degrees out of doors at 9 p. m., Nov. 20, and the florists are expected to pay their bills.

RAG.

HAZELHURST, MISS.—The fourth annual chrysanthemum show was held Nov. 14 and 15. The exhibitors were all amateurs.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS.—The sixth annual chrysanthemum show of the Crystal Springs Floral Club was held Nov. 15. The exhibitors were nearly all ladies, and it is said that the blooms were often superior to those sent by out-of-town florists for display.

HOUGHTON, MICH.—Miss Grace Cavan has opened a floral department in B. T. Barry's drug store.

AUSTIN, MINN.—The eight annual meeting of the Southern Minnesota Horticultural Society was held here Nov. 20, 21 and 22. There was a very interesting program of papers and discussions.

JANESVILLE, WIS.—Messrs. Long & Hudson, the florists, gave a chrysanthemum show at their greenhouses Nov. 20, 21 and 22, that was admired by a host of visitors and was warmly praised by the local press.

INDEPENDENCE, IA.—The Hospital for Insane has just completed a new house, 16x100, for bedding plants and flowers for the hospital. John Eland is gardener.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—A snowstorm recently did serious damage to the greenhouses of W. R. Skeels, the loss being estimated at nearly $2,000. Green & Underhill had a small loss in broken glass from the same storm.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — The Minnesota State Horticultural society will hold its thirty-third annual meeting Dec. 4, 5, 6 and 7, at Plymouth Church. The Minnesota Forestry Association, the Minnesota Beekeepers' Association and the Women's auxiliary will meet in the same building on the same days.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

WITTBOLD'S FALL LIST.

The following quotations offer exceptionally good value. There is nothing quoted which we cannot recommend and ship at once, safely by freight, before cold weather. Our stock is larger than ever and particularly clean, healthy and vigorous; we offer it on its merits.

When in need of larger plants than quoted ask for special prices on a lot of excellent specimens of various species which we have on hand.

THE MOST MONEY.

To get the most money out of your business you must produce the best stock at the lowest possible expense. Are you sure there is no waste in your business? Are you sure every one of your methods is the cheapest as well as the most effective?

The best stock isn't always the most costly to produce. It's more often in doing the right thing at the right time. And that's what The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, keeps you posted on. It is a $10 book for $5, and the best investment you can possibly make, no matter how large or how small your business.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The society registers new rose, President McKinley. Saved from a promiscuous lot of seedlings, raised from seed saved from our collection of H. P. roses. It is a strong growing variety, having large, attractive, fine foliage. It makes strong shoots which are quite spiny and is entirely hardy. Its color is deep rose-pink and is quite persistent. Entered by John Charlton & Sons, Rochester, N. Y. LEONARD BARRON, Sec'y A. R. S.

ROANOKE, VA.—The Virginia State Hort. Society held a successful meeting here last week with about 100 delegates present.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The fourth annual Texas Fruit, Flower and Vegetable Festival will be held here Dec. 10 to 15.

HELP your employes to help themselves by placing our Florists' Manual within their reach.

WE WISH to call your attention to the value in our Florists' Manual as recognized by many readers. See their letters that have appeared from time to time in the Review.

SNOWHEGAN, ME.—H. G. Danforth, of Norridgewock, has purchased ground on Madison Ave. and will erect greenhouses.

FREMONT, NEB.—A chrysanthemum show was given Nov. 16 and 17 for the benefit of the W. C. T. U., the plants and flowers being supplied by C. H. Green.

ENNIS, TEX.—At the recent chrysanthemum show the leading prize winners were Mrs. J. W. Neal, Mrs. T. D. Turner, Charles Hall, Mrs. A. L. Westbrook, Mrs. H. P. Barclay, Mrs. A. H. Oliver, Mrs. Tony Crowel, Mrs. B. F. Sargent.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—R. M. Pierson has been awarded a contract for a greenhouse at the corner of Ridge avenue and Crease lane for H. C. Schmidt. It will measure 90 by 21 feet, being brick, frame and galvanized iron, and will cost $4,000.

CARLISLE, PA.—A very successful chrysanthemum show was given here Nov. 13 to 15 under the auspices of the Civic Club. The principal exhibitors were Jesse Robbins and J. Dewalt, among the florists, and Geo. Surgest and W. S. George among the private gardeners.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.
GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.
H. WEBER & SONS.
Oakland, Md.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.
JOHN THORPE.
Chicago.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same.
M. S. WORDEN.
North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you are looking at the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the leaves to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.
GEO. S. OSBORN.
Hartford, Conn.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.
BOBBINK & ATKINS.
Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.
M. NAUMAN.
Etna, Pa.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.
N. ZWEIFEL.
Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.
BENJAMIN HAMMOND.
Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.
C. C. POLLWORTH CO.
Milwaukee, Wis.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.
JOHN WELSH YOUNG.
Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.
B. BUEHLER & SON.
Columbus, O.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point.
W. A. KENNEDY.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.
F. E. BONHAM.
Macomb, Ill.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.
L. H. BAILEY.
Ithaca, N. Y.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.
JOS. KIFT & SON.
Philadelphia.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and price is highly.
TRUETT BROS.
Franklin, Tenn.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
A. J. BAUR.
Madison, N. J.

If everyone has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what some wants.
H. D. DARLINGTON.
Flushing, N. Y.

I am more than pleased with the Florists' Manual.
OTT BROWN
Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.
JAS. HARTSHORNE
Joliet, Ill.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive era of the florists' business.
J. T. TEMPLE.
Davenport, Ia.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."
After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.
The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,
COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.
H. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Supt.
Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Publishers, Florists' Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.

From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial plant culture in America, to some portions of it rather, have been placed on the market, but the teachings which they convey have, as the years rolled by, become to a greater or less extent obsolete, owing to the continued mutability in methods, etc., so that the Manual containing, as it does, matter which is strictly up to date, and thoroughly practical, should meet with a really acceptance among all engaged in the industry upon which it treats. The caliber of Mr. Scott's instructions, as might be taken for granted, is too well known to the trade to require any elaboration at our hands, suffice it to say that the same soundness of doctrine, and truthful handling of every subject dealt with, generally characterizes the text of the book now before us. Nearly all individual plants are discussed, and, as regards plants, largely those of commercial value, the staples of the trade receiving greatest attention.—Florists' Exchange.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among the florists and others commercially connected, although amateurs and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "From selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a consideration which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Begonias.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine has been tried sufficiently to prove that it drops its flowers when removed to a living room, where 90 percent of all our plants go. This won't stop its sale at Christmas time, for it will last as long as a bunch of flowers and is so beautiful, but I will say once more that we can help it some by giving it an airy, light house for a couple of weeks before the time of sale.

Don't forget along about now or even later to sow some seed of Begonia Vernon. It is a most useful plant and makes a fine bedding as well as a vase or veranda box plant. The double form of this begonia is no acquisition. All flowers are not enhanced by being doubled (so called) and this is one.

Fern Dishes.

The fern dish business keeps up well. Some can keep them looking respectable for several months, but many are satisfied to have them filled every three or four weeks. The Maiden Hair (Adiantum cuneatum) is one of the shortest lived of all, but there is another adiantum that is extra good for the purpose. It is Adiantum O'Brianii. For a long time I was afriad of its name, thinking it might be merely a local name, but I find the best authorities in the country know it as O'Brianii. It is of the Capillus-veneris type but much freer and handsomer. It spreads quickly with rhizomes.

It is excellent for fern dishes and still better when planted in a 6 or 7-inch pan. We filled a number of these in August and they are now most attractive, far handsomer for a table than a dish filled with a dozen different species, and much more lasting. It is a real good thing and besides its hardy, easy to grow qualities it is well worth planting out to cut from as you do cuneatum. From a few plants you can quickly work up a large stock.

Hydrangeas.

Now that chrysanthemums are about gone you will have plenty of room for your Easter stuff, among which are hydrangeas. Start them very slowly. If they were grown in pots all summer, as they should be, they may want a shift. Do that directly you put them on the bench.

There is a growing taste for large hydrangeas in tubs for lawn decoration, but to have these satisfactory they cannot be kept in a greenhouse, even if down to 40 degrees. They will make a start in the spring and then suffer when you put them out. A light, cool cellar or roothouse is the only place for them and they will stand it to be very dry if cool.

What to do with sweet bays, oleanders and large hydrangeas is beginning to be a question that is disturbing us. The greenhouse is not the place for them, even if you could charge what it is worth per foot for the space they occupy. A large, roomy house or shed, mostly wood, with a few skylights in it, will have to be a feature with many of us who sell these plants to our customers. Sufficient heat to just keep the frost out would do for this store house.

Geraniums.

This past month and December are unfavorable for geraniums of the zonal type. You don't want them to grow and a very little fire heat makes it too warm and there is little sun to encourage you to give air, but you should on all occasions, when possible, and in the dark months, with a low temperature, geraniums, also pelargoniums, want to be decidedly on the dry side. No harm in their being almost dormant for a month or two. They quickly make up for it when spring comes. Of course I am alluding to the small fall struck plants, which are not wanted till bedding time. Zonal geraniums are not much grown by the commercial florist for winter blooming but they make the conservatory very gay. To flower well they want the lightest house and a temperature of at least 55 degrees at night.

Show Pelargoniums.

We have given up growing the show pelargoniums, simply because they do not sell well. The people prefer the zonal geraniums, which are much more satisfactory in every way. To those who are growing them for a spring plant I would say that from now till the first of February the pelargoniums want very little water. Unless you want them early they will do in a cool house and should be kept quite on the dry side. This gives them a stout, hardy growth and they will make all the better plants when growth begins in the spring. Those you force for Easter (although it hardly pays) must have the fullest light and will do in a night temperature of 50 degrees. One of the worst qualities of the pelargonium is its need of continuous smoking to keep down greenfly, but to have them healthy it must be done.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

The season has once more passed and we can again sum up our gains and losses, financially and in experience, for the past year. Of the introductions of 1900 Col. D. Appleton seems to have given the most satisfaction. It is indeed a grand yellow. I would not go so far as some have and say it beats Golden Wedding, but I will say that it is a worthy companion for it. The two varieties are of different types and Appleton comes in before Wedding, so I think there is ample room for both. Gold Mine was not so good but perhaps it will make a better showing next year.

White Bonnaffon, while of lovely form, seems pretty small. Sonci was distinctly disappointing. It was described as similar to Modesto in form, but all the flowers I saw were tightly incurved and not at all of the loose, graceful form that made Modesto popular. Molatsch, as an early yellow, cannot in our humble opinion come near either Sunderbruch or Soleil d'Octobre.

The best commercial varieties at the present time in our opinion are given below in their order of flowering.

White: Robinson, Mrs. J. Lewis, Merza, Jerome Jones, Chadwick.

Yellow: Sunderbruch, T. L. Park, Appleton, Bonnaffon, Wedding.

Pink: Glory of the Pacific, Morel, Maud Dean.

These are all good tested varieties and seem to do well throughout the country generally. There are of course very many others which different growers can handle with greater or less success.

There are several newer varieties that stand out prominently as exhibition sorts, like the following: Mme. Carnot, and its yellow sport, G. J. Warren. These are now well known and are splendid varieties. Peter Kay or Jeannie Falconer is a very fine pale yellow. Kate Broomhead showed up well; this is golden brown in color. Timothy Eaton, as everybody knows, has swept the country as an exhibition white. Mme. Deis is also a fine exhibition white. Perhaps a little slender in stem but quite strong enough to hold itself upright. A new variety that will undoubtedly be shown fine next year is Mrs. Barkley. It is a lovely shade of pink and a fine grower. Nellie Peckett, an Australian seedling, is a particularly fine, creamy white.

I notice the C. A. has this year certificated Mrs. Ritson, the white Morel. I think I spoke of this variety in my notes last year. I venture to say that about one grower in ten will get it anywhere near as good as its parent. It is certainly a hard thing to handle satisfactorily. Mrs. Weeks is a fine exhibition white but soft in the petals and not very sure.

The standard of exhibition flowers was higher this year than ever, both in regard to size and finish. Who can predict what we will be exhibiting in ten years' time? One thing is certain, as I remarked last year, the private gardener is crowding the commercial man to the wall in growing exhibition flowers. I suppose it is only natural. Yet the commercial man on the other side is holding his end up pretty well.

The mum tide of popularity is higher than ever in England and France this year, judging by the reports. Many of the varieties suffered this year considerably from the unseasonably warm spell we got during the end of October, but on the whole it has been a much better season than last year, when some growers could not market fifty per cent of their product.

CARNATION NOTES.

Treatment During Cloudy Weather.

During the past week we have had just such weather as I wrote about in my last notes. Cloudy for several days and then a very bright, warm day. In spite of abundant ventilation and careful watering some of the softer varieties wilted some, but nothing like they would have done if we had not kept them a little dry and kept up steam with the ventilators open, both day and night.

If your carnations have made a soft growth and will badly on bright days you can do nothing but dampen the walks and syringe them lightly overhead about 10 a. m. Some growers do not approve of syringing carnations but it certainly can not do as much harm as a bad case of wilting will do. But do it before noon so the plants can dry off again before night.

Syringing in Winter Months.

A few years ago a great cry was raised against syringing carnations at all during the winter months, and to depend on abundant ventilation to keep down red spider, etc. I tried it too, but I found that I could not keep down red spider that way. And if you do allow them to get a hold on your plants you will have to syringe all the more and perhaps at times when it will hurt your plants. So now I try to syringe my carnations about once each week if I can strike a good, bright day that often, and when the weather is bright for a week or two I do not hesitate to syringe two or three times as often. But be careful not to keep your houses too damp, as that is apt to start the rust.

Rust and Red Spider.

The carnation rust is not such a bugaboo as it was a few years ago but at the same time it is not desirable to have it around. If you have a rainy spell of several days' duration and then a bright day, give your houses a chance to dry off and sweeten up the first day and then, if the next day is bright, a good syringing will do your plants good. Apply all the force at your command and if possible syringe from both sides. Keep a sharp watch on all out-of-the-way corners for spider and go for them in earnest as soon as you discover signs of them. It is hard to get rid of them after they once get a good hold, so it pays to not let them get a hold.

Cuttings.

If you are trying a few each of last spring's novelties and any of them show up extra fine it is not too early to begin working up your stock for next season. Take the strong cuttings that appear along the flower stems and put them in sand. They will root readily at this time in about four weeks. As soon as rooted put into 2-inch pots and set on a bench near the glass. By about February these young plants will have made enough growth so you can take out the top and make a good cutting of it. But do not allow them to run up too high before you take off the cutting for they are no good if they show any sign of throwing a bud. The first cutting will need repotting into a 3-inch pot to keep it growing until planting out time, but it will pay you, especially with the newer varieties. If you grow Mrs. Bradt it will pay you to take your cuttings at once. Pot as soon as rooted and keep shifting as they need it until planting out time. If handled this way you can materially increase the number of blooms you cut from each plant, and they will be better in quality, too. Most varieties that naturally come into bloom late can be made to bloom earlier the same way. But as a general rule I like January struck cuttings best and if you have plenty of stock you need not be in a hurry just yet. A. F. J. Baur.

NERTERA DEPRESSA.

In Germany this is a quick creeping plant and its dark foliage and profusion of red berries make it exceedingly useful in carpet beds, vases, etc. In conservatories where palms are planted out it is sometimes used instead of lycopodium to cover the ground. Why is it not more used in America?

In our carpet bedding it was used the same as we use alternanthera or oxalis. When it is full of berries you can make any ornamental figures, lettering, etc., by simply cutting away with the shears the berries according to the design you wish to leave. Vases can be filled in pyramidal form with soil and planted with the nertera and the vase will soon present the appearance of a large red ball the berries are produced in such profusion. Hanging vines can be planted around the edge of such vases if desired.

The plants are readily grown from seed, which should be sown in early spring in soil composed of equal parts of peat, leaf-mould and sand, sifted well together through a fine sieve. Fill the pans to the top with this soil, press down lightly, spread the seeds evenly, put a light coat of soil on top of the seeds, press down lightly again and water with a fine rose. Put a plate of glass over the pan and turn this over every day to prevent damage from condensation on the under side of the glass. Place the pans close to the glass in a warm hotbed, or in a greenhouse on a hanging board near the glass.

When plants are large enough put several together in small pots and place in a warm frame without bottom heat but near the glass. These little pots will soon be covered with the green foliage. Repot into 3-inch and soon the minute flowers appear, soon followed by the red berries. With careful attention to watering and ventilation the culture is very easy.

Cuttings can be taken in September or October, the after culture being the same as for the seedlings. During winter keep them in a temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees and near the glass. But you cannot have Nertera depressa in full berry all winter.

Detail of Ball Room Decoration.

RECEPTION DECORATION.

A recent wedding reception decoration at the Colonial Club, Cleveland, O., arranged by Mrs. E. G. Wilson, the florist, was so favorably commented upon that we send you photographs of it.

The ballroom decoration was in green and white, the room having a pink arched ceiling, green side walls and white wood work. From the ceiling above the large chandelier radiated eight garlands of laurel to the corners and sides. On this was loosely arranged branches of dogwood and southern smilax. Many of the branches measured eight and nine feet across and the effect was very dainty. The central chandelier was also filled and masses of the dogwood blossoms were hanging from it with canaries singing among them. From between each of the double side wall chandeliers sprang a half arch ending in a silver horn of plenty pouring out white chrysanthemums.

As has probably been already suspected the dogwood blossoms were not natural, it being out of season for them. But they were naturally made and were wired on to real dogwood branches cut for the purpose. Only the closest inspection would show that they were artificial.

The stage was set with a woodland scene, filled in with tall palms and potted plants of white chrysanthemums. Green lights intermingled in the curtains of wild smilax added much to the sylvan effect of the whole. The side lights were also of green and until the bridal party entered the ballroom no other lights were used. The effect of the green light alone was—as one lady expressed it—"marvelously beautiful"; at 10 p. m. all the arches of light were turned on and the effect was a canopy of white dogwood flowers covering nearly the whole room.

The reception room where the receiving party stood was separated from the hall by gates of smilax trimmed with roses. Above the gates was an arch of American Beauty roses. In the four corners of the room were four white standards 7 feet high of American Beauties. Palms were banked before the long French windows, forming a background for the light dresses of the receiving party.

The bridal table was set in the pink tea room on the second floor. In the center of the round table stood a tall cut glass candelabra with pink candles and shades and around it were massed pink roses and maidenhair ferns. Four silver candlesticks alternating with vases of white hyacinths and ferns surrounded the center piece. The room was festooned with colonial garlands of pink and white roses and asparagus caught up with clusters of pink bells tied with pink colonial bows. This was a dainty arrangement, as the whole color scheme of the room was of a delicate pink and gold.

Part of Ball Room Decoration.

Large baskets and vases of choice chrysanthemums were scattered through the other rooms. The large deep mantels in one room being banked with asparagus and Golden Weddings, while another was done in pink and dark red chrysanthemums. The halls and stairways were finished in southern smilax, and shower arrangements of yellow chrysanthemums depended from the three chandeliers, and there were baskets that were four feet in diameter of the same flower.

The home on Euclid avenue where the wedding ceremony took place earlier in the evening was also elaborately decorated, with large masses of chrysanthemums, palms, southern smilax, etc. The wedding party all carried long-stemmed roses, not a wire in the bunch, loosely gathered together and fastened with a graceful knot of broad taffeta ribbon of the exact shade of the roses. Liberty roses were used for two of the maids and the exact shade was secured in the ribbon. Pink was used by the other maids, while Kaiserins were used for the bridal bouquet. The simplicity of the bunches was their greatest charm. Liberty is fine for this purpose. W.

THE VIOLET DISEASE.

A bulletin has been prepared by Mr. P. H. Dorsett of the division of vegetable physiology and pathology of the United States Department of Agriculture, and has been issued as Bulletin No. 23 of that division, entitled "Spot Disease of the Violet."

The bulletin says the disease attacks the plants at any stage of their growth, from the small unrooted cutting in the cutting bed to the mature plant in full flower. Plants making a vigorous, rapid, but soft or succulent growth are most subject to the disease. Its first appearance is characterized by small, definite, usually circular, greenish or yellowish white spots, resembling the bite or sting of an insect. They vary in size from dots scarcely perceptible to the unaided eye to spots a thirty-second of an inch or more in diameter. The point of infection is surrounded by a narrow ring of discolored tissue, usually black or very dark brown, but changes to a lighter shade as the spots grow older. As the spot develops, the central portion remains unchanged in appearance, while the tissues immediately surrounding it, either to one side or more frequently in a circle, become diseased by the ramifying growth of the mycelium of the fungus through this portion of the leaf.

Various opinions have been expressed as to the cause of the disease, and suggestions as to the possible course of treatment are numerous. Weakness of the plants, improper soil conditions, growing them in the open fields where they are exposed to drought, rains, dews and direct rays of the summer sun, and lack of attention to properly heating, ventilating and fumigating the houses, are among the explanations advanced.

It is believed there is at present no effective remedy for the disease when it has gained a foothold. The principal fungicides in common use for the prevention and check of plant diseases have frequently been tried for this trouble, but with varying results.

It seems that the solution of the problem of controlling the disease lies in preventing it by giving careful attention to the production of vigorous, healthy plant growth rather than in attempting to check the trouble after it has once gained a foothold.

Under the heading "Preventive Measures" appear the following suggestions:

(1) Study carefully the behavior of the plants under the varying conditions surrounding them. Endeavor by modifying these conditions, when necessary, to secure plants of ideal development. Set the standard of excellence high and be satisfied with nothing short of its attainment.

(2) Grow the plants during the entire season where they can be given the conditions necessary for making a vigorous, healthy growth, and where they can be protected at all times from conditions likely to induce disease.

(3) Keep the houses or frames clean, sweet, and in perfect condition for growing healthy plants, by repairing and painting them when necessary, and by removing and destroying all rubbish likely to harbor vermin or disease.

(4) Propagate only from healthy, vigorous stock of known parentage at the season most favorable to the plants.

(5) Select each spring none but perfectly healthy, vigorous plants from the rooted cuttings for planting into the houses or frames. Old plants are sometimes carried over, and occasionally yield a large crop of flowers. They are not as reliable as the young plants, however, and are much more liable to all kinds of disease. The best growers rarely use them if it is possible to secure strong, healthy young plants for spring or early summer planting.

(6) Keep the plants clean of yellow, dead, or dying leaves, being careful to destroy them after removing them from the plants.

(7) Keep the plants free from insects and other animal pests.

(8) Give careful attention to ventilating, heating, and shading the houses or frames and to watering, cleaning and cultivating the plants.

(9) Renew the soil in the beds each season before setting in the young plants by removing from eight to twelve inches of the surface soil and replacing it with that freshly prepared.

(10) Set the young plants early in the spring in the beds where they are to remain during the season, so that they may get well established before the hot, dry weather of summer makes its appearance.

Careful attention given to the above directions for a number of years will, it is believed, result in the production of a strain of plants that are not only practically disease resistant, but are also ideal as regards regularity and symmetry of growth, length and strength of flower stems, and yield, size, substance and quality of flowers produced.

PHILADELPHIA.

Business during Thanksgiving week was very brisk. The supply of cut flowers was larger than last year but the demand was sufficient to move it all at fair prices. Beauties brought $3 to $4 a dozen and a very few (mostly for shipping orders), $5 a dozen. Brides and Maids, $6 to $8 per 100 for choice stock, a few specials bringing $10. Kaiserins and Meteors about the same price with not nearly so many in the market. Carnations, ordinary quality and sorts, $1 to $1.50 per 100; fancy varieties and flowers of choice quality, $2 per 100 and upward. Violets, single, Princess of Wales, Luxonne and choice California, 50 to 75 cents per 100; double, Lady Campbell and Marie Louise, about $1 per 100.

Valley is in demand and brings $3 to $4 per 100. Paper whites and Romans have been in for some time; they are selling slowly, especially the former, at $2 to $3 per 100. There are very few chrysanthemums left. Some sweet peas of the variety "Earliest of All" are to be seen occasionally. Smilax is not plentiful. There is a good deal of asparagus about, largely plumosus nanus in sprays.

The week may be said to have opened the season in the gay world. Wednesday saw the wedding of a son of the provost of our university and the daughter of a St. Louis family, a great social event, elaborately decorated. Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) everyone wanted "a few flowers for the dinner table" and sometimes the fernery filled, too. "Many a mickle makes a muckle," and the result was a busy day. Friday the "Two-year-olds" gave a ball to the debutantes. This event, not especially important in itself to the florist, gave rise to a number of dinners which demanded his greatest display of taste and skill.

What an influence the debutante exerts over our rose growing today! It is for her benefit that the once famous Bon Silene has been revived and appears in new guise at her coming out teas. It is for her especially that a table of sweet briars has been planted, intended to add grace and finish to her first bouquet. For her, too, many new roses pretty in the bud form are being tried. How our florists vie with each other in artistic arrangements whose sole aim is to give her pleasure! Truly the debutante is a great power in the floral world. Long may her reign last! Phil.

Byron D. Halsted.

PROF. BYRON D. HALSTED.

The name of Prof. Byron D. Halsted is now well known to the trade as that of one who has done much work in the investigation of diseases of florists' plants, especially the rose, carnation, chrysanthemum, violet, etc. He has carried on a great deal of experimental work in this line, and his essay on the diseases of the rose at the last meeting of the American Rose Society, published in the Review at the time, was undoubtedly a most valuable record that will long be referred to.

We have pleasure in presenting herewith a portrait of Professor Halsted, and also a view of the experiment station building at New Brunswick, N. J., in which many of his investigations have been carried on. The building is the home of the New Jersey experiment stations, and stands upon ground adjoining the campus of Rutgers college. Two experiment stations are housed in the same building—namely, the state station, established in 1880, and the Agricultural college station, which came into being by act of Congress in 1888. Both stations have the same director, who is Dr. E. B. Voorhees, professor of agriculture in the college. The work of the state station is chiefly with fertilizers and tests in the field and feeding experiments.

In the government station there are three departments maintained—namely, that of entomology, of biology and botany. The latter has four rooms on the second floor of the building shown, and two acres of land at the college farm, which is largely employed for testing fungicides and studying the diseases of plants. It is sometimes known as the "Field hospital," and has a long list of sick plants under treatment both as to soil treatment and application of fungicides as sprays and powders.

There is also a greenhouse connected with the department of botany, in which the diseases of ornamental plants are studied. This is a new feature, and heretofore only rented houses have been available. It is hoped that with a greenhouse 24x80 feet, divided into two rooms with separate heat control for each, some facts of interest to the floriculturists may be obtained.

Some of the leading subjects being now considered in the laboratory are the rust of the chrysanthemum, hollyhock, carnation and asparagus. Blights of roses, violets and other greenhouse plants are inspected as received from all parts of the country.

Help your employes to help themselves by placing our Florists' Manual within their reach.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business has been only fair since Thanksgiving. The demand was brisk on Monday but there was a relapse on Tuesday. The supply is only moderate and it would take but little increase in demand to cause a shortage in most lines. Good violets are about the only thing that is short of demand. Chrysanthemums are still coming in and there is a prospect of a scattering few being with us as late as Christmas. Roses and carnations are improving in quality, though a good share of the receipts are still inferior.

Various Items.

A bunch of the new pink carnation Irene seen at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store spoke well for the variety. The flower is a very pretty shade of pink, well formed, and borne on a good stout stem. It will no doubt prove to be a good commercial pink.

McKellar & Winterson report a big trade in Christmas goods and note especially heavy sales of ribbons of which they are carrying a very full line. Among their collection of Christmas supplies we noted a low priced Christmas tree stand that fills the bill to a dot. A small chain and screw bolt enable one to attach any size of tree to the stand with but little trouble.

Tuesday was "New Rose Day." Mr. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was displaying blooms of Queen of Edgely and the new pink hybrid tea Robert Scott. The former is well known as a pink American Beauty. The latter is a pink somewhat suggestive of Mme. Gabriel Luizet in size and form. It seems very promising. The display was supplemented by Geo. Hoppe, of Hoppe & Lemke, Grand Rapids, Mich., who brought over blooms of two of his seedlings from Testout and Bridesmaid. They were both pink in color, one strongly suggesting Carnot in color effect.

F. J. Foster, St. Louis, and O. B. Stevens, Shenandoah, Ia., were also recent visitors.

E. H. Hunt has issued an unusually attractive circular of Christmas greens, illustrated by half-tone engravings, the letterpress in green and red.

Joseph Reeve has started in business for himself at 55th and Washington avenue and will handle cut flowers, seeds, bulbs and nursery stock.

E. R. Tauch has withdrawn from the Harms Park Floral Co. The business will be continued under the old title by A. B. Everett and Louis Gregor.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club, to be held tomorrow (Friday) evening, papers on rose growing will be read by Geo. Collins, Luke Collins and Paul Kopanka.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

Thanksgiving week. Of course, the supposition is that all the florists made so much money they do not care if coal does go up a dollar or two. But this idea will bear a little analyzing. Prices on nearly everything shot skyward for the greater part of the week except on chrysanthemums, stevia, green goods, and turkey. Of these there was a sufficient supply to keep figures within easy reach. I have an idea, however, that many a mum grower cleared up his crop and that better prices will now be realized on the remaining blooms. Probably growers of other varieties of flowers, can hold the greater part of the increase in price now for the winter.

Various Items.

There has been the sharpest competition on roses for a couple of years. Before that time the E. M. Wood establishment had but little competition, practically, for the heaviest part of the city trade. This fall, for some reason, the roses from that establishment have not been up to their former standard, while two or three other growers have raised their standard, notably R. Montgomery and W. S. Wilson. The latter has been at the head of the class the larger part of the time since buying the John Montgomery place. At the beginning of Thanksgiving week, however, R. Montgomery steps to the head with a boxful of the best goods of the kind that ever struck the city at this time of year. It reminds one of the old-fashioned spelling class where a boy leaves off at the head of the class every night, going to the foot to work his way up again. No man can stay at the head of any floral class for any great length of time.

Red roses are better represented by local growers now than ever before. Several are bringing smaller varieties of them in and J. M. McFarlane, of No. Easton, is in Park street marketing some very good American Beauties. He reached $7 with a dozen of 3-foot ones on Wednesday.

Dana has been pulling very steadily on some fine yellow ones but his pink and white, though coming better now, have been slow on account of an attack of mildew. It will be his turn at the head a little later. Anderson & Williams have their usual good crop and have just left off at the head of the Kaiserin class for the summer. J. W. Howard stands far at the head on that variety, which is almost out of style now. It is never very popular when Brides are coming good. Elliott has been reaping glory and shekels more from his Liberties than from his more usual grades. Naturally my facilities for keeping track of those who never enter the basement of Brimstone corner are limited, but I know Cotter has been cutting well, especially on Carnots.

J. S. Manter.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving day trade was considered good by both wholesaler and retailer. The supply of stock was good, especially in roses.

American Beauties were fairly good, and first quality, which was rather scarce, sold readily at $3 per doz. Shorter-stemmed stock brought $1 and $2 per doz. and the market sold short early in the day. The smaller varieties of roses sold from $3 to $5 per 100. Brides and Maids were the most plentiful and are yet, as more of these varieties are coming in than ever before. The quality is poor and lots of them are sold as low as $1 per 100 and some go to the waste pile. Red roses were short in supply. Good Woottons sold well and Meteors of the first quality ruled at $6.

Carnations were in good demand. Red and pink were most called for and $3 was the asking price for fancy varieties. Good Scotts and Flora Hills were $2 and the common grades $1.50, which was the low price. Pickled stock was sold for what it was worth.

The mum season is about over. A few large ones are coming and range in price from 50 cents to $2 per doz.

The supply of violets was better than expected and brought $1 per 100 at first, but the price dropped later in the day to 50 cents and some remained unsold even at that price.

Romans are plenty at $3 per 100. Many of them come in spoiled, caused by being badly packed, and as a rule are a total loss to the grower.

The wholesale firms all had a good shipping trade and report good business in this line and in some cases there was quite an increase, compared with former years, with prices fully as good as last season. The retailers claim that the prices were as good as in former years and all are satisfied.

House plants are moving better and the demand from now on until after the holidays should be good for this class of trade.

Notes.

Joe Rolker, of New York, is in town calling on the trade.

A meeting of the show committee was held last Friday at Weber's. As all the collections were not in another meeting will be held before the regular club meeting so as to bring in a full report and pay off the prizes.

Charles Connon, who has been ill for some time past, is much improved and expects to be out again by the end of the week.

George Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., is sending in some fine mushrooms to this market which find ready sale.

All club members, who had tickets to sell for the late show, are requested to make returns at the next meeting of the club, which will be held Thursday afternoon, December 13, at 3 o'clock.

The bowling club seems to have taken a new lease of life and the meetings are well attended every Monday night. Messrs. Miller, Ellis and Mohr are the new members. Now if some of the old ones would come it would seem like olden times.

J. M. Hudson has opened a retail store at 1212 Olive street.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled on Monday night with eight members present. Arthur Ellison came in as a new member and rolled high man. Charlie Kuehn was absent for the first time in a long while. The scores made were not as good as usual and were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	To.	Av.
Arthur Ellison	140	157	170	209	184	860	172
J. J. Benecke	136	152	175	166	107	736	147

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Thanksgiving Day trade was very good considering everything. Prices except in a few instances remained normal. Stock was not over plentiful and most of the stores, both wholesale and retail, closed up early in the day. The weather was fine. Very few flowers were worn on the streets, but it being a general holiday house parties were numerous and few of any account were without flowers. Thanksgiving Day is becoming more recognized and in a way is a little Christmas to the cut flower trade.

Business continues to be fairly good. Debutantes' receptions call for the most flowers at present, and for these important events bright, sweet flowers have the preference. The prevailing prices are: Beauties, 50, 40, 25, 15; Brides and Maids, 15, 10, 8, 6, 3, 2; Meteors, 12, 10, 8, 6, 3; Cusins and Morgans, 12, 8, 4, 3; Perles, 6, 4; Liberty, 20, 15, 8; Kaiserins and Carnots, 15, 10, 5, 3; Golden Gates, 12, 10, 6, 3; violets, 1.50 to 2.50; specials, 3; valley, 4 to 6; cattleyas, 50; cypripediums, 15, 12, 10; carnations, 2 to 6.

H. H. Battles, of Philadelphia, was a visitor last Sunday.

Wm. Long, in the old days, of New York, but more recently of Boston, is now with the "Fernery," at 14 West 23d street.

Bowling.

Monday night saw a gala time on the New York alleys, when the Flatbush and New York clubs got together for a friendly tussle. Those who came to root for one side or the other forgot the intention in the excitement of their own bowling, in fact the greater portion of the enthusiasm was on the side alley where the junior teams were endeavoring to beat the scores of the seniors, which they succeeded in doing in several instances. In addition to this there were several individual matches which helped to keep the pot of fun boiling.

It was the first time any of the Flatbush men had rolled on these alleys, and again their team was not their strongest. It was not an even match, yet it was an off night, too, with some of their best men and the defeat was a crushing one. As is usual at an event like this there were many characteristic illustrations of individual bowling peculiarities and a photograph of some of the attitudes assumed would be sufficient to smooth out the business-care wrinkles on many a face. Following are the scores. The return match will be rolled on the Flatbush alleys Dec. 13th, at 8 p. m.

BUFFALO.

Various Items.

The trade for Thanksgiving was very good indeed. It seems to be an occasion for the use of flowers more and more every year. There was no particular demand for any one kind except we noticed that a good many fine mums went off, in fact it about cleaned up all the local grown.

Carnations are coming in rather more freely, but we have had the most unfavorable month of weather for both roses and carnations, and perhaps that is what is the matter with the violets. Some good, sharp, clear weather is badly needed.

The Florists' Club met at the house of President Kasting last week. There was a large attendance and some good business was done. The president appointed committees to handle every feature of the coming convention, placing, we believe, the best men in the right places. The committees are large enough and it is to be hoped that every man of them will do his duty.

From what we know there will be a gay time during the holiday season. Many social events are announced and there will be no flowers going to waste for the next two months. Everything points to this being the best season for the florist in the history of our trade. And why should it not be in a growing community and the country at large prosperous.

Pan-American Exposition.

The month of November just closed has been one of the worst for outside work that we ever remember and somewhat retarded the finishing up of the ground work around the buildings. All of the buildings are about under cover and the staff work and plaster is also about complete. The interior finishing and decoration will go on continuously until completion. Between snowstorms and rain the horticultural department managed to get in all the bulbs. Of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, Spanish iris and other kinds there are upwards of 200,000 planted in the various beds in that portion of the grounds known as the Music Gardens. There are upwards of 150 of the beds and with few exceptions filled with spring flowering bulbs, and are the exhibit of many different firms.

These beds are of all sizes, ranging from a surface of 100 square feet to that of 8,000 square feet. This portion of the grounds, which you enter immediately from the Elmwood gate, consists of some fifteen to twenty acres and is practically finished. It must present a most beautiful appearance in the spring as those few beds not occupied by bulbs will be filled with pansies. There are about twenty-five of them reserved for pansies, which will be planted as soon as the ground is in condition to work in the spring, and a few are occupied by hybrid perpetual roses, so that during the month of May this part of the grounds will be most attractive. A large quantity of herbaceous plants has also been planted in several long borders, also in this part of the grounds.

The Department of Works has also planted about a quarter of a million bulbs. Two long borders on each side of the Cascades, each about 500 feet in length by 15 feet in width, are planted with a great variety of hyacinths and tulips in geometrical designs. The large beds destined for summer blooming plants have also been filled with bulbs. These must make a most brilliant show in the early days of the exposition. With all the inclement weather a great deal of planting has been done in the neighborhood of the island on the banks of the Eastern Canal and in that portion of the grounds occupied by the foreign and state buildings. The last piece of structural iron was put on the electric tower within a few days, making a total height of 385 feet. Looking from the esplanade over the cascades and grand basin, the electric tower, with the grand architecture of the transportation building on the left, the manufactures building on the right, the horticulture building to the west and the government building to the east, with many smaller buildings in view, this will be a most imposing sight.

The large consignment of palms, dracaenas, oranges, etc., etc., from California has been carefully housed in large wooden buildings with sufficient light for their welfare. As there are to be thousands of feet of boxes filled with flowers and drooping and climbing plants, and also many hundreds of vases to adorn the grounds the propagating at the greenhouses is going on very lively. With all these and the immense amount of carpet bedding that the plans call for an enormous lot of plants will have to be ready by the first of June.

All who have seen the horticulture building, the exterior of which is about completed, pronounce it the most handsome structure for the purpose that has ever been seen at any exposition and it certainly is a beauty. The two large conservatories leading from it to the mines and graphic arts buildings are being glazed and will by the first of the year be heated with steam. They are large and commodious structures and admirably adapted to the welfare of growing plants. All visitors are charmed with the coloring of the buildings. There is a variation in all of them but they are a most beautiful combination of tints.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have had very irregular weather of late, and trade has followed in the weather groove. At Thanksgiving it was fine, just cold enough to strongly suggest winter and mild enough to suit the most fastidious. The shipping demand was steady and cleaned up stock close. Carnations, being very scarce, brought good prices, although the wholesale price did not differ materially from the retail. Roses were about equal to the demand except Beauties, which were scarce. Violets are in heavy demand, the supply being limited and quality fair to good. The mild, warm weather has had a very depressing effect on the violet crop, which are not blooming as freely as they will when steady cold weather sets in. The supply of chrysanthemums was ample and there are some fine blooms still on the market. Paper whites were in and very tine. Altogether Thanksgiving trade was good, yet not up to the standard of last year. Carnations retailed for 50 to 75 cents per doz.; roses, $1 to $1.50; violets, 25 cents per doz.; paper whites, 75 cents; mums, a fair grade at 50 cents per doz. and from that to $1, $1.50 and $2 per doz. Carnations still continue scarce.

Friday morning we were surprised to meet Robt. Klagge and James Taylor, of Mt. Clemens, in one of the violet houses, looking for information and a good time. They first inspected Crabb & Hunter's twenty-two houses, nine of which are grown to violets, which they pronounced remarkably fine, and when they had seen the Irene carnation growing thought so well of it that Mr. Klagge changed his order for 100 to 1,000; the plants were loaded with buds and flowers and showed up far better than anything else on the place in the carnation line.

The next place visited was Chadwick's 4-acre range, on Burton avenue, devoted to carnations, lettuce and violets. The visitors admitted that it was larger and more modern than anything around Detroit or vicinity.

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. also came in for a share of praise. They have about 60,000 square feet of glass, devoted mostly to cut flowers. Here we saw a house of poinsettias that made us all envious; they were in nice condition to hold for the holidays.

Hopp & Lempke had a house of Beauties, the finest in town, and a house of Marie Louise violets that were exceptionally fine.

At Hill & Pobimann's there was nothing but violets; five houses of them, and all in fine shape; the varieties grown are Lady Campbell and Farquhar. Over on the west side we called on Mr. Cunningham, who happened to be out. We went through his houses and found his stock looking healthy and nice. He runs a store on Canal street in connection. At the John Ball Park greenhouses we were disappointed in not finding W. L. Cukerski, park superintendent, in. Everything was in neat and trim condition; the palm conservatory was a sight to remember. While not as large as those of the Chicago parks it was as fine except in size and extent; they utilize every square inch of space possible; under the bench, on the bench and another narrower bench above that. Echeveria, alternanthera, sedums, cannas, geraniums and coleus are their principal bedding plants, although some cut flowers are also grown.

Our next stop was at Henry Smith's on W. Bridge street hill, where we were invited to dinner, before inspecting their 75,000 square feet of glass. Their roses were exceptionally fine, the Golden Gates being the finest Mr. Klagge has ever seen.

The next stop was to have been at Eli Cross' violet plant, but when part way there the visitors requested to be taken to the depot instead or they would miss their train. They came with an idea that we represented a kind of a one-horse town, but when they saw that we outclassed Detroit, not only in the extent and size of the individual concerns, but in the modern, well constructed greenhouses, they playfully remarked: "We will go home, sell out, move our plant to Grand Rapids and grow violets." GEO. F. CRABB.

A VISIT TO BLOOMSBURG, PA.

I recently visited Bloomsburg and found Mr. J. L. Dillon up to his eyes in work. His roses are looking very healthy and the carnations are in the pink of condition. He said he had planted over 40,000 and has not lost over a hundred plants from stem rot. Here also is the home of the verbena. The stock is in fine shape, there being no trace of disease on his thousands of plants. But the grandest sight of all was a house of Liberty roses. He has 1,500 plants and I would think there were twice that number of flowers on them. Looking over them from one end of the house they were just one mass of blooms on stems from one to two and a half feet long. I asked why he didn't market the flowers and he replied that it paid him better to use the wood for propagating. He has now about 8,000 cuttings rooted and could easily put in 10,000 more. In reply to my question as to whether he thought grafted plants did best he pointed to another bed of plants that were not grafted and the grafted plants certainly had the best of it in the comparison. Speaking of grafting Mr. Dillon has planted outside several hundred Manetti stocks to propagate from. He believes he can raise better and cheaper stocks than he can buy.

I also saw his new white carnation Queen Louise, and it is a grand thing. He said it was a continuous bloomer, never cropping. The plants were strong and vigorous and are continually throwing up flowering shoots.

Mr. Dillon added two more houses this summer to his already large plant and I suppose he will keep on building. But he does not invest all his money in greenhouses. He has just bought an elevator factory, so you may expect some day to ride to the top of some of your sky scrapers in one of the latest improved Dillon elevators.

I was much pleased with everything I saw at this place and if any other readers of the Review should ever be within reach of Bloomsburg I would advise them to visit Mr. Dillon's place, where I am sure they will receive as cordial a welcome as I did.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Our Thanksgiving trade was very good this year and our florists feel thankful for it. The weather a few days before Thanksgiving day was very stormy accompanied by heavy rains. Slight damage was done greenhouse property in the way of glass breakage, but outside stock suffered, chrysanthemums being leveled to the ground, making that stock scarce and high priced. However, with what could be gathered from the outside and a fair supply of inside roses and carnations, in most cases the supply was equal to the demand.

A sad accident happened at the ball game on Thanksgiving day that helped to mar the pleasure of the day. A number of men and boys climbed on a building near the ball grounds to view the game when suddenly the roof gave way, killing 18 and wounding 85 men and boys and as a result funeral work is very plentiful this week.

Prices: American Beauties, $2 to $4; Brides and Maids, 15 to 75 cents; Meteor, 75 cents to $1; Liberty, $1; Kaiserin, 75 cents to $1; Cecil Brunner, 15 cents per dozen. Carnations—Hobart, $1; Crocker, 50 cents; Schwerin, 35 to 50 cents; Hill, 35 cents; Portia, 15 to 20 cents per dozen. Chrysanthemums—Bonnaffon, 75 to $1.50; Jones, 35 to 50 cents; mixed lots, 25 cents per dozen. Valley, 75 cents per dozen. Roman hyacinths, 35 cents per dozen. Violets—Princess of Wales, $1 to $2; California, $1; Marie Louise, $1 per dozen. Smilax, 8 cents per string. Tuberoses, 75 cents per dozen.

Notes.

Mr. Thomas Stevenson, the London florist made a fine display of his new violet, Duchess of Marlborough, on Thanksgiving day and they bought up quickly. It's a seller.

Sievers & Boland, as usual, had a fine window display for Thanksgiving.

Pelancano & Co. had a showy window of roses, among them were some very good Brides maids and another window of choice carnations.

Inside chrysanthemums are nearly all out, very few are to be seen in market. Violets had the call on Thanksgiving day, many stores being sold out early in the day.

Galloway, of Fruitvale, has a fine lot of the Lawson carnation a perfect sheet of buds with grand stems. Mr. Galloway thinks well of it.

Marse & Nelson, Oakland, are making a specialty of standard roses and will have a fine lot for 1901.

Madam Prentice, Washington street, Oakland, has planned a new carnation house for spring of 1901. J. N.

Florists' Review
When Writing Advertiser

KANSAS CITY, MO.

What more could a florist wish for on Thanksgiving Day than plenty of good mums and perfect weather? Such was the condition which existed here all last week and trade far exceeded our expectations and eclipsed all previous years.

At the football game between Missouri and Kansas the spectators numbered about 7,000 and every other person was wearing a chrysanthemum and a big one at that. Roses and carnations took second place, while everybody wanted a mum, and we doubt if there ever were so many seen here and disposed of as were sold Thanksgiving Day.

Arthur Newell handled over 1,000 good blooms, and the Golden Weddings and Jerome Jones seen at his Walnut street store were whoppers. This small, but neat and attractive store is presided over by Lawrence Schmager, a typical Jayhawker and the only florist in town who can get $1 for a single bloom.

The Hon. Billy Bastian, packer and right hand man to Mr. Geo. M. Kellogg, Pleasant Hill, Mo., made his semi-annual visit to this town last week.

Samuel Murray is the only downtown florist who has a conservatory in connection with this store. On November 15, 16 and 17 Mr. Murray gave a chrysanthemum show, and every flower was of his own production. The store and windows were beautifully decorated, Chicago style, by Miss Hayden with orchids, fairleyense fern and the latest varieties of carnations. The dignified Ellsworth, wearing his broadcloth, proved himself to be the right man for the place, being very attentive to the ladies and looking after his employer's interest. As a grower of fine plants Mr. Murray excels, and the specimen mum plants on display were one mass of well developed blooms and were a great attraction and when offered for sale netted Sam a neat little sum. H. J. M.

ARAUCARIAS.

In the Review of Nov. 8 Mr. John Reardon gives an account of his method of rooting the tops of old araucarias. I have been doing the same for years and root in a similar way the tops of a great many other plants that have grown leggy, such as dracænas and all of that class of plants. The yucca is very easily rooted that way. I tongue them only on one side and use moss to keep the cut open. All plants except araucarias root readily in sphagnum moss.

DENVER, COLO.

Various Notes.

Nearly all the stores report a good Thanksgiving day trade. In cut flowers the market was well cleaned up. Beauties being very scarce, mums made their exit on that day and while trade in them has been good this season I guess the only sorrow felt is that their going leaves the store a little empty. Violets were reasonably plentiful and the demand was good. The supply of carnations fell short and prices had to be raised; fancy varieties selling well and at a good price.

There was a good sale on plants during the week and some of the best pot mums of the season were seen. About the most striking thing seen was a fine batch of poinsettias in pots and pans, these in the latter being particularly fine, grown by the Park Floral Company, who report a good sale on them but expect it will be better when snow is on the ground. This firm also made plant baskets a feature. Primula obeonica and the Baby primrose being largely used.

We have for a Denver resident, but not engaged in the trade, Mr. W. J. Crowe, of Utica, N. Y. Billy puts in a good deal of time around the trade but does not mix up with it in any way. "Just a little lonesome now," he says, "but will feel better when 'hubby' and the little Crowes come west in January," for it is his intention to make his home here.

I will state for our benefit that Denver bowlers are now on regulation alleys and oh, the difference! A good-sized crowd turned our last bowling night to experiment and I'm afraid if the scores were printed they would show up rather low. So "J. J. B." and "K." please be kind and give us a fair trial before you start, for you certainly will have plenty of chances to "get back."

Rocky.

OMAHA.

Business in Omaha has been very good for the past two or three weeks, the demand being far ahead of supply in Beauties, carnations and violets. Just before Thanksgiving the white mums gave out.

The Thanksgiving trade has been satisfactory but not quite up to preceding years, for which there is no apparent reason.

The prices prevailing here at present are: Roses, best, $1.50; seconds, 75 cents; carnations, 50 and 60 cents; violets, $1 and $1.50 per 100. Beauties range from $2 to $7 per dozen.

A. Donaghne, Jr., has been laid up for the past week. B.

SOW BUGS.

J. K. asks how to get rid of sow bugs. Use a mixture of two-thirds granulated sugar and one-third paris green. After being well mixed spread on dry boards where the bugs congregate and in the morning there will be plenty of dead bugs. I also find that toads in the greenhouses will take care of such bugs, also snails. James Morgan.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. So much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

MR. THERON PARKER,
Brooklyn, N. Y.
DEAR SIR:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way, and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best in the market, and if your other Specialties are as good, they should make another addition to the money makers of 1900.
Very respectfully,
ALBERT M. HERR.

A PURE YELLOW CANNA.

Mr. G. P. Moore, Ocean City, N. J., writes that he has a new canna, a chance seedling of the orchid-flowered type, the flowers of which are a pure deep rich yellow without any spots, have five wide petals and are four inches across at the top and four inches long and more bell-shaped than any other canna. The plant grows about five feet high, the foliage light green, very dense, and though an orchid-flowered sort it is as hardy as Crozy. He has named it the "Golden Age of 1900."

A few plants that were included by mistake in a bed he planted out last spring attracted much attention and a florist who saw the variety in bloom offered the owner of the bed $2 for a root of it when lifted in the fall. While Mr. Moore deprecates the lengthening of the list of cannas he believes this one will be readily given a place when its good qualities are known.

THE MOST MONEY.

To get the most money out of your business you must produce the best stock at the lowest possible expense. Are you sure there is no waste in your business? Are you sure every one of your methods is the cheapest as well as the most effective?

The best stock isn't always the most costly to produce. It's more often in doing the right thing at the right time. And that's what The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, keeps you posted on. It is a $10 book for $5, and the best investment you can possibly make, no matter how large or how small your business.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Thanksgiving day has come and gone and it is rather difficult to say whether trade has been better than last year or not. Some of the storemen report an increase over last year, while others report a slight decrease; but on the whole there seems to be little complaining. On the flower market at Tomlinson Hall trade was rather slow and most of those who have stands there were complaining.

The growers seem to have fared better. There was a fair supply of large mums which were eagerly bought up by the storemen early in the week and by Wednesday night there were not many good large blooms to be had.

Roses were in fair supply and went well. Carnations were decidedly scarce in the best grades, especially in colors.

The weather is some colder now and trade ought to keep up pretty well. Roses and carnations are improving in quality and increasing in quantity and with the mums out of the way prices will likely advance. However, there are still a lot of poor mums around and they will continue to be a drag for a week or so.

IRIS PAINTED BEAUTY.

In the Shepparton (Australia) News of Oct. 26 appears the following communication from Mr. Peter Barr:

"Those who visited the Tatura show on Wednesday, Oct. 17, must have seen Iris Painted Beauty. It was conspicuous in the fine but crowded box of cut flowers staged by Miss Love, of Tatura, and was during the day the cynosure of the exhibits. Its beauty was of a very exceptional, marked and distinct character, and was the general topic of conversation. An expert gave it as his opinion that no iris of so much refined beauty had ever before been seen in this or any other country. It belongs to the group commonly known as German Iris. The flower is of pure white and consists of three upright petals called standards, and three lower petals called falls. Each of these petals is veined all over with rich rosy red. The stigmas from under which runs the primrose beside are of the purest white, up the center of each runs a rosy red beam terminating in a feathery, club-like knob."

GINSENG.

We have received a copy of an article upon the cultivation of ginseng from Mr. Harlan P. Kelsey, Boston, Mass., in which he ridicules the assertions made by some writers as to the immense profits to be made by growing this plant. He says it is true that there is a good profit when success is attained, but that such absurdities as a million-dollar bed in twelve years from a $1,000 investment should be classed with other air castles.

He speaks of the soil necessary to supply suitable conditions for the growth of the plant and expresses a willingness to give fuller information to those interested.

DES MOINES, IA.—The employes from the various departments of the down town business of the Iowa Seed Company attended a Hallowe'en social given by the greenhouse force of the company employed at the greenhouses. Upon their arrival they were greeted by the word "Welcome," the letters being carved on large pumpkins and lights placed inside. The large potting rooms where the guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Rennison and Mr. and Mrs. Kurtzweil were a veritable fairy land. The long potting table in the center of the room had been transformed to an elegantly furnished table, spread with fine linen and banked with roses, chrysanthemums and other choice flowers. Later in the evening refreshments were served. Many of the guests were dressed in fancy costumes, which added much merriment to the occasion.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

GRAND NEW ROSE
QUEEN OF EDGELY
PINK AMERICAN BEAUTY.

"We are convinced that this variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect, except color, the exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good, even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as fine as that of Beauty, and the exhibited blooms showed remarkable vigor."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas Plants.

Christmas has of late been very much of a plant giving time. A handsome flowering plant has been the choice of hundreds of our patrons to accompany the expression of joy and good wishes of the happy season, and you ought to be well supplied with an assortment of attractive plants. A palm or fern will be chosen by some, but a flowering plant that has color and brightness is much preferred. When you are not supplied with these, as all strictly retailers are not, you should make provision in time. There is no palm in equal favor with the Kentia Belmoreana or Forsteriana, because everybody knows how well adapted they are for house culture. Something that retails from $2 to $5 is the thing. Araucarias, pandanus, draccenas and rubbers are in some demand, but we cannot all afford to keep a collection of all of these, for if you lose a few plants out of a dozen your profit is gone on the rest. You must have a good assortment of the Boston fern. Every one now knows its excellent qualities.

Of the berried plants Ardisia crenulata is the best, and some of our eastern growers have a splendid lot. They are not cheap, but they are so splendidly seasonable, with their holly-like leaves and bright berries that all good plants will sell. With us the poinsettia is the favorite winter plant. Especially is it in demand when grown in pans of 10 or 12 inches with five or six plants in each. Its brilliant color is just the thing for Christmas. Azaleas come next. We have never had enough of Simon Mardner, Vervæneana and Deutsche Perle. Cyclamen always sell well, although it is a few weeks earlier than most cyclamen are at their best, yet there are any amount of fine plants to be had.

Begonias of several flowering kinds are in demand, but Gloire de Lorraine eclipses them all. If you don't have some of those you will not be in it. On several occasions we have made a table center piece of this beautiful plant and nothing can surpass it when the color is wanted. Plants of several sizes taken from the pots and the bulb wrapped in paper and sunk in moss makes a most beautiful basket. Ericas, or heaths, as they are better known, are beautiful plants and a few sell, but we found them scarcely gay enough to please many and they are more at home in a made-up basket of plants, where their more equal tints of flower and foliage are a setting for more brilliant colors. The Bermuda lilies are always in demand, but not much at Christmas as a pot plant except in baskets. Small pans of Roman hyacinths always go, as do pans of paper white narcissus if grown cool and dwarf. There are lots of people who want a small, inexpensive plant, and if you cannot cater to them you get the reputation of being an expensive firm. The primula is one plant that you can sell for 40 or 50 cents, and they should be at their best just now.

The above list is not a long one, but it covers the great majority of the plants available for the season. Another correspondent who is more in touch with the centers of fashion will doubtless tell you all about how to trim up these plants to add to their attractiveness. It's no use kicking; every pot must be covered with some material. Now we have waterproof crepe paper. When you stop to think that 90 per cent of all these plants are sent as presents and that first impressions count for much, then you cannot complain that our trade demands that every plant be made as pretty as possible.

It was only the last year or two that the combination baskets of plants sold in the smaller cities, but now there is a call for them. As no growing takes place in these baskets it is a fact that the later they are made up the longer they will be attractive. There is usually a metal lining to the basket, and with damp moss and having the plants moist when put in they will last several days in fine order; certainly three times as long as did the old fashioned basket of flowers with the flowers on sticks or toothpicks, and are not half a dozen pretty plants selected with taste, with plenty of fern mixed in, really more beautiful than any basket of one kind of flower? The flowers are gorgeous, the plants are beautiful, and I think if you had to sit beside it all day you would rather have the company of the basket of plants.

Preparing for Christmas.

It is a little early to prepare plants for Christmas sales, but nothing should be left undone that possibly can be done. No plant that needs tying should be neglected, for the few days before Christmas bring more work than you can do. The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine needs some support, but they look bad full of stakes. One small stake and the branches supported from it is all you can do. However skillfully done, most any plant looks formal and stiff when first tied up, but in a week or two again assumes a more natural growth. I don't care how much frills you put on a plant, the pots should be perfectly clean, and a great deal of this can be done a week or two ahead. They won't have time to get dirty again. You know pretty well all that will go and if you wash a few that won't move off you have done only good. From present indications there will be a great demand this season for both flowers and plants, so don't hold your stock too cheaply. The best buyers often come at the last moment.

Bulbs.

We have had up to date no weather that has made any need of covering your bulbs. They are best out of doors covered with a few inches of soil. We think it is best for the bed to let one inch of frost get into the soil and then cover with four or five inches of straw litter. Remember, if you are keeping any paper white narcissus out of doors that they should not be touched with frost, so they are best covered with glass. We also cover with soil the Dutch hyacinths in pots as well as the Roman hyacinths in flats. If there is two or three inches of soil or tan bark over the pots or flats and then three or four inches of litter the glass will not raise the temperature in the winter months to do any harm.

Sometimes the pansies come through the winter all right when we have lots of snow and sometimes with bare ground and hard freezing they perish by the thousands. Rye straw laid between the rows and very lightly over the plants is a good covering, but a still cheaper method is to cover with hemlock boughs. There is always a bow to them and of course you put the curve upwards. We don't all live in the hemlock belt. White pine branches would do about as well, but not quite. You see people in November covering up their beds of tulips and hyacinths with a foot of litter. This is a great mistake. It keeps the soil warm and the bulbs make an early, long growth and when the litter is removed in the spring you have a weak, tender growth that is readily hurt by late spring frosts. These flowers do not last as long, either, as those that are less protected. Late planting for beds, and a few inches of covering after the ground is frozen, is all that is necessary and gives the best results.

Holly and Green.

One of the chief industries with some of us for the next two weeks will be the handling of holly, ground pine and other greens. The ground pine appears to be quite scarce this year and there is evidently not going to be enough to go round, so you can command your own price on that. Holly will be as plentiful as ever and what we have seen is a fair quality. We are all apt to delay in making this material up into salable form. A great majority of the holly is sold in the form of wreaths. Holly keeps as well in the original cases as anywhere and the wreaths are doubtless all the better for being freshly made, but you cannot make all you want in the last few days, so begin without delay and make up all the wreaths you think you can possibly sell, and the same with the wreaths and the wreathing of the ground pine.

We have often been puzzled to know where to put all this stuff when made up and have it fresh and green. You are tempted to pile wreaths one on top of the other, perhaps to a height of a dozen, as they take up a great deal of room, but this flattens them out and spoils the form. Beneath the middle bench of a cool house, laid out on the floor and covered with paper, we store a great many. I have found a cold frame an excellent place, but in addition to the glass covering you must throw over a cloth or mats to keep it dark. No amount of cold will, of course, hurt the ground pine, but a zero freeze is not at all good for the holly as it does not grow where they get zero weather so early in the season. Don't let your crates of ground pine lay around where the sun and wind will get at them or in a very few days the entire outside will be brown. Keep them covered with some material even though it is only for a week.

ROSES

ROSES.

This was the subject at the last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club and two papers were read, both of which appear below. Mr. Collins is foreman for Peter Reinberg and Mr. Kopanka has charge of a section of rose houses at the same establishment.

Beauties in Center Benches Only.

I was requested to write about American Beauties grown in center benches only. Last year we planted a range of twelve houses in Beauties. The roses did well up to the end of November, and by that time the plants had grown up to the glass on the south side and also on the north side, and we had to spend considerable time in keeping them tied away from the glass. When we syringed the plants, owing to the amount of foliage on them, the plants would not dry at night and then our troubles began; it was hard to keep away the black spot, so I thought it would be best to plant the center benches only, and I am well satisfied with the experiment. At the present time our plants are good and will have a heavy crop of flowers for the holidays.

In the two ranges that were built this year with the Garland gutter we have four benches in each house, and have planted the north and south benches with Brides and Maids, and Beauties in the two center benches. At the present time they are very good, but we shall be able to tell later if the shade caused by the Beauties makes much difference to the north bench. In the summer I had the Beauties carefully watered, great care being taken not to water the soil between the rows. After they had been planted about one month we put on a mulch of well rotted manure which I think was an excellent plan to protect the soil from the sun. We have given them one top dressing of bone meal since then. Our plants are in excellent health and are producing lots of fine flowers, with bright prospects for the future. After the holidays we shall give them some manure water.

Forcing Roses Two Years.

Another question you have asked me is, Under what conditions can roses be grown with profit more than one year? The Brides and Maids can be grown the second year in the same soil. About the 1st of July we commence to withhold water, only syringing the plants every day. We continue this treatment for about six weeks, then we prune the tops and take out all the poor wood in the bottom, and scrape off some of the soil, as much as possible, from the surface and then put on a top dressing of manure and soil mixed. After that we bend them all down and syringe twice every day. After the eyes commence to break, the soil can be more freely watered till thoroughly soaked through.

We have some Golden Gates which we kept growing all the summer. This is a grand rose, it is so prolific. It must be shaded in the summer, as it cannot endure the hot sun; the petals will burn. The two-year-old roses are greatly benefited by manure watering every, two weeks during the winter.

GEO. COLLINS.

In reply to a question, Mr. Collins said they were growing the Liberty and had two houses, of which one was pretty good and the other one not so good. He feared he had not given the rose the right treatment. He had been cutting flowers all the fall and now the plants seem to want to take a rest. He thought the Liberty would prove profitable if properly handled.

Soil.

Competition gets stronger every year and good roses must be grown. Good stock sells first and the poor is often sacrificed. The demand is always for the best and such will bring a good price when poor stock goes for nothing. To grow good roses requires knowledge, experience, good houses, ample heating facilities, plenty of water, good soil and other conveniences. If these essentials are all there good stock can be grown.

I will not take up your time by going into full details, but will simply say a few words about soil and feeding roses in the winter months. Too much attention cannot be paid to the soil, for it is the foundation of the whole year's work. A good grower knows now the soil he is going to use next year. He prepares his soil a year, or at least six months, in advance of the time it is to be used. When planting and other rush work is completed he prepares his soil for next year by plowing a piece of old pasture and putting the sods grass side together in a pile of rectangular form. If the soil of the pasture is light and black he adds half as much heavy loam or clay. If it is heavy he adds lighter soil. Then he can put a half-inch thick layer of bone meal on the whole length of the pile, a layer of one-year-old cow manure a foot thick, and an inch layer of slacked lime on top and all around the pile. The lime prevents insects from penetrating the soil and laying their eggs therein, and it helps to rot the manure.

When the pile is two or three months old it should be broken down and set over (repiled), so that the different parts are well mixed and the frost can get into it. Chop up all the lumps and your soil is ready for the coming season's use.

Feeding.

Early planted roses should have a mulch of old cow manure about the latter part of August or beginning of September. A week after it should be turned over, all the lumps made fine, worked into the soil in the bench and leveled off nicely. The daily watering will soon take the fertilizing properties of the manure into the soil, so you will need to begin giving liquid manure in October, especially in the case of American Beauties. A hungry soil produces blind wood, and the plants lacking strength to force up bottom shoots produce only eye shoots. But it is not wise to feed roses that are off crop. They should be given a little rest by lessening the amount of water for about a week.

Before giving liquid manure prepare for it by getting the soil on the dry side, and when giving the liquid make it the substitute for a thorough watering. It is preferable to feed when the roses are beginning to come in crop and during the time a crop is being cut. It helps to develop the buds and gives them size and a richer color. During the dark months (November and December) I would advise feeding with liquid manure but once each month, during January and February twice a month, and during March and April three times a month. Select a bright day in which to feed with liquid.

Three years ago I devoted a house to experiments in feeding, using bone meal, horn shavings, night soil, nitrate of soda and liquid cow manure and found that the cow manure gave the best results.

PAUL KOPANKA.

In the discussion of Mr. Kopanka's paper, Mr. Rudd said that the reason the best results were obtained from the cow manure was that it was a complete manure. He believed that if the cow manure, bone meal and horn shavings had been composted together better results would have been obtained than from any one applied separately.

ROSE NOTES.

If our roses were in crop about the last week in October or the first week in November we can count with some certainty on a crop for Christmas. In this case the roses will by this time form their buds and with an even temperature of about 58 degrees at night will mature by Christmas. Should the crop appear to be coming too late you can raise the temperature a few degrees, say 60 to 62, and in case of necessity to 65 degrees for the last few days. This will not be beneficial to the plants, but if you at the same time keep the ventilators up an inch, or even a half inch, the danger of soft growth is greatly lessened. If the main crop should be coming too early a few degrees below 58, say 56, or even 54, will sometimes bring it right.

But if the crop should be so far advanced that it will be impossible to hold it back by a lower temperature, the only way out of the difficulty is to cut out the center buds on strong stems and let the nearest side bud develop. This will, of course, not bring as fine a flower, but it is far better than none at all. The bud should be cut off to the next side shoot, and if done in time and with good judgment the results will be gratifying. By the time the flower is ripe to cut, stem and flower will show little if any defect. This plan should, however, be followed only in case of emergency, as it is very easy to overdo it.

I do not think it advisable or profitable to keep the night temperature for Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and Am. Beauty below 58 or higher than 60 degrees; Perles, La France and Duchess of Albany above 60 to 63, and Meteor 68.

New Yellow Chrysanthemum, Mrs. Elmer D. Smith.

As the roses make their growth they may be watered liberally, but when you commence cutting the crop water more sparingly, so that you will have the plants on the dry side when off crop. Syringe on every favorable day. Hold the hose so that the water strikes the under side of the foliage, otherwise red spider will soon make its appearance. The spider is very easy to keep off, but hard to get rid of when it once has a foothold. Be most particular in syringing the Beauties. Syringe hard when you do it. Three to four times a week is plenty. Be sure the leaves dry off before night after a syringing. In case a sudden change in weather threatens to prevent the drying off of the foliage properly, give extra heat and extra ventilation.

If any black spot appears pick off and burn the affected leaves at once. Keep the air sweet. Have a little sulphur on the pipes at all times.

M. STAUCH.

[The above notes were intended for last week's issue but arrived too late. Following are the notes written for this week's issue.]

After the long spell of cloudy weather the recent days of sunshine have brightened the face of many a grower who has been anxious about his Christmas crop. If you have kept your plants a little on the dry side during cloudy days they will take a good watering the first sunny day. I believe in watering so one can feel the moisture at the bottom of the soil, and then leave alone until fairly dry again. Do not water and syringe a little every day. There are places over heating pipes and at corners where you will have to water oftener, and always try to keep these places equally as moist as the rest of the bed, so you can water the whole equally all over again when needed.

Check the fires before the sun gets up too high, so that the temperature of the house rises gradually. Otherwise you are very apt to raise the ventilators too much while the air outside is still very cold. In such a case the cold air drops down upon the plants and gives them a chill. Start to raise the ventilators at 60 degrees and gradually increase the ventilation as the temperature rises. Try to have all artificial heat off as soon as the sun heat is sufficient to maintain the necessary temperature.

Hybrid and hybrid tea roses that have been dormant and that are intended for Easter blooming will soon need attention. It is none too early to get them started about the last week of this month. If they are in solid beds cut out all brush, old and weak flowering wood. Do not cut it back but take it all out. Leave from three to four shoots according to distance apart of the plants.

Take a little of the surface soil off and give a good mulching of manure and soil to which you may add some bone meal. Tie them down, distributing evenly over the bed, and give a thorough watering. Start them at a temperature of 45 degrees and raise gradually after they commence to break. Those on raised benches are treated the same with the exception of the pruning. Cut out all the worthless wood and cut the rest back to four or six eyes. The roses on benches will under the same treatment bloom for a week or ten days sooner than those in solid beds.

M. STAUCH.

MILDEW.

Please tell me through the Review if sulphate of copper and lime is ever used for mildew on roses in the greenhouse, and if so, what proportion of each is used. H. S.

A solution of sulphate of copper and lime is used for downy mildew and black rot of the grape and blight and rot of the tomato and potato, but I have never known it to be used on roses under glass. Lime or lime and sulphur in equal parts is used, dusting it on the foliage. H. S. will do best to use pure sulphur, either on the foliage or on the heating pipes. M. STAUCH.

HARD WOOD ROSE CUTTINGS.

Will not some reader of the Review tell me how to propagate hard wood rose cuttings indoors, stating how much bottom heat to give them? Also how to propagate hybrid rose cuttings in frames in summer. How should the frames be made and the cuttings treated?

SUBSCRIBER.

The first requisite of success in propagating roses from hard wood is to have the wood very thoroughly ripened and hard. It is then stripped of the foliage and made up into two or three-eye cuttings. These are stuck in sand which has been very firmly packed. The cuttings should be well firmed in the sand, as thorough packing is essential to success. During the first three weeks a temperature of 38 to 45 degrees may be maintained with very little additional bottom heat. The bottom temperature should then be gradually increased until it reaches 60 degrees. A bottom temperature of from 60 to 65 degrees may then be maintained. At no time should the top temperature rise above 50 degrees.

Frames for propagating hybrid rose cuttings in summer may be made as follows: Fresh manure to the depth of one foot should be placed in the frame and thoroughly packed. It should be moistened and covered for two or three days before using. Put on two inches of gravel and three inches of sharp sand. See that the sand is firmly packed. The cuttings should be thoroughly watered after sticking. Keep the frames closed for five or six days, only opening them to spray lightly when necessary. The frames should be shaded from about eight in the morning until four in the afternoon. On the sixth or seventh day begin airing by raising the sash one inch for one-half hour morning and evening. The air and light should be increased gradually until the cuttings are rooted. Never allow the sand to get dry, but avoid too frequent syringing.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. ELMER D. SMITH.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of this new yellow chrysanthemum that originated with Messrs. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich. It is a bright yellow, deeper in color than Golden Wedding, very similar to Bonnaffon in form, but with a heavier and stronger stem. It attracted a good deal of attention at the Chicago show. The blooms shown there were seven inches in diameter. Stem and foliage are first-class and the habit of growth is dwarf, being a scant three feet high. It is in season November 1 to 10. Four of the Chrysanthemum Society's committees gave this variety an average of 92¾ points. It is certainly a most promising yellow sort.

THE Review's classified advs. are a great convenience is the verdict of the buyers. "It is so easy to find what you want."

CARNATION NOTES.

Choosing New Varieties.

By this time most of us have made up our minds what varieties we intend to grow in quantity next year. I think this is one of the most important questions we have to decide, and should be weighed carefully before we decide what proportion of our stock shall be of a certain color or variety. Every spring there are a number of new varieties put on the market and many of them are decided acquisitions, but most of them are forgotten after a season or two. To find out which varieties are going to stand the test is constantly taxing our best efforts. We are almost bound to try them all for ourselves, because occasionally a variety that does well with our neighbor will not do at all with us. But occasionally a variety comes out that seems to thrive all over the country, and under all kinds of treatment, and it does not take it long to become a universal favorite.

When we fail with a variety we are very apt to condemn it, and the man who introduced it; and yet, if we will take a second thought we find that it is only our own ignorance of its peculiar wants that has caused the failure, which is proven by the fact that it showed up fine at its birthplace, before it was sent out. There are so many good ones, though, that we can hardly afford to spend much time and room on a variety, trying to find its peculiar wants, unless it produces a distinct or extra fine bloom.

Mrs. Bradt under ordinary treatment proved to be too shy, and the blooms had to bring nearly double the price of other varieties to make it profitable, and many growers dropped it on that account. But those who took the trouble to experiment a little, found that by starting early and planting closer on the bench they could cut as many blooms to the square foot as they could from other varieties, and as the blooms nearly always bring top prices it has become one of the most profitable varieties.

Many new varieties are discarded because they come into full crop too late in the season, which is also a serious mistake in many cases. A good early start, both with the cutting and with benching in the fall will usually remedy that fault. Most growers complain about Jubilee acting that way, but a bench which we planted early in May began to bloom as early as any of the others, and we cut a good lot of blooms, too. Now there is a nice crop on it, and by January there will be an enormous crop from all appearances.

It seems to me that when a man introduces a variety, he ought to give as much information about its peculiarities as he can, and I think the time is not far distant when it will be done. We all know that every variety has its peculiar wants, and it would not hurt the sale of it to state that it needs to be planted early, or grown at a certain temperature, or that it needs heavy or light soil to make it do its best. It certainly would save just about one season of experimenting on the part of those who buy it.

All up-to-date growers recognize the fact that different varieties need different treatment, and it is merely a question as to what that particular treatment is. We shall be glad to give it, if we know what it is, but we are apt to lose our patience if we fail too badly at first. If they do not care to say it in the adv., they could have slips printed with all the information that a good grower needs, and put in one with each shipment. When a man introduces a variety we hold him responsible, to a certain degree, for its behavior afterward, and if he expects to ever send out another variety it will pay him to help his customers all he can to grow it successfully, because he will want to sell them some more.

Consider the varieties sent out last spring, and how many are reported as doing extra well, except at a few places? Ethel Crocker and Genevieve Lord are reported as doing fine most everywhere, and it is only because they are varieties that will do fairly well under almost any reasonable treatment, while the other varieties are doing well only wherever they happened to fall into the hands of experts who were quick to discover their peculiar wants and handled them accordingly. Next season you will see or hear of them doing better throughout the land, because we know they are good and only need to be understood. The Marquis, for instance, seems to be a variety that needs early striking and early planting, so get in your cuttings as soon as you can. For the average florist, who grows only a few thousand plants, the easy doers are no doubt the most satisfactory, but if you can give them a little extra care it will always pay to grow a few of the others for their colors and for variety's sake. In fact, in order to have a good selection of colors you must grow them, because the easy doers are all either pink or white. There is not a single scarlet nor a variegated variety that can be put into that class, and the yellows are all hard to do well. There is as much room as ever for the hybridist to work in.

Rooting Cuttings.

For rooting carnation cuttings I use the north bench in an even span carnation house. Two steam pipes run underneath it, and the front is boarded up to within about six inches of the ground. This gives about 10 degrees of extra bottom heat, and causes them to root in about ten days less than if there were no bottom heat. The overhead temperature should be about the same as that in which the cuttings were grown. Put on four inches of sand and pack down to about three inches. I like a rather coarse, clean sand in preference to the fine dust-like sand used by some. There is much less danger from fungus, and with care it can nearly always be used twice, whereas the fine sand needs to be renewed for each batch of cuttings. Use an ordinary table knife to make a cut about two inches deep and straight across the bench. A little practice and a good eye will soon enable you to do it without the aid of a ruler, which is often used. There is no objection to the ruler except that it wastes time.

Insert the cuttings deep enough to insure their standing up when they receive a good watering. The distance apart in the row and between the rows must depend entirely on the size of the cuttings, but they must not be crowded. Good sized cuttings will need three-fourths of an inch to each cutting in the row, and one and one-half inches between the rows. For shading we use muslin. At present we need only a curtain suspended from the roof and reaching to the bench in front, but later, when the sun gets up higher, we will need another, stretched over the bench in such a manner that it can be drawn aside at will. The curtain not only keeps off the sun, but it also serves to keep off all draughts, which would wilt the cuttings and make syringing oftener a necessity. This method is certainly a great improvement over the old way of laying paper on the cuttings.

Next week we will have a talk on the merits and demerits of the older varieties.

CEMETERY PLANTING.

What is best to use in cemetery work? Something hardy would be desirable. Will florists who have been doing this kind of work please tell me through The Review what they use, whether the surface of the grave should be rounded up or flat, size of plants used and distance apart.

J. J. L.

Massachusetts.

In the beautiful cemetery in which I do a great deal of work the graves are rounded up in the old conventional style, and covered with sod. It would please the authorities of our Forest Lawn very much if the graves were all level to conform to the surface of the surrounding grass. It would save a great deal of work and the grass could be kept much fresher and greener as the mounds dry out far more than the surroundings.

I notice in the Greenwood Cemetery in Brooklyn that many of the graves are covered with English ivy. I would say there is nothing better than this beautiful plant for the purpose, but it would not be hardy in Buffalo. It would suffer during the bitter snows of March while it was severely frozen. There are quite a few graves lately covered with Vinca minor, the common periwinkle. In situations where the graves are beneath the shade of trees and grass is difficult to grow the vinca comes in excellent. It is perfectly hardy, forms a close material and looks green the whole year. It needs shearing every spring. Perhaps after a time people will be satisfied to have the graves leveled and then it will be much easier to grow the vinca or the ivy on them, and I believe that the management of all cemeteries would be glad to have it so.

In Forest Lawn no one is allowed to do any sodding or plant anything on the lot that would disturb the sod, but they have given permission of late to cover the graves with vinca where desired. All the florist is allowed to do is to put iron or wooden vases on the lot, filled with flowers. Neither are there any fences. If suiting the general effect of the lawn a tree may be on your lot, but if it is not a suitable place there is none allowed. This may seem to some a little arbitrary, but there is no doubt it is the ideal way to conduct a cemetery. I do not know of any material except the English ivy, where hardy, and the Vinca minor, with us so good for the purpose of covering graves. W. S.

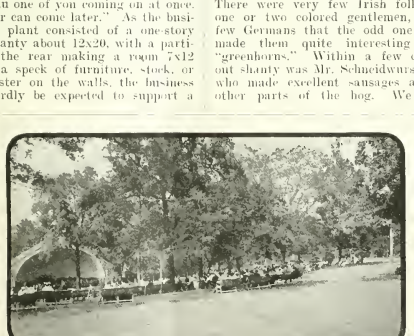
SPEAKING OF RATS, OR THE SETTLERS OF CANADA.

Three young men with very limited capital and an equal amount of experience in a new country made up their minds that working for daily wages was beneath their ability and ambitions. So while two remained earning a dollar and a half, more or less, a day, the third and youngest started on a tour of inspection, and location, and after a week of silence came the joyful news: "Have located in Stratford, Ontario. Fine opening for seed store and greenhouse. Business will at start hardly warrant more than one of you coming on at once. The other can come later." As the business and plant consisted of a one-story frame shanty about 12x20, with a partition at the rear making a room 7x12 without a speck of furniture, stock, or even plaster on the walls, the business could hardly be expected to support a large family. This building, however, was no commonplace affair. Its nocturnal occupancy by rats surpassed in numbers to the square yard any place on earth except, perhaps, the sewers of London and Paris. To a merchant this feature would not be so valued as the fact that it fronted on the market square, and a few months later every farmer who brought in his wheat and pork could not help seeing the pelargoniums and fuchsias which the young firm offered to the rural gaze.

Just a word descriptive of this thriving little city in the splendid agricultural peninsula of Ontario. Stratford in 1869 was much smaller than it is now. Through it meandered the River Avon and its wards were named Romeo, Juliet, Othello, Falstaff, etc. But there were lots of people in it who were unaware that the immortal William had ever lived. The prevailing nationality was Scotch and English. There was a liberal allowance of ministers of the gospel and most every denomination was represented. We never rented a pew from any of them. With twice the amount of spiritual care it would not have saved the merchants from the reputation of being addicted to the thrifty trick of giving a bill of sale and deed of property of all their earthly possessions and going into bankruptcy. This usually happened soon after they had laid in a large stock. But they were pillars of the church and pillars of society, and the gossip of the idle people disturbed not their peace. There were very few Irish folks, only one or two colored gentlemen, and so few Germans that the odd one or two made them quite interesting to us "greenhorns." Within a few doors of our shanty was Mr. Schneidwurstburger, who made excellent sausages and sold other parts of the hog. We bought much ham of this worthy Teuton and soon there was a back yard acquaintance between his daughter Katie and the junior partner of the seed and garden firm.

Twenty miles north of Stratford you would have in that day reached a territory but sparsely settled. Deer were brought into market on the farmers' wagons and within a mile of the center of the town a bear had visited a friend's cornfield. Making sure the bear had left, we visited the spot to see the havoc done. We always had time to listen if we could get a farmer to tell us of his early life and hardships in the woods. Many a one told us that after paying a trifle for their land, and perhaps a yoke of oxen and some scant furniture, they had absolutely not a penny left; only their pluck and strength to face the wilderness. Walking twenty miles through the woods with their first bag of wheat to the grist mill, returning with their flour and being overtaken by night a few miles from home. Leaning against a tree for rest they hallooed loud and long, and were fortunate if answered by their faithful dog at home, for that gave them their direction for another few yards of struggling on.

Bedding in a Kansas City Park.



Music Stand in a Kansas City Park.

Almost as weary a task as that of the mighty Jean Valjean with Marius on his back escaping through the labyrinth of underground Paris. Remember, young man, your education is very incomplete if you have not read Victor Hugo's immortal work. Many of these weather-beaten but now prosperous farmers were not farmers at all when they crossed the Atlantic. They were Glasgow weavers. But they were Scotch and that blood has conquered the wilderness in every clime. A brother of the great African explorer, Dr. David Livingston, was one of the early settlers a few miles from Stratford. With eager ears and keen enjoyment we listened to these stories of the lives of the early settlers. It was to me sweeter far than the strains of Sousa's band or the warbling of Patti.

We rented two acres of excellent land from the Episcopal minister, and he was typical of the class in this country. Well brought up, good looking, manly, liked his glass of ale and cigar, very respectable and poor. A friend of mine says he likes the Episcopal denomination best of all because they never bother with religion or politics. The land was plowed and sown and planted with crops that we thought would yield us the greatest revenue. Unfortunately, the land was in sod, and however good that is for corn and potatoes it is not best for onions and root crops. Our first crop to market was peas, McLean's Advancer. It was probably the first time such a superior pea had advanced inland. The third and oldest member of the firm had long before this joined the firm.

Seeds had been imported from "hold Lunnen" and New York and we did a fair business in seeds during April and May, but the seed business don't last long. Then a Toronto plant grower owed one of the partners over a hundred dollars in wages. That was all taken up in plants, and as there was no florist in Stratford in those days they went off well. Still the income was precarious, and although three young men never lived more frugally our capital steadily decreased. We bought a load of oats and inside of a week every deadbeat in town who owned a horse brought their bags round and got a bushel or two and "pay you Saturday." We bought thirty bushels of potatoes on a falling market and lost money and finally agreed that speculation was not our forte. If you had seen three able bodied young men trudging home from the field in the dusk loaded with peas in the shell and then in their 7x12 room shelling them for tomorrow's market, you would have said such industry ought to have helped us along, but it did not. The profit of the day was not more than 30 cents for the three of us.

Next door to our store was a hotel—called a tavern in Canada, a saloon in the United States, and a public house in Great Britain. We will call it an hotel, for there were stables in the rear, and if it had not been for these horse apartments this little story would never have been told. Mr. Holliday was the boniface, and very kind he was to the three young strangers. While two worked in the garden the other minded store. In that we took turns, for it was the soft snap of the firm's work. When evening came and our supper dishes were washed and there was nothing more to do but read by a poor light or stretch ourselves on the floor, the two eldest would exchange glances and from one or the other would come the bold assertion that he thought the firm could afford a glass of beer tonight. The younger member invariably demurred on the grounds that it was extravagant and unnecessary. He was doubtless right on both points, but what a poor world and what a revolution in society if we only bought and used what is an actual necessity. It was usually settled by three matches. Whoever drew the long match had the say, and the junior member never seemed to get the long one, so with measured tread we marched up to the bar of Mr. Holliday. "Three glasses of ale, Mr. Holliday, if you please." "Yes, gentlemen, glad to see you. How's business?"

I don't remember that we ever divulged the facts of our business, but we always thought he knew about the drop in potatoes and who got our oats, so we used to reply, "Fair, fair; not much doing in seeds, but plants are moving quite nicely." I am sure it used to take, or more properly, we spent at least fifteen minutes in sipping that glass of ale, and occasionally, not every time, Mr. Holliday (God bless him) would say, "Drink up, boys, and have another." I have heard that said thousands of times since, sometimes with indifference and many times with meaninoss, but when it was said by Mr. Holliday thirty-one years ago in that little Canadian village they were sweet and welcome words. I will be honest and admit that we lived close and we enjoyed the ale, and then we leisurely strolled back into our hutch, cut up some Canadian plug tobacco, filled our pipes, and by the stimulant of malt and nicotine we sat for awhile and calculated how much money we should realize from the potatoes, onions, parsnips, carrots, etc., that were growing in the parson's lot. Perhaps we figured on the cost of a greenhouse and then we figured on what horse would win next year's Derby, and then we almost quarreled about the name of the horse that won the St. Leger in '62. There were no shows visited the town; no bicycle in those days; and I can hardly think how the young people amused themselves.

You will think, my friends, that I am a long time getting to the rats. They are coming fast now. First, I must introduce you to the three young men, at least by name. The eldest was W. S., 25; the next in age was E. I. M., 24, and the youngest was A. S., 23. People often asked us where we lived. They saw us in the store or on the street, but they never could hear where we roomed or boarded and we never told them. We kept bachelor's hall in this 7x12 room. A large mattress and bed clothing we had with us had crossed the Atlantic in one of our trunks with many other useful things that we expected to use in the woods somewhere south of Hudson's bay. We always knew on the map our intended destination, but we never got within 700 miles of it, and are farther off than ever. We had a bed and bedding, but no bedstead—and had no room for one. We had knives and forks and plates and a coffee pot and frying pan. Possibly we had a saucepan, but of that I am not sure. A. S., when starting housekeeping, had purchased a boxwood stove with one hole in the top for $2.50. It had possibly done service in a fourth rate railroad station or small logging camp.

Our three meals a day never varied from the first to the last of the month. It was fried ham, bread and butter, and coffee; occasionally sausages, but seldom. It was all good of the kind and we soon got over that feeling that some people foolishly have of getting tired of the same thing for a week. We were long past that and looked not asked for anything but ham and coffee. Provisions were never bought till within five minutes of meal time, because the rats would have found them. After losing pounds of sugar and butter, loaves of bread and many slices of ham we learned that the grocer and butcher could store things better than we could, and as for an icebox, it was as foreign to us then as Noah's ark and would have been useless unless made of cast iron. We quarreled occasionally about whose duty it was to go to the butcher's, but we never disagreed about the cooking, as we took week about.

Early in the season the spout of the coffee pot had been melted off, and as it left a big hole in the pot at least a third of the way down, we always had to cleverly balance the pot on the cordwood at such an angle that it held as much as possible without running out at the spout hole. Frequently (too frequently for our peace of mind) a piece of beech or maple on which the pot was resting would burn through before the coffee boiled and over would go the pot and out would go half the coffee, quenching the fire and making short allowance of our indispensable and enjoyable stimulant. All sorts of things were said when this happened—many of the familiar phrases of Old England and some of the acquired vernacular of our adopted country. "D—m the B—— stove" was short and to the point and E. I. M. could usually think of that first. With all this we lived on and worked and slept. Edison, the great electrician, says that a variety of diet is conducive to mental activity and brightness, and a continuous diet of a low grade of food has the reverse effect. If that is so we must have been sinking very low in the activity of the molecule of grey matter. Our appetites were all right. Neither dissipation nor stress of business impaired them.

A. S. proposed that we should make a hotbed at our back door. The moment you stepped out of the dining-living-reception-bedroom you were out on the commons. No doubt our landlord knew the boundaries of his lot, but we never did, and as there was no fence we never took the trouble to inquire. No man, woman or child in our time had ever passed through that room. Several showed an inclination to do so, but they were never allowed. The tinsmith of the town was more gaily than the rest, and being a frequent caller and one of the characters that amused us, he was hard to bluff. So when he said, "Boys, I want to see your tomato plants," we looked at each other in dismay. But arrangements were soon made for rushing him through this small space. A. S. stood at the store door and said, "Here you are"; E. I. M. stood half way of the seven feet and said "Right along there," while W. S. stood at the back door and said, "Here they are." All this with outspread arms and a rush. Mr. Tinsmith went through that little room a-kiting. He had no time to survey the stove, cooking utensils or sleeping accommodations, and once through the door was bolted and he never came back. He had to take the commons and find his way home some other road.

Perhaps the most disturbing feature of our existence was, strange to say, a cow. I cannot describe the cow, for I don't remember ever seeing her in daylight, but she was the property of our neighbor, Mr. Schneidwurstburger. Our swill barrel stood close to our back door. There was never much in it, but as the vegetable business grew there were pea shucks and lettuce leaves, and these were the great attraction for Bossie. Having horns she could not get her head into the barrel, but she had enough to upset it and was generally rewarded with some green stuff. When darkness covered the face of the earth and our oil lamp was extinguished and slumber was creeping over the three prostrate forms the cow could be heard at the barrel. We stood this several days, till it became monotonous to clean up every morning. We occasionally opened the door with the intention of giving her a good swipe with something near at hand, but the cow was forty paces away every time. A. S. went to the woods and cut down a young beech tree and got a farmer to haul it to our back door. It was 12 feet long and 8 inches in diameter. One end of this was to be raised and suspended over the barrel, and by a clever piece of mechanism, when the barrel was upset down would come the log with a first-class chance of breaking the cow's back. The constable of the town was also a caller, and we divulged to him this deadly device. He said, "Don't do it; you will get into trouble." So this great death dealing effort was abandoned.

That night the three of us sat close by the door. One had a large stone, one had the castor of the poor old stove and the other had, unfortunately, a very good hammer. The light was put out and when we were sure the cow was at the barrel the door was dashed open. All we saw was something dark retreating at a long distance. The rock and castor and hammer went in her direction, but did no execution, and the hammer was never found. I am not exaggerating the speed of this wonderful bovine. Could a careful selection of her offspring have been made and a scientific selection of future generations there would now be a race of horned cattle equal in speed to the famous horse "Boralma," owned by Mr. Thomas W. Lawson, which has cleaned up all the trotters of his class this summer. When we retired for the night (I ought to say lay down for the night) E. I. M. slept on the west side, W. S. in the middle, and A. S. on the east side.

Excepting the loss of our provisions we had not seen much of the rats. Our presence had disturbed their frolics, but that did not last long. I am sure this shanty had been for a long time prior to our advent a grand rallying place for all the leading rats of the market square. Doubtless where we slept was the convention hall for the Society of Canadian Rats and Ornamental House

Water Effect in a Kansas City Park.

Rodents. There were holes for entry and exit innumerable, but the one principal approach was through a spacious hole in the northwest corner about eighteen inches from E. I. M.'s ear. For the first few nights after the arrival of W. S. we slept the sleep of the weary, undisturbed by either cow or rodent. Then we began to ask each other, "Did you feel something run over your face last night?" or "Did you hear something squeaking before you went to sleep?" and soon these symptoms increased, till at the end of three weeks the rats got over our presence and held high carnival over and around us.

One night about the time these ratification meetings began to be unpleasant we stopped up several holes, but left the principal one open. Then E. I. M. laid down, as we all did, but in his left hand he had a big rag, and one of the others had a match. In twenty minutes we came to the conclusion that there was a full meeting, so over the hole went the bag and up to the lamp went the match. It is wonderful how rats will find places of escape where you don't see them, but in spite of that we murdered eleven. This was repeated at intervals of a few nights, but even that sport gets tame. The incentive and spert of shooting or hunting is always increased by the wariness and crafty instinct of your game. If grouse and quail were as tame as the pigeons in your cote there would be no sport in shooting, or if deer were as tame as cattle they would not be hunted at all. Through ages these creatures have learned that man is their enemy and have all sorts of instinctive tricks to escape his weapons. The game birds even have assumed a color that is very similar to the leaves and barks of the trees, which has greatly helped to prevent their extinction. But without going deeper into this sublime subject, which is the "survival of the fittest," I will merely say that ratting under the conditions explained above began to pall on us and in a few weeks we gave it over and the rats had full sway. Very possibly we got accustomed to their music and pranks, and if I remember correctly we did not sleep at all well the first few nights we were away from the rats.

Midsummer and harvest time came and W. S. and E. I. M. volunteered to go out into the good agricultural district and labor in the fields and incidentally add to the firm's exchequer. We wandered all day in a splendid farming district, but did not get an engagement. The farmer we were talking to had just hired a man, but he was sure his friend, Donald McPherson, the farm just beyond his next neighbor, wanted several men. So we walked all day without results, and in the middle of the night took a train back to Stratford. On approaching the back door, strange to say, the cow was not there. Some vigorous kicks brought A. S. off his perch. Poor fellow! He had collected several old boxes and put them one on top of the other till they nearly reached the ceiling, and on them was his roosting place. He gave the wanderers anything but a hearty welcome; in fact, plainly showed his disgust at our failure. Soon after that W. S. left, never to visit Stratford again, and E. I. M. left soon after. The following spring the business was wound up, everybody was paid one hundred cents on the dollar, and the three old partners are widely scattered. If any Stratford florists should by chance see this little autobiography I can assure them that every word is true, and if old Bill Jones was alive he could prove it. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions in general have improved as to demand and there is a shortage of Beauties and red roses. In spite of this supply is still more than sufficient. Carnations have also been short of demand the last few days. All good violets that come in are quickly taken up. Both supply and demand are, however, much smaller than last year. Just lately there has been a scarcity at times. Prices are somewhat stiffer all along the line and the Christmas influence is beginning to be felt.

As to the supply for Christmas trade few will venture a prediction. All agree that Beauties and red roses will be scarce, and some think there will be a serious shortage all around. Others look for enough Brides and Maids to go around and the same as to violets. Unless we have a fair amount of bright weather during the next ten days it is likely that the supply of carnations will be insufficient. There will probably be quite a few chrysanthemums, mainly yellow in color.

A great many advance orders for Christmas have been already placed and inquiries from buyers are numerous. Indications are that the demand will be large. Prices will probably be about the same as last year.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club a letter was received from the Galveston florists acknowledging the receipt of Treasurer Sanders' last draft and stating that of all the assistance extended by the trade 50 per cent had come from Chicago. The letter expressed the gratitude of those who had been assisted by the contributions.

The report of the banquet committee was received. It named the following as contributors to the entertainment fund: Kennicott Bros. Co., McKellar & Winterson, O. P. Bassett, E. H. Hunt, E. Wienboeber, E. C. Amling, Wietor Bros., Weiland & Risch, James Hartshorne, O. J. Friedman, J. B. Deamud, J. D. Thompson, J. C. Vaughan, Peter Reinberg, Geo. Reinberg, M. Barker, A. Lange and a friend.

The papers on roses by Messrs. Geo. Collins and Paul Kopanka were very interesting and the thanks of the club were tendered to both for their valuable essays. They appear elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. W. N. Campbell was elected to membership.

At the next meeting Messrs. Walter Kreitling and P. J. Hauswirth will favor the club with some observations on the trials and tribulations of the retail florist. Walter intimates that he will color the "red violet" blue.

Various Items.

McKellar & Winterson are doing a tremendous business in supplies for Christmas trade, the volume of same being fully three times that of last year. Business is most decidedly on the rush here.

A. G. Prince & Co., who were the Chicago agents of the Hinsdale Rose Co., have decided to discontinue the commission business. The Hinsdale Rose Co. and Henry Payne will in future consign their entire stock to E. H. Hunt, whose growing business makes these additions to his list of consignors very acceptable.

The space formerly occupied by Prince & Co., which adjoined the establishment of Mr. Hunt, will be added to the latter, thus giving needed room. Mr. Prince will take charge of the greenhouses of the Hinsdale Rose Co., at Hinsdale.

Mr. Henry Payne, who some time since purchased his brother's interest in the greenhouse establishment at Hinsdale that have been conducted under the title Payne Bros., will continue the business under his own name. He is devoting nearly his whole plant to "green goods" such as Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri and Adiantums cuneatum and pinnceps.

Kennicott Bros. Co. are still receiving fine chrysanthemums and expect a fair supply for Christmas. In addition to their mahonia leaves they are now receiving from the Pacific coast what are called "Salla" leaves. They are similar in form to the leucothoe sprays, but the individual leaves are larger and more rounded. They should prove very effective for wreaths and in large designs.

Bassett & Washburn have already booked a large number of Christmas orders and say trade has never been better with them.

A. L. Randall seems to be busy all the time and is handling a lot of stock, having considerably increased his list of consignors since last year. He looks for a period of increased prosperity in the trade during the next few years and is in a position to get his share of it.

H. S. Harman, representing E. H. Hunt, reports unusually good sales during his recent trip through Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, and says that the trade generally seems very prosperous.

E. R. Tauch has taken a position with the Geo. Wittbold Co.

Recent visitors: Fred Breitmeyer, Detroit; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill.

Geo. M. Garland has his foundry almost ready for business at Des Plaines and will soon be casting iron gutters in quantity.

Mrs. C. L. Washburn has been quite ill for several weeks.

Wietor Bros. have over double the amount of glass in roses and five times the amount of glass they had in carnations last year.

H. W. S. Cleveland, the well-known landscape gardener, died Dec. 5 at the home of his son, R. D. Cleveland, in Hinsdale, aged 86 years. He did a great deal of landscape work in the parks of Chicago and Minneapolis. He prepared the original plans for Washington Park, this city, and also had charge of the work on Drexel boulevard. The body was taken to Minneapolis for burial.

Fred Ewert is now salesman for A. H. Poehlmann, vice C. S. Stewart, who left the position last Sunday.

Fred Anderman, formerly a well known grower at Lake Forest, is held at the Detention Hospital, awaiting examination as to his sanity. He has long been a victim of the morphine habit.

Bowling.

Another set of league games was played by the bowlers last Monday evening. The scores follow:

G. Stollery	177	152	203
F. Stollery	178	150	304
F. J. Hauswirth	127	153	135
E. Winterson	141	147	122
C. Balluff	152	159	137
Totals	773	761	701

There was some bowling after the club meeting last Friday evening, but the scorer was held up and lost the scores.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business, since last report, has been rather quiet. The weather has been fine but not cold enough for the flower business since Thanksgiving Day.

Cut flowers of all kinds are not scarce and prices have dropped a little since last week. A great many of the local rose growers claim to be off crop and that roses will be scarce for Christmas and especially so if dull weather should set in. With this one exception everything promises to be in full supply.

Romans and paper whites are still coming in in large quantities. Violets have been in great demand the past week and brought $1 per 100 for the best Californias. Harrisii and callas are scarce.

Roses have been selling the past week as low as 25 cents per dozen in the retail stores downtown. The varieties were mostly Brides and Maids. The best stock in Meteors bring from $4 to $8; Maids and Brides, $4 to $6; Perles and Woottons, $3 and $4; Carnots and Gates, $4 and $5; Beauties, of the first grade, are very scarce and $3 per dozen is asked for the best and from that down to $1 per dozen.

Carnations vary in quality and there is not an oversupply. Good stock brings $1.50 and $2, with fancies at $2.50 and $3. The demand is good and few are left over after the morning sales.

Choice valley is held at $5 and some is sold as low as $3; Romans and Narcissus, $3.

Christmas prices are unsettled and the general sentiment of the commission men is against any large advance. Holly and green have made their appearance and some of the large downtown stores are already decorated, but not so elaborate as last year, as green is very scarce and of course the heavy demand for ground pine will keep the prices up. Commission men are asking as high as $15 per 100 pounds.

Green wreathing is selling at retail at 10 cents per yard, against 3 cents in former years. The little holly that is in the market is good but not heavily berried.

Bowling.

The bowling scores of Monday night were as follows:

	1.	2.	3.	4.	Total.	Av.

Trade Conditions.

Nothing alarming has developed up to the 10th of the month. As expected, Thanksgiving knocked the bottom out of the chrysanthemum business, thereby giving other flowers a better chance at what little trade there has been since, and as the cut has not been very heavy, prices have held up very well on everything and particularly well on good white pinks. Quantities of stock have been badly affected by so much cloudy and rainy weather, especially roses, which, however, recuperated wonderfully under the better conditions at the end of the week. Two or three growers claimed $3 per dozen for a few choice ones, $1.50 and $2 being general, and 3 and 4 cents each being the lowest limit. Pinks, 2 to 6 cents; violets, 75 cents to $1, and other material at regular rates. The embargo seems to have been raised on the output of the Waban Rose Conservatories, as they have cut some particularly fine goods within a very few days, including as good Beauties as were ever seen in the city, which demanded $9 per doz.

Various Notes.

George Sutherland starts the new century in new quarters at 34 Hawley street, where he has engaged roomy accommodations. The location is immediately in the rear of the famous "Raymond Syndicate." All hands will please join me in extending seasonable compliments and best wishes. He also speaks of retaining a small room in the new building soon to be erected on the site of his present location.

Peter Fisher has been "saying nothing but sawing wood" just the same, all the time the other fellows have been showing new seedling pinks. He now suddenly crops out with half a dozen enormous blooms of different colors, which are surely on a par with anything yet seen. It looks as if there might be another banker's wife among them.

The most important item connected with a very recent visit of John May, of Summit, N. J., is his purchase of R. Montgomery's new rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames. Substantial compliments from good authority!

A ton of tobacco stems in W. J. Dana's new boiler house got on fire recently and the building was quite badly damaged before the fire department arrived. Mr. Dana went into the room to break the water gauge glass, which prevented the spread of the flames, but gave the dense smoke an opportunity to almost overcome him.

Thomas W. Lawson persists in posing as a good angel to the floral profession. This time he buys a rocky farm of Mr. McCarthy, so that the latter is said to have banked an $8,000 profit on it.

A new floral firm advertises to open on Bromfield street, opposite Rosenthal's. The sign reads: "Sheridan & Diehl."

Another new firm is Lawson & Taylor, who lately sold out in same business in Worcester, and came here, establishing themselves on Boylston street near its union with Mass. avenue.

Francis Quinlan, of Quinlan Bros., one of the leading floral firms of Lynn, is a candidate for alderman in his city. Good fellow, too.

The Market.

The cut flower market last week continued very active. Beauties of high grade advanced to $5 a dozen for local and $6 a dozen for select shipping orders. Liberty and Meteor sold well. The former is chiefly in the hands of the commission man. Many of the growers who sell their stock themselves have a hundred or two plants, but not enough to count as a factor in the market. Brides and Maids were plentiful and remained firm. Kaiserins are becoming scarcer.

Carnations stiffened in price. Anything will bring $2 a hundred, choice stock $3 and $4 a hundred. Violets sold well, doubles at $1.50 a hundred and singles about half that price. Chrysanthemums appeared to have taken a new lease of life; there were more offered

TO THE TRADE:

Having decided to discontinue the city salesroom of the Hinsdale Rose Co., we would ask our present and past customers to forward their orders for what is needed in the line of CUT FLOWERS, GREENS, Etc., to

to whom the Hinsdale Rose Co. will in future consign its product.

than ever before in early December. Good stock brought $3 a dozen, and very ordinary brought $1 to $1.50 a dozen readily. Valley was in brisk demand at $3 and $4, and even $5 a hundred for specials.

Foliage plants were in brisk demand. Some extra fine stock in medium sizes is seen. A few good chrysanthemums in pots are still in the stores and a great many choice flowering plants of other kinds are expected before Christmas.

Various Items.

Among the principal events of the week was a dinner given on Monday evening at the Bellevue to the Peace Commissioners. The decorations were very handsome, including, we are told, a great bank of Beauties covering one entire side of the dining room, and, of course, a choice display of pink carnations, the latter on and over the table.

The club meeting on the following evening, Tuesday, suffered somewhat from the heavy rains in point of attendance. The features of the evening were the paper prepared by Albert M. Herr on carnations, and the exhibition of flowers, which included vases of the new roses Queen of Edgely and Robert Scott.

The bowling team won a good fight with the Pennsylvania Bicycle Club.

A Visit to Wyncote.

Joseph Heacock has a really wonderful place at Wyncote, Pa. It is already third in point of size and is the equal of any greenhouse plant in or near this city in its appointments. The situation is ideal, the houses being on the side of a hill which rises gently to the north, keeping off the cold winds of winter and giving the sun full play. There are ten houses of Beauties, with walks around the outside, three houses each of Brides and Maids, and one house of Meteors, the latter in grand shape; these seven houses still have side benches.

There are three mammoth houses of kentias and arecas and a number of small north side houses with smaller sizes of the same varieties, also, with cocos and latanias. The specimen palms from 6 to 12 feet high have all gone, their places being filled by the quicker selling sizes, in from 6 to 8-inch pots. There are also two houses of carnations and a small one partly filled with Cypripedium insigne. The grafted roses and Adiantum cuneatum have disappeared.

The place impressed me especially by its general air of thrift and neatness. The houses are well built and in good condition, the plants clean and vigorous; there was evidence of system and judgment manifest in every detail. PHIL.

LIFE OF BOILER AND PIPES.

In answer to J. M.'s inquiry: The life of a cast iron heating boiler depends very largely upon the care and conditions under which it is run. The average life is about ten years, although I know of many which are still in use after fifteen years' continuous use, and others which have given out after five or six years' life.

A cast iron boiler should have the flues kept thoroughly clean, especially during the summer, when not in use; the ashes and cinders should be removed from the fire box and ash pit, the entire inside of the fire box and flues swabbed over with crude oil, the smoke pipe taken down and all fire and clean-out doors left open so as to allow of a free circulation of air to all parts; if these precautions are taken you may safely rely on getting twelve or fourteen years' use from your boiler.

The life of the cast iron heating pipes is very long. I have never seen any which have worn out in active service. The life of the wrought iron pipes is like the life of the boilers, dependent upon the conditions of use. In a house having fair drainage and with an occasional light coat of paint they will last for very many years, but if the ground in the house is always wet and the pipes never painted they will give out in five or six years.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and annual election of officers was held December 5. No topic was furnished by the essay committee and only one question in question box, showing a decline in interest in these features. The question was: "Is mushroom spawn affected by change of climate or exposure to damp before use?" The election resulted as follows: President, John Hayes; vice president, Dietrick Kindsgrab; secretary, Geo. Smith; treasurer, Malcolm Mac Rorie. The last two named were re-elected. All are private gardeners. J. B. D.

JOPLIN, MO.—T. J. Noll has opened a new floral store down town.

NEW HAMPTON, IA.—E. J. Springer has made additions to his glass and now has his place in fine shape.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held their regular monthly meeting on Monday night last and elected the following to serve as officers of the club for the ensuing year: President, Walter F. Sheridan; vice president, Alexander Wallace; treasurer, Charles B. Weathered; secretary, John Young; and for trusteeship, W. H. Siebrecht, Frank Traendly and W. Burnham. The usual calls for speeches were made and responded to by the officers-elect, each assuring the meeting that their best efforts and fidelity would be devoted to the club's interests.

It is, we feel, quite unnecessary for us to write of the president-elect of the club, for he is widely known and known, too, for his sterling qualities. Under his guidance the club is sure to accomplish much in the furtherance of floriculture.

It was decided to hold a flower show in the Madison Square Garden the week commencing Oct. 21 next year. The arrangements made with the Garden company were very satisfactory. The club is to furnish the prizes, the company attends to the advertising, etc. Immediate steps were taken to commence preparation, and it was decided that a committee to be known as the exhibition committee be formed and that a ways and means committee be appointed to get in touch with all the necessaries for a grand show. Mr. Herrington hoped that the schedule would be out by March in order to have some things specially grown. He promised to lay the matter before the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and felt sure that body would do all it could to make the show a success. Mr. Herrington was delegated to represent the club at the Chrysanthemum Society's meeting. Mr. Withers spoke for the American Dahlia Society, offering to do all he could to have that society become interested, and he was forthwith appointed to represent the club at the Dahlia Society's meeting. Wm. Bartholomae promised to bring the matter before the New York Gardener's Society. Frank Traendly was deputed to make arrangements for a bowling tournament, to be held during the week of the show. W. J. Stewart said that he was confident that the Society of American Florists would do what it could to help the club, and he had no doubt but that several medals would be offered by the society. Mr. Stewart was appointed to represent the club in the matter.

Open weather prevails, and nurserymen report splendid trade. The cut flower business is dull, prices in many cases were never lower at this time of the year. All expect a good Christmas, and we hope there will be none disappointed. J. I. D.

Good employes are hard to find and not easy to grow. Encourage some one of yours by making him or her a present for Christmas of our $5.00 copy of "The Florists' Manual."

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH.—The legal complications regarding the estate of the late T. T. Lyon have been removed and the State Horticultural Society comes into possession of the land bequeathed to it by Mr. Lyon. It will be continued as an experiment station by the society.

ONE DOLLAR will bring the Review to you every week for a year. Fifty-two numbers—less than 2 cents a week.

the new household magazine, offers in its first number $335 in prizes for the best letter on the subject of

"Why Dinner Tables Should be Decorated with Flowers."

It also contains an article on "Flowers in the Dining Room," which is calculated to make householders and housewives patronize the florists more. Similar articles from the pens of leading writers on household subjects will be published throughout the year. These articles will be sure to benefit the florists business.

You should read these essays and try to make others read them, because of this self-evident fact. If you mail or hand copies of the magazines containing these articles to present or prospective customers, with your card, it would be sure to prove effective and welcome advertising.

WASHINGTON.

Business the past week has been very good, the coming in of congress bringing lots of trade. From the appearance of the Capitol on Monday last, it looked like a congress of flowers. Everywhere you looked were flowers and flowers. Some baskets were seven feet across, that of Mark Hanna's being made entirely of Beauties. In fact every desk was literally piled up with basket bouquets. There were lots of boxes of flowers sent also.

The coming out of several society young ladies last week caused an unusual rush for pink stuff as well as Beauties.

All up-town stores did a land office business last week; some stores could be seen open until midnight.

Prices: In roses, Beauties go fine at $6 per doz. and smaller sizes at $3 to $4 per doz.; Brides and Maids are coming in very fine and bring 6 to 12 cents; La France, Meteor and Golden Gate, from 6 to 10 cents. Carnations are coming in rather slow, but quality fairly good and go well at 2 cents, some fancy grades as high as 3 cents. Chrysanthemums are pretty well cut out for the season, yet some late varieties are still lingering on and go at $2 to $3 per doz. Violets seem very plentiful and cards can be seen in windows offering them at 25 cents per bunch of 50, although this is mostly shipped stuff, homegrown violets bringing $1 per 100. Romans and paper whites can be gotten in large quantities at from 2 to 3 cents.

Robt. Lacey has opened his new store at 507 F street and is doing a nice business.

Litzinger & Wach are receiving some fine shipments of violets and fancy carnations.

F. N. Bolgiano has completed his new conservatory in the rear of his store and reports business good.

Mr. Kennedy is another on our list of stores on 14th street.

N. Studer has leased a building on 12th street, which he is remodeling for a store, which will be finished by Christmas. Who is next?

Visitors the past week were: Mr. Kilian of Chicas & Boddington; O. A. C. Oehmler of Aldred & Co., New York; E. T. Harding of American Paper Box Co.; Paul Berkowitz of Bayersdorfer & Co.

F. H. Kramer.

PEORIA, ILL.

Thanksgiving trade was excellent, and business has been good since. Stock of all kinds is scarce, the result of the dark, cloudy weather. The McDougal-Jack wedding was a grand affair. The church was handsomely decorated with palms, festooning, smilax and holly. Holiday prospects are first-class. Artur.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

Various Items.

Trade has been some better during the past week, and good quality stock finds ready sale owing partly to the let-up in 'mums and partly to better weather. There are few good 'mums around, and it seems as though everybody has suddenly discovered that they need a few, consequently they are bought up quickly.

The stores are displaying in their windows stock which is usually classed as Christmas stock. Poinsettias, Cyclamen and Gloire de Lorraine are now the choicest, and they are a relief after the long season of 'mums and nothing else to break the monotony.

A. Wiegand & Sons are very proud of their new store, which is certainly a fine one, and they usually have something nice in their windows. Brother George took an extensive trip around the east, and seems to have picked up some good ideas in window decorations.

Bertermann Bros. keep up a good show in their fine large window at all times.

During the past week one of our florists had an employee up in court for stealing flowers, and the judge instead of punishing the culprit acquitted him and rebuked the complainant for having had him arrested. This is certainly a strange kind of justice. We cannot understand why a man should be allowed to steal flowers from his employer any more than a clerk in a bank should be allowed to steal the money he handles for the bank.

On Tuesday Mr. Langstaff, our worthy vice president, entertained the florist club at his home. There were not as many present as were expected, but we had a fine time. Mrs. Langstaff knows how to get up a good supper, and Miss Langstaff, who is a celebrated singer, favored us with several selections. The singing alone was worth going many times as far to hear. Those who did not come certainly missed a treat.

A Trip to Richmond.

Last Sunday the writer took the train for Richmond, and when I say Richmond you will, no doubt, think of E. G. Hill and his many houses full of interesting new things. Of course, I went to see them, and found them in good shape. Here you can see all the good new and old carnations, chrysanthemums (if you come in season), geraniums and roses, and all kinds of other miscellaneous novelties.

Some of Mr. Hill's seedling roses are grand and will no doubt be heard from later. The No. 19 is certainly a grand thing, and one can almost imagine it taking the place of Beauty. They have been crossing our good bedding geraniums with the large English round-flowering varieties, and the result is marvelous—fine, large blooms on sunproof foliage.

The real object, florally, of my visit though, was the carnation Dorothy, at E. T. Graves'. I have been watching this carnation for over a year and I am convinced that it's going to be one of the coming pink carnations. You must see it for yourself to realize what a fine thing it is. There it stands, like a wheatfield, with stems over two feet long and as straight as a soldier. I have never seen such a heavy crop of buds and blooms anywhere at this time of the year. The bloom is best described as greatly improved Scott on a strong, wiry stem. The growth is more like Mrs. Joost, but it is stronger. The color is not quite my ideal for a pink, but they claim that it sells at top prices in the Chicago market. Even while I was there a telegram came from their commission man wanting several hundred more for a special order. We have long been ready for an improved Scott, and I believe here it is, but, of course, you must take into consideration that it is being grown by an expert carnation grower.

Their White Clouds are grand and, in fact, all their carnations show a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Charles Knopf is the grower in charge here. A. B.

The pointers on some one page of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, will save you the price of it.

PITTSBURG.

Various Notes.

Cut flower trade has been quite satisfactory with the retailer. Chrysanthemums are about done, and roses, carnations, etc., have their innings now.

J. B. Murdoch, on Smithfield street, has about as fine a flower store as one would care to see.

A. M. Murdoch, on Fifth avenue, seems to hold a select trade.

A. W. Smith, Sixth avenue, is doing quite a large business and has, with his roomy store, facilities to handle it.

Randolph & McClements are always busy with decorations. With their well appointed store right in the fashionable part of the city, their greenhouses connected with it, their many teams and fine vans, they are enabled to promptly fill all orders.

L. I. Neff, on Sixth street, who succeeded the B. A. Elliott Co., is, besides his cut flower trade, doing a big business in flower seeds, bulbs, etc.

The Ludwig firms in Allegheny Market always make a fine display, which is well worth a stranger's time to go and see, especially on Saturday. R. Faulk & Son, also do a good business in same market.

Breitenstein & Flemm, corner Market and Liberty streets, have built up quite a trade on extra fancy violets and American Beauties.

As $4 per 100 has been the price for the best violets for some time, it is no wonder that some of our growers are still trying to grow them, but apparently with no success.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. seems to fill that long felt want for a good cut flower commission house in our city. Messrs. Clark and Langhans, secretary and treasurer respectively of the firm, are certainly doing all they can to please every one and handle the stock carefully. The latter is a big point, as it hurts a lover of flowers to see some one throw them about like old shoes, after the grower has done his best to bring them to perfection. By the way, I saw a box come in from one of our growers one day and watched it unpacked. On top was Asparagus plumosus in bunches and strings, under it a couple of hundred carnations and under these at the bottom of the box were the fancy roses, and you may know how they looked pressed flat with that weight on top of them.

I nearly forgot to mention genial Thos. Ulam with his cozy store on Fifth avenue, who is working hard and making money, apparently.

The weather seems to clear up now for Christmas. We had no sunshine all last week. Baer.

Both useful and handsome would be a copy of the Florists' Manual as a Christmas present.

BUFFALO.

There have been a good many parties of late; one in particular was a very large and fashionable ball on Delaware avenue. Sherry, the caterer, was here from New York. An orchestra of thirty-three pieces supplied the music; an army of policemen, firemen, carpenters, decorators and mechanics of all kinds were in attendance in case their services were needed. It was altogether a very swell affair and the floral decorations were very fine. Having a conservatory attached to the mansion, their own palms were largely used. W. J. Palmer & Sons supplied large quantities of the finest roses and chrysanthemums, which occupied prominent places in the rooms. There have been a great many parties of lesser magnitude, all of which have been good for trade. Everything points to a very gay season and all flowers will be in great demand.

The weather has been so very unfavorable for nearly a month past that it seems to have told on the quality of roses and carnations. There is now a change for the better and we will expect a better supply both in quality and quantity. The banks of the Hudson have been sending up some grand violets this last week. We believe that this Christmas is going to be a great time for plants as it has been for several years past and Buffalo is pretty well supplied. Messrs. Palmer & Sons have a very fine lot of poinsettias, lilies and azaleas. Neubeck & Myers are gay with Gloire de Lorraine and azaleas. Mr. Legg, Delaware avenue, also has been very successful with this beautiful begonia and has a fine lot. Mr. Rebstock is well supplied with poinsettias, cyclamen, begonias and azaleas.

We are a little modest in speaking of our own place, but I will quote the words of our friend Mr. Mott, who was here for the ninth time this year. As he stood at the door of No. 5 and looked along the middle bench, seven feet wide and 100 feet long, he gave that peculiar Delaware river gasp and said: "By Jove! old fellow; I never saw such a sight as that." This bench is filled with poinsettias. They begin at one foot high and gradually rise to a height of six feet—one sheet of scarlet bracts. As I have sometimes said before, these plants have been grown for so many years in Buffalo that they now call them the Christmas flower.

We had last week a visit from Mr. Phil Breitmeyer. The death of a friend brought him to our city. We are always glad to see such a whole-souled, wide-awake florist as is Phil. Young Mr. Harry Pennock was also here; the gentleman who owns the locomobile. We had no idea that he would ever venture out as a drummer, but he is going to make a first-class one. He is selling all kinds of things to attach to flowers and plants to make them more attractive. If this continues we shall believe that the frills and their accessories will be more important than the flowers and plants. Mr. Kasting is getting in carloads of holly and you already see it on the streets. Ground pine he reports as away up in price and hard to get.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

Full blown you beam
And glint and gleam—
Each petal's like a fishbone.
And 'at the foot Ball match you're put On Arabella's wishbone.
'Tis there you shine
And never pine
While panting like the grampus,
Each player glides
And slips and slides
And bumps along the campus.
Chrysanthemum! Chrysanthemum!
You are the whiskered bloom
That blows apace
And lights with grace
Thanksgiving's pensive gloom.

You lightly bob
And glow and throb
Athwart the flowered damask.
And thrill to hear
Fair Guinivere
For turkey or for ham ask.
You charm the board
Whose gobbler lord
Begilds our fairy vision.
And see the gay
Bird tucked away
With swiftness and precision.
Chrysanthemum! Chrysanthemum!
Today your happy fate
It is to be
From sea to sea
The turkey's running mate.

Chrysanthemum,
To stay you've come.
Your glory fate can stop not;
From morn till night
All feet the light
That glimmers on your topknot.
All swear by you,
For it's as true
As that we all are living.
With you away
Thanksgiving Day
Would hardly be Thanksgiving.
Chrysanthemum! Chrysanthemum!
You're here, and ever may
It be your fate
To make elate
And gild Thanksgiving Day.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., register new carnations as follows:

Norway, a seedling of Mrs. Fisher, color pure white, flowers 2½ to 3½ inches in diameter, fragrant; stems long and strong.

Egypt, color scarlet crimson, flowers uniformly 2½ to 3 inches in diameter, fragrant; stems 2½ to 3 feet.

A. C. Zvolanek, Grand View, Somerset Co., N. J., registers Sweet Pea Miss Florence E. Denzer, a white seedling between Zvolanek's Christmas and Emily Henderson; height, four feet outdoors five and a half feet under glass; a continuous bloomer, especially adapted for winter flowering; stems up to 16 inches long, usually bearing three flowers each; flange narrow and of a dark green color.

W. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

AS TO CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Roses is always roses—pink, like a maiden blush,
An' sweet, like the breath o' summer time it comes in the twilight hush;
Red as a blazin' poppy, yellow as gleamin' gold,
Or white as a fallin' snowflake—with beauty that isn't cold.
Roses is always roses—glad when the year time comes.
Give me the roses always—sweet as the chrysanthymums.

Roses is always roses—always an' every the same—
Go; no use for a flower when I can't pronounce its name.
Pooh! What's the good of a blossom that looks like part of a lunch,
Looks like some raggedy salad, or straw that's tied in a bunch?
Roses fer me! Yes, roses—they are ma fav'rites, by gum!
Catch me a-wearin' that woolly affair—chrissy anthymum!

Roses is always roses—I like their glow an' their gleam.
They never look like a tackle or some kind o' football team.
These here chrysanthymum flowers—sort of an unraveled bloom—
Looks like a shaggy ol' poodle, layin' all over the room.
Roses fer me! Jest roses! Somehow I'd ruther be dumb
Than try to say I'm in favor o' this here cursonthymum.

COE RIDGE, O.—Reep Bros. are completing a new range of five houses covering about 70x70 feet of ground. Two are planted with carnations and one with violets.

MONROE, WIS.—Mrs. E. R. Copeland reports business first-class, and says her sales during the past month have been the largest of any month in the twelve years she has been in the business.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Benj. Kramer has started in the business in good style at the corner of Eighth and Walnut streets. He has a fine stand close to the Union Station, and, being a hustler, will no doubt make things hum. Everything is new, nice and clean around his place. He has about 8,000 feet of glass.

A DEPARTURE from the conventional in the way of price-lists is that recently issued by the Morris Floral Company, Morris, Ill. On the title page appears a fine half-tone portrait of Mr. A. Mitting, the president and general manager of the company, and who owns a majority of the company's stock. In connection with this is reprinted from the county history a sketch of Mr. Mitting's life and of the organization and progress of the company in which he has always been the moving spirit. Then follows the price-list, freely illustrated by fine half-tone engravings, which are beautifully printed on enameled book paper. It is well gotten up, and is sure to receive more than passing notice.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Chas. D. Mills has purchased the interest of Peter W. Wachter in the firm of Mills & Wachter. The purchase includes the ground upon which the greenhouses and nursery are located.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

BURPEE'S PRIZES.

Each year Messrs. W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, offer a liberal list of prizes for finest specimens of vegetables grown from their seeds, and they have sent us a printed list of the winners of prizes the past season for specimens of Burpee's Quarter Century tomato, Burpee's willow leaf bush lima bean and Australian yellow onion. The prizes foot up to a total of $335 in cash, and the winners represent almost every section of the United States and Canada. Evidently "Burpee's seeds grow" almost everywhere.

YOU CAN MAKE your employes more valuable to you and at the same time show an interest in them that will be appreciated by presenting them with copies of the Florists' Manual. Christmas is a good time to do it.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Events will happen in the lives of all
Affecting the plans of the great or small.

We are very sorry for our long and unavoidable absence from the pages of the Review. The medicinal qualities of plant or flower for the time overshadowed their beauty and for that reason we hope the numerous friends who have sent us unanswered queries pertaining to Christmas decorations, etc., will be kind enough to excuse our forced silence.

From present prospects this year's Christmas trade will break all records. Vast preparations have been made, and if you don't make more money than you did last year the fault will most likely be your own. Study the requirements of your particular class of trade and give the people what they want. It is useless to get up expensive metropolitan fancies for rural local trade, and we might say vice-versa, and yet often the most obscure florist is called upon to equal if not exceed the creations of the best city florists. Information is always valuable even if seldom used. We have missed so many weekly chats with you that we can only now try to catch up and will take the Christmas trade in sections.

Cut Flowers.

The prices of good quality flowers will not vary very much from those of former years; lower grade stock will be cheaper. The increasing plant trade is responsible for this; people want the best they can get all the time but more especially at Christmas. The best American Beauties will bring $24 per doz., the next grade $15 to $18 per doz., and so on down to $6. Highest grade Brides, Bridesmaids, Meteors, Golden Gates, will fetch from $3 to $5 per doz. Liberties will be made a specialty of and as high as $10 will be asked for top grade. There will be more roses sold at $1.50 to $2.50 per doz. than at the prices quoted above; they will be the long pickled, washed out Bridesmaids, the purple Meteors, the flabby Brides, Perles, Cusins, in fact the common stock of the market.

New Roses will be made a specialty of; the supply will of course be scarce. "Sarah Nesbit," a sport of Mme. Cusin, originated by Benjamin Dorrance, is a pretty rose of Mme. de Watteville color; it is very popular in New York. Robert Scott, the new pink rose, seems also to have a bright future before it. Its color and shape is after the Mme. Gabriel Luizet type, and when it is grown properly it will be in demand for its size. Queen of Edgeley promises to be a winner, but new roses are seldom of much account to the retail cut flower trade for the first year.

As in former years, color in roses will be an important factor in their popularity. Thus we expect Meteor and Liberty and Papa Gontier to be favorites. Pink roses will sell well if they are pink. Carnations will undoubtedly be popular, and already several new varieties are bringing very high prices. "Prosperity" leads at $3 per doz.; the asking price at Christmas will probably be $5. Fancy carnations will bring all the way from $1.50 to $3 per doz. "Roosevelt" will be very popular, and such as Crane, Lawson, Mrs. Jas. Dean, etc., etc., promise to go quickly. The prettiest carnation on the New York market at present is one named "Goethe"; it is a delicate pink color and is sure to be popular everywhere. Scotts seemed to have degenerated terribly. Joost is a prime favorite on account of its stiff stem and good color, and most important of all—its keeping quality. White carnations are becoming less important to the retail trade; it is necessary to always have a few on hand, but money is lost on them more often than gained. Ordinary grades of carnations will sell at 75c to $1 per doz.

Orchids will be few. Cattleya Percivaliana is too small for the American trade; the people are accustomed to seeing an abundance of the larger varieties. Of course it fills up a gap in the season but the same price cannot be expected for it; they will probably bring from $7.50 to $9 per doz. Cypripedium insigne will retail at $2.50 to $3. Lily of the valley was remarkably scarce the past month and brought tremendous prices, so high in fact that many refused to consider it. All bulb stock promises to be plentiful for Christmas, and you can sell valley at $1.50 to $2 per bunch of 25; Roman hyacinths, $1 a bunch; 75c for paper white narcissus; jonquils, $1 and $1.50. Violets are the most troublesome flower in the whole business, and if you cannot get them good and sweet handle as few as possible; they will bring from $3 to $5 per 100. Poinsettias from 50c to 75c each.

A great deal could be written on cut flowers for Christmas. It is easy to throw away your profits by reckless buying or the careless way of putting them up. The florist doing any kind of a prosperous business should have a careful man specially detailed to care for the cut flowers, to keep them in good condition and hand them out as wanted. The salesman or "maker up" as a rule has no time, often less inclination to fix an upset vase of flowers; it is rush and grab at what catches the eye; a good man at your ice-box will earn ten times his wage.

A great deal of money is needlessly thrown away in the reckless use of greens; few people consider it right to charge them for stevia, mignonette or fern that is usually thrown in, but you cannot get it for nothing. Use appropriate greens, put nothing in the box that will not harmonize in the arrangement of flowers. We particularly refer to the custom pursued by many of slapping a bunch of common ferns into a box containing choice flowers.

Cut Flower Boxes.

As to the proper way of arranging flowers in a box first be careful of the size used, and secondly never cut out the end of a box unless in extreme cases; better reverse the flowers putting the stems under the heads of those placed in the opposite direction. Carnations and all bulbous stock is better bunched; scattered effects are troublesome and inartistic. When people open a box of flowers the first thought is of their beauty, the second on how to arrange them to keep; consider this when packing them. A spray of holly or mistletoe can be put in every box of flowers you send out from now until Christmas, and in many cases a neat calendar or card announcing your specialties for Christmas can be put with the holly at the bottom or end of each box of flowers.

The best cut flower box is white enameled paper with gold border, and for select customers the boxes for the Christmas day orders will be tied with berry red taffeta ribbon; a sprig of holly or mistletoe in the bow instead of inside the box; ribbon used for this purpose is cheap and you can afford it on anything over $5. You need not tie the ribbon crossways as you do cord unless it is narrow; across and a bow is sufficient with broad ribbon. First impressions is everything both as to outside and inside a box, and the contents are apt to be more appreciated if the exterior is attractive. When putting up lily of the valley, whether in ordinary bunch or corsage, cut the cord away and tie with No. 2 white or pale blue ribbon.

A New York florist has gotten up for sale a rather pretty idea for covering the handle of bouquets. These handle covers are made in colors to match the flower; they are shaped after the old kid finger, but are made of silk with a running ribbon string at the top; they are the best thing out for violets. We have always advocated the discarding of tinfoil on violets because it kills their fragrance; the best houses in New York use it no more; a silk tasseled cord is tied in a bow on the stems and the box is tied with silk cord or violet ribbon; violet colored tags to match. Gold braid is very popular this year and one florist ties his violets with it.

Ribbons will be much used; we don't mean in abundance, but more generally, and the principal reason is because there is an oversupply of white or dead colors in plants and flowers. The American flower buyer is not addicted to sensational glaring colors, but they have little use for pale, washed-out, funeral effects, hence in order to sell much of the stock offered it is necessary to enliven it by a bit of color.

Plants.

All the presentable flowering and small foliage plants in the neighborhood of New York city were sold to the retailers many weeks ago, and more plants will be offered this Christmas than ever before. There is nothing specially new in the stock, but in the arranging of it more care will be used, and many novel touches will be seen and appreciated. The American plant grower has yet much to learn. His supply of good stock is not equal to the demand. The plants this year are not as good as they might be, and the variety and quantity are both wanting. There is a future for those who will specialize on Christmas and Easter plants.

Well grown Ardisia crenulata is one of the best things to be offered in New York this time. Some very fine plants are on sale and when trimmed will bring from $3 to $10 each; they are put in red, green or white pot baskets with a cluster bow of baby red ribbon half way up or on top of the plant. Keep holly away from them for it only cheapens the effect. Small orange trees will be popular done up in green pot covers and trimmed with orange gauze or narrow taffeta ribbon; they will sell at $4 to $10; pans of dwarf poinsettias will sell quickly; plant a few small ferns or arrange a few sprays of holly on the top of the pans; you can rig up pot covers made of Princess pine or holly; need not use any ribbon on this plant; good bracts bring $1 each, small ones half that. Cyclamen, if well grown, will be good stock to have, and if it is poor use it up in basket work; they will retail at $1.50 to $2.50 trimmed. Azaleas of the Simon Mardner or Vervaeneana varieties will be offered, but we think they will go best in made up work; so will ericas and the few other things available.

Unless a plant is in first class condition better use it up in basket work. Hampers and flat baskets of plants will be a leading feature in every first class florist's store this Christmas. They can be arranged long before the day comes, and there is not so much risk with them as in cut flowers, and most often there is more profit and satisfaction derived from them. The one drawback is the cost of tin-lined baskets. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will be a very pretty item this Christmas. The stock offered is very good. Plants in pans are the best and they can be sold just as they are or trimmed with ribbon; or put several in a low basket; they will not stand abuse, neither will any other plant, and their great beauty deserves recognition and care.

Dealers in baskets can well afford to stop the joke of annually visiting Europe for novelties. It will pay them better to study the requirements of the American market and manufacture home products to satisfy it; they cannot do it by purchasing abroad. They must sooner or later realize the fact that the present and the long future demands quality of plant, simplicity of trimmings. People do not go to a florist's store to buy baskets; flower or plant should, therefore, represent at least 75 per cent of what is offered.

Thorley this year is offering one of the prettiest and most sensible plant arrangements ever seen, and it would be well to offer it everywhere. A common plant pan is used; the most effective sizes are from 12 to 16-inch. In the center is a tall Dracaena terminalis, surrounding it are small kentias, arecas, Pandanus Veitchii, highly colored crotons, Dracaena Godseffiana, small ferns, selaginella, or anything that's bright and pretty. The plants are artistically arranged and put in to keep. The pan is heavily covered with paper and over this is put a broad ribbon tied with long streamer and short bow in front. Almost anything in the way of foliage or flowering plant can be so arranged, and if properly done will sell readily and at a good price.

Flat round baskets of primulas or cyclamens are good. Half open hampers of mixed or separate bulbous flowers will go well, too; plant the bulbs in clusters in wet moss. A well arranged basket or pan of Dutch bulbs will compare with anything you can get up. The baskets of plants will depend on how well you can make them appear at a small cost, and although almost anything can be used it is essential that some bright flower or plant occupy the center. Don't smother everything with ribbon, have just enough to put a festive touch to the design and be careful of the color. Crepe paper will not be used in first class trade this Christmas; better a clean pot than a mussed up paper cover, besides, the plant is often allowed to die for fear of spoiling the paper pot cover. If people don't see it around they will not ask for it; a painted pot, or as suggested above a simple wire frame covered with greens is prettiest and best. Fads like people die when abused.

Greens.

Don't be afraid to have plenty of greens about your store, and make it look as if a live man or woman reigned there. It is an easy and inexpensive matter to introduce some pretty form of exterior and interior decorations at your store; make them attractive; it pays to do so. Holly seems to be good, and if you have any left it can be used in many ways after Christmas. It requires an experienced hand to make a good holly wreath, and after all is said and done it is the best thing you can offer for window decorations. The wreaths sold in the best stores are made specially at a cost of from 75c to $1 each, and they retail at $2.50; they are worth it compared to the rif-raff bought in the market. Don't begrudge to pay for a good thing providing you can sell it at a profit, for first of all comes quality, and second cheapness. Make up whatever wreaths you require for special customers and let them see the difference in your work and that of others. Be careful of the delivery department, employ no careless help, be considerate, good-tempered. A merry and prosperous Christmas to all. Ivera.

CARNATION NOTES.

Holding the Flowers.

I know it is about as useless for me to ask you not to save up your carnation blooms for Christmas as it would be to ask you not to raise the temperature in your carnation houses in order to force more of them out. But I do want to caution you not to save them too long. Every Christmas there is a lot of saved up stock (or pickled stock as it is called) sent to the market the day before Christmas and it not only fails to bring good prices but it also causes general dissatisfaction and injures the florist business, while if it had been sent in a few days sooner it would have brought the grower at least fair and in many cases good returns.

The length of time one can preserve carnation blooms in good condition depends on the weather and how they are handled. If the weather is dark and cloudy you can stop picking most varieties ten days before you want to use them and it is best to allow them to develop pretty well on the plants and pick them a day or two before sending them in. But if the sun happens to come out brightly after the fourth or fifth day you had better pick them and send them to the market as the sun will make them soft if left on the plants and it is not good to keep them in the cellar too long. If the days are bright you had better not try to save them up longer than four or five days and pick them as soon as fully developed.

Most of the scarlets and many of the pink varieties will lose their brightness if left on the plants a day or two too long during sunny weather and so you must be careful. If picked before they begin to fade and placed in a half lighted cellar of 48 degrees they will usually keep their color and freshness for several days and increase about 30 per cent in size. And they will be in better condition to withstand the handling they usually get in shipping and on the retail counter than if they are left on the plants until the last hour.

Handling and Packing.

As much care and judgment is required in caring for the blooms after they are cut as is required in the growing of the blooms and if the growers would keep this in mind there would be more good and less poor stock sent into the market. Many a fine lot of blooms is practically ruined by careless handling and packing. If you have ever had many flowers shipped to you you have no doubt seen just such cases and if you are a shipper, your customers or your commission man may be able to tell you about it.

Most of the commission men insist on the growers bunching their carnations so they can be handled and counted quicker, and if they are packed properly so the blooms do not get crushed too much it is a good way for average stock. But if you have some extra fancy stock it will pay you and him much better to pack them singly and in layers. Do not pack one layer on top of another but rather put false bottoms into your boxes if they are too deep for one layer. Cleat them well so they cannot move around. Of course this may take more time and is more expensive as you cannot get as many blooms into a box, but the extra price your stock will bring will make it pay you well to do it.

Do not be afraid that your commission man will refuse your stock unless it is bunched; he will be only too glad to handle it (whatever way it may be packed) if it is really fine. In packing them you not only want to avoid bruising the petals but you also want to preserve their original form and above all that freshness which is usually so sadly lacking in shipped stock.

The above would have been more seasonable last week but it will reach you four days before Christmas and I hope at least partly serve its intended purpose.

Reports from various points indicate a shortage in carnations everywhere for Christmas, so handle yours right and I hope you will have a good cut for that day and consequently a Merry Christmas. A. F. J. Baur.

NEW CARNATIONS.

Registered by E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind.—"Dorothy," color pink, Scott shade, flower large and symmetrical, built out nicely in center. Calyx strong, never bursts. Stems long and stiff, being well able to support its flower. A continuous and very free bloomer from early until late. An excellent keeper and shipper. Dorothy is a duplicate name of an old variety, but the above has been shown and advertised before being registered, and there being none of the former Dorothy grown at this date the name is practically new. If growers of new carnations would register the names before giving them to the public duplication could be to a great extent at least avoided.

Registered by H. Weber & Son, Oakland, Md.—Norway, color pure white, a seedling of Mrs. Fisher. Flowers two and one-half to three and one-half inches in diameter. Stems long, strong and graceful. Delightfully fragrant and a good keeper and shipper. Splendid habit and of wonderfully vigorous growth.

Egypt, color a rich warm scarlet crimson, flowers averaging two and one half to three inches, with an exquisite spicy odor and borne on stems two and one-

TO CARNATION RAISERS.

Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears offers through the Massachusetts Horticultural Society the following special prizes:

For the best seedling carnation originated subsequent to 1900, to be judged at three exhibitions in Horticultural Hall, Boston, in November, February and April (six blooms to be shown), and at three exhibitions in each November, February and April thereafter (twenty-five blooms to be shown), competition limited to the originators of the varieties exhibited and to continue until one variety has won first place consecutively throughout two seasons, a cash prize of $250.00, and for the variety having scored next nearest to the above requirements, to be awarded at the time the first prize is awarded, a cash prize of $100.00.

Judging to be according to the following scale and recognition to be accorded only to varieties scoring 85 or more points:

Fragrance	20
Color	20
Form	20
Size	20
Stem	15
Calyx	5
	100

The first competition under the above specifications will take place on the second day of the chrysanthemum exhibition at Boston, Nov. 6, 1901. For any further particulars address the chairman of the schedule committee, Wm. J. Stewart, Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass.

ROSE NOTES.

Propagating.

The majority of the large growers started to propagate some time ago, yet there is ample time for the development of a good plant for planting in May and June if started from now up to the middle of February. I believe in early propagating so the plant may get well established in a 3 or 4-inch pot. Some growers say they plant roses from the propagating bench or from 2-inch pots and have good success. I have seen this done and have done it myself but I have invariably found that 3 to 4-inch stock gave the best results. In my opinion cuttings from the bench or which are just rooting through in a 2-inch pot have not substance enough to maintain their vitality when planted out. They cannot bring as many good flowers as the older and better established plants. In most cases they will make a good growth, Beauties in particular, but you will find the wood is softer and more liable to disease, and that the plants will require more careful attention.

It is of great importance to select only strong and healthy wood for cuttings. I like a heel cutting two or three eyes long for teas and two eyes for Beauties. It does not matter whether it is blooming wood or blind wood. Some hold that cuttings from blooming wood are the best. Well, yes, but why? Blooming wood is in most cases stronger and riper. If we select that of equal quality from the blind wood there will be no difference in the plants or their blooming qualities.

In the propagating house I think a temperature of 58 degrees on top and 5 degrees more in the sand is about right. Keep the air moist. Water well when needed. But do not syringe more than you have to, especially the Beauties. Our success with Beauties depends largely on retaining the foliage until the cuttings are rooted. It is also a disadvantage to have an excess of moisture in the house or to have the temperature of the sand too much above that of the house. Under such conditions moisture will accumulate on the under sides of the leaves with unpleasant results. We always try to avoid having our plants in this condition and we should surely be just as careful of the cuttings.

As soon as the cuttings are rooted they should be potted and placed close to the light in a temperate house. After they are rooted through they ought to be gradually hardened and at no time have the growth forced. Give plenty of air so they can grow into sturdy plants.

The Christmas Crop.

Do not try to cook out a few extra flowers for Christmas by giving the plants all the heat you can. It may mean an extra dollar for you now but by the middle of January you will wish you had not done so.

Our commission men are making their usual talk about pickling flowers, though it is said that the growers do not practice it to the same extent as in years past. This last is certainly true, but at the same time the grower has learned considerable about keeping the flowers in good condition, and he is satisfied as to the necessity of storing some. How else would it be possible for him to send in the extra quantity that the commission man expects him to send in for the holidays?

SULPHURING FOR MILDEW.

What is the best and safest way to produce sulphur fumes to kill mildew in a rose house heated by hot water? With ordinary firing the pipes do not get hot enough to give off fumes, although they have been covered with a good coat of lime and sulphur wash. The various sulphur solutions are objectionable in that they discolor the foliage no matter how clear they look before you put them on. I have tried to melt sulphur on a coal oil stove but it will ignite and injure the plants.

A. D.

If the heating pipes in the rose house are "covered with a good coat of lime and sulphur wash" one would expect fumes enough for all ordinary purposes, though it is considered better practice to mix the sulphur with linseed oil rather than lime, and it is usually only found needful to paint a comparatively small area of the piping with this mixture—strong sulphur fumes are decidedly dangerous to vegetation, and if no other injury results the color of the flowers will suffer. The melting of sulphur on an oil stove would seem to be heroic treatment to most rose growers, and can hardly be recommended for the abolition of mildew.

CHRYSANTHEMUM F. B. HAYES.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph taken Nov. 25, of a house of chrysanthemum F. B. Hayes, grown by William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass. This crop was cut for Thanksgiving, but Mr. Sim says it can be brought in later by growing cooler.

The color of the flower is pink and it is a good seller, the flowers having been on the market only a few days when the entire house was cut. The plants were set 6x8 and three flowers were grown to a plant. The plants were 2½ feet in height.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas Deliveries.

By the time these notes reach the reader you will be so busy with the Christmas rush that little heed will be given to trade papers. Let me just remind you that it is necessary to apply all the system you possibly can in the few days that we have to crowd a week's good work into one day.

Have your Saturday's, Sunday's, Monday's and Christmas day's deliveries each by themselves. As soon as sold a plant can be placed in either of these groups and as soon as the rush of each day is over the plants that are to be delivered in the morning can be wrapped and tagged and fixed up with more or less frills all ready for the wagons or delivery boys. Delivering in good order is a very important part of our business, and after growing the plant and selling it, to have a failure at the last moment is most distressing. We have all had our experience with thick-headed delivery men, but we often tax their thinking powers too much on these occasions, that are altogether out of the ordinary.

We find the only safe plan is to have at least the name on every parcel that goes out. Supposing Mrs. Green has three plants, the name and full address should be on one and on the tag the names of the other articles, and on the other articles should be Mrs. Green's name. It is the only safe way on these occasions and that will save numerous calls to the telephone to hear the old cry: "Your man delivered one plant here, but I bought two."

Christmas cleans up much stuff and you find yourself with room to spare and you need it.

Lilies.

Put your Japan longiflorums into a night temperature of 60 degrees and keep them there. A little more heat will not hurt if they need it, but never lower the temperature. Bermuda bulbs are usually more forward and may do with a little less heat. Easter is fairly early and there is little fear of your lilies being too early.

The greenfly must be watched or rather it must be prevented. Smoking is good, but it takes a lot of it to reach down in the thick crown of leaves. The handiest and most perfect implement to apply a tobacco spray is the "Stevens Spray Pump." It is a most simple contrivance, but does its work to perfection, and I would not be without it for five times its cost. It will send a light spray of diluted nicotine down where the fly loves to dwell.

Tulips and Daffodils.

After Christmas you can get in tulips and Von Sions, for they will force then with safety and make good flowers. Still all through January and most of February the tulips want a strong heat. Unlike the lily of the valley, which make no roots and want a cool top with great heat, the tulips and narcissus don't want their roots roasted, and must have a moist top heat of at least 80 degrees for the first few batches. Few houses are kept at this temperature, but you can always inclose a portion of a side bench and they must be also shaded with thin boards, but chee-cloth is better. Don't attempt any of the double varieties of tulips; you don't need them.

Crimson Ramblers.

It will also be time to start the Crimson Rambler roses. Those you lifted from the ground are possibly now in a temperature of 45 degrees. If the wood has kept plump you are all right. Tying into the desired forms or shapes should be done at once. We tried several forms last year, but prefer the canes tied around four or five stakes spirally. The thicker the growth and more abundant the flowers the more attractive they are and the least room they take up. Don't keep them in anything higher than 50 degrees for the first month. In that temperature they will break.

If you grew any of these plants in pots all summer and have them resting in cold-frames you can also bring them in and start in a temperature of 45 degrees. These force with the greatest ease. It is a well known fact that these roses as well as Hybrid Perpetuals have a much better color than when forced in much heat, so begin at once and syringe frequently. I want to say that the Ramblers need scarcely any pruning; only the lateral growths can be cut back to two or three eyes and the very ends of the canes can be shortened to where you think the eyes are strong enough to give flowers.

American Beauty.

I have often remarked that American Beauty was one of the best forcing roses. We have a few hundred for this purpose and hope you have. Cut them down to four or five good eyes and start at once in the same house with the Ramblers. These are lifted plants and must be started cool, and when they first break you would think the growth was coming blind, but every growth will finish with a bud. Last year we lost several hundred of these because we let them get a zero night in a cold-frame. If they had been grown in pots all summer and the wood ripe, hard frost would not have hurt them, but a plant grown inside and lifted in early November is in no condition to stand frost even if they are a hardy plant, and so we live and learn to the end of our days. Wm. Scott.

PALM NOTES.

The palm keeps increasing in public favor, and it is now so largely grown in this country that importations have nearly ceased. Home grown palms are always the most satisfactory and a few hints on growing palms may not be out of place.

The seed bed should be prepared as soon as you have notice that your seeds are shipped. I like a bed with a good bottom heat. Have a bench well boarded up on all sides, using four-inch boards for the bench bottom, and place these so there is a small space between each of them. Have the heating pipes below well divided. On the bench put a layer of about two inches of sphagnum moss, moisten it and beat it down well, giving it an even surface. On the moss put a layer of fine sand and then commence to spread your seeds, as soon as they arrive.

Never allow the seeds to lay around for days or weeks, but put them in at once. They should not be exposed to the air. I once saw a fine lot of kentia seed lay in a shed for more than a month. The seeds were afterward put in the bed and probably had proper treatment there, but very few germinated and, of course, the dealer who sold the seed was blamed. After your seeds are nicely spread put a layer of moss on top and upon this another inch and a half of the same fine sand as before. Keep moist and maintain a steady bottom heat. By this method I find that any seed that has life in it will come.

As soon as the young plants commence to show and the first leaf is out, pull them up and pot into a two-inch pot. I prefer the deep rose pot, as a palm root goes deep down from the seed and should have room. I find the growth is always stronger in the deep pot than in the ordinary shallow ones. Pot deep, but never break off the seed, for it is still the life of the plant. On a kentia the seed will remain for several years, while on the latania and areca it comes off in a short time. The seed bed I have described is good for most of the palm seeds.

Cocos Weddeliana I prefer to sow in pots, as the cocos does not transplant very well. If the main root is damaged the plant will always be a poor one. I like a rather stiff but not too heavy soil for potting.

In summer, of course, give the plants a good shading, but on this matter I will speak later. Next week I will say something about growing the seedlings of different palms into specimen plants.

DRACAENA CANES.

What is the best mode of starting canes of dracaenas into growth? Is it best to leave the canes in long sections as they are imported or will they furnish more plants if cut into smaller pieces before laying them in the propagating bed? And what temperature should they be kept in? I have generally buried the whole canes but often got only one or two shoots to start out of one cane. A. D.

Provided that the dracaena canes are fresh, plump, and in good condition generally, there is no necessity for cutting them into short sections before laying them in the propagating bed, and as a matter of fact the weight of argument is against such a proceeding on account of the additional number of cut surfaces that are exposed to decay.

A bench in the greenhouse in which a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees can be maintained is a proper place for this operation, and the bench should be covered with a mixture of sand and sphagnum moss to a depth of 3 inches, this material being pressed down firmly and the canes laid upon it in regular order, and to economize space need not be more than an inch apart. Enough of the same material (or even pure sand will answer) should then be spread over the canes to barely cover them, and the whole planting be thoroughly watered.

A combination of heat and moisture forms the most necessary condition for starting the dracaena canes into growth, though the growth may be irregular even then, and after the first few shoots have been taken off do not discard the canes unless they are decayed, for the buds may continue to start into growth successively for a year or more. When this locality, now the beautiful part of our park system known as the Circle, became valuable property, Mr. Palmer moved his entire plant to Lancaster, Erie county, N. OBITUARY.

W. J. PALMER, Sr.

On Thursday, December 13, rather suddenly, for few of his friends knew of his sickness, which was but slight, passed away the patriarch of the Buffalo florists, Mr. W. J. Palmer. Though Mr. Palmer had passed through a severe illness some two years ago we all considered him a hale and hearty man and the news of his death on Thursday morning was a great shock to us all.

Mr. Palmer was born in Cheltenham, Gloster, England, in 1835, being at the time of his death in his 66th year. This was getting near the allotted span of man's life but for all that he was of such a robust and cheery nature that we looked for his companionship for many years to come. In 1854 he landed in America and came at once to Buffalo, shortly after engaging as gardener to Mr. Porter Thompson, who had a fine garden with conservatories and grapery at Niagara St. and Porter Avenue. The fine old stone mansion is now a landmark of Buffalo's early days. In 1860 Mr. Palmer bought a few city lots on 13th and 14th streets and erected a the state. There is about 150,000 feet of glass entirely devoted to cut-flowers for supplying the splendid business of W. J. Palmer & Son at 304 Main street, Buffalo.

Mr. Palmer leaves a sister, two daughters, and Wm. J. Palmer, Jr., the son who has so ably conducted the store end of the business for the past ten years. Mr. Palmer was a widower for more than thirty years. His devoted sister filled the place of mother to his young family and he was a kind and indulgent father and for his sacrifice and devotion to his children he has been rewarded with their utmost love and adoration. The purest domestic bliss was all theirs. Until within a few days of his death Mr. Palmer was active, conducting the management of his large growing establishment. He took few vacations; a trip to the land of his birth some eight or nine years ago was all we can remember in his busy life and whenever a few of us visited Lancaster we found the veteran busy with his charge, which I am sure he always delighted to be with. Though Mr. Palmer had built up a most lucrative business and was reaping the reward of an energetic and industrious life, he still kept in the harness. He could have taken a lot of ease or idleness but chose to busy himself with his roses and violets and ladies. Perhaps this is as it should be, for what occupation could be found more pleasant to engage both mind and body in in his declining years as the care of living, breathing conditions, his life-long friends, the plants and flowers of his love and delight.

Few survivors in the business have been actively engaged in the retail trade for over forty years as was Mr. Palmer and it was always a treat to catch him in a reminiscent mood. He could tell you what a business he did in verbenas away back in war times when they brought $1.50 a dozen. When the first beginning of the design business started with a primitive wreath made of tuberoses and double white primroses tied to a wire or ring of rattan. When no piece would be acceptable unless it contained a liberal lot of camellias. Before carnations were thought of under glass. He could interest you when relating the gradual but marvelous growth of the business and the introduction of many things that seem now indispensable. When we feared no lilies of the valley or lilies of any kind. When there was no smilax; no tulips or Roman hyacinths. When a bouquet was made as formal as a clock dial and a basket of flowers contained as many species as a botanical garden. When if your La Marque or Solfaterre rose was in crop you had roses and if they were not you went without roses. All these and many others would be talked over and laughed over and related so graphically, for our lamented friend could give it the true ring of experience.

Mr. Palmer delighted in his business. With the early and thorough training of a gardener he followed it with enthusiasm and kept ever well abreast of the times. By his integrity and industry he had been most successful as a business man. He was respected and honored by all classes of the community who knew him. No other man of our ranks could leave such a gap. The florists of the country who knew W. J. Palmer, and they are legion, will join us in our sympathy for the bereaved friends and in our sorrow, for we have lost a whole-souled, honest, able man and the fraternity at large has lost one of its best and most substantial members.

The funeral services were held at the residence of his son on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended and amongst the many mourners were nearly all the florists of the city. Many beautiful floral offerings, among which was a large wreath of lilies of the valley from the Florists' Club, surrounded the remains, which were laid to rest in the family lot in Forest Lawn cemetery—no more beautiful spot on earth for friends to visit where their loved ones repose in everlasting sleep.

VINES.

Under the title "Live Covers for Country Homes" the Experiment Station at New Brunswick, N. J., recently issued in its bulletin No. 144 a great deal of useful information regarding vines, prepared by Prof. Byron D. Halsted, the botanist and horticulturist of the station. The matter was very freely illustrated and we are pleased to be able to reproduce in the Review some of the illustrations and a portion of the printed matter.

List of Vines.

From a somewhat extended correspondence with the various experiment station botanists and horticulturists upon the subject in hand, and to all of whom my thanks are generously extended, the following list of plants grown as house covers has been developed. The number of times a plant has been favorably mentioned is shown by the figure following the name:

1. American ivy (Parthenocissus quinquefolia L.), 20.
2. Climbing roses (Rosa sp.), 14.
3. Trumpet creeper (Tecoma radicans Juss.), 13.
4. Honeysuckles (Lonicera sp.), 13.
5. Chinese wistaria (Wistaria Chinensis DC.), 12.
6. Japanese ivy (Parthenocissus tricuspidata Seib. & Zucc.), 10.
7. Virgin's bower (Clematis Virginiana L.), 9.
8. False Bitter-sweet (Celastrus scandens L.), 8.
9. Jackman's clematis (Clematis Jackmani Jack,), 7.
10. Clematis paniculata Thunb., 6.
11. Clematis, 5.
12. Dutchman's pipe (Aristolochia macrophylla Lam.), 5.
13. English ivy (Hedera Helix L.), 4.
14. Wild grape (Vitis sp.), 4.
15. Aristolochia, 4.
16. Akebia (Akebia quinita Decne.), 4.
17. Passiflora, 3.
18. Hop (Humulus Lupulus L.), 3.
19. Bignonia, 3.
20. Matrimony vine (Lycium barbarum L.), 2.
21. Clematis ligusticifolia Nutt., 2.
22. Moonseed (Menispermum Canadense L.), 2.
23. Silk vine (Periploca graeca L.), 2.
24. Solanum jasminoides Paxt., 2.
25. Ipomœa, 2.
26. Jessamine, 2.
27. Chili jessamine, 2.

The Setting of Vines.

In the first place, no matter what plants are to be grown, they demand a good preparation of the soil. Many think it is only a small matter to "stick out a vine," and it can be done at any odd time and in any sort of a way, and here is where the greatest number of failures occur. If the same vine with the same care (or lack of it) had been set in a field or along the fence, it would have been more apt to grow. The side of the wall is the place of all others that is not already prepared to receive the plant that is to climb, and this is emphatically true with new walls where the material, instead of being earth, is a mixture of mortar and brick, ashes, lath and plaster, in short, the refuse of the building not yet subdued by time and enriched by the overgrowth of grass. Remove all such rubbish by the bushel and in its place supply a mixture of rich soil and good manure. Into this favorable soil place the well-rooted vine as carefully as one would set a young orchard or vineyard plant. The writer has done all this and then forgotten one requisite and failure resulted. The plant is peculiarly exposed and needs a guard placed around it, or it will get pulled up, trodden down or otherwise destroyed. Water is occasionally needed, and the stems sometimes require aid in getting hold of the wall, if an ivy, or the support that must be provided for it. Remember that as yet the vine is small, weak and tender.

The Japanese Ivy.

For strictly ornamental purposes upon stone or brick there is perhaps nothing in our state that surpasses or even equals the Japanese ivy or Boston ivy (Parthenocissus tricuspidata Sieb. and Zucc.), the Ampelopsis Veitchii of the gardeners. It is a native of China and Japan and was introduced into this country in the latter half of the century, and particularly in and around Boston, Mass., where the writer first became familiar with it, nearly thirty years ago. It is a rapid grower and a remarkably close clinger by means of its many disc, and, with its handsome, deeply-angled, rich green leaves, it quickly covers a wall with an attractive mantle of foliage. The young stems, closely applied to the brick or stone with their nearly sessile leaves, regularly and alternately disposed, is perhaps more attractive than the older stems with their large leaves hanging out with glossy blades tipped downward as so many loose, live shingles to shed the water and catch the sun. As the season advances the foliage catches the tints of the aurora and sometimes producing a wealth of purple and gold that is charming to see. Individual plants differ materially in this respect, and some will hold to green and the dark-wood tints until the leaves fall, while others get the brightness of the oriole quite early in the autumn. It is likely that soil and situation may have much to do with this, for when the ground is poor or dry and the vine is growing upon a fully sun-exposed wall the richest tints are often realized. This feature of rich coloration has been dwelled upon; but it is only the parting charm of a choice climbing decorative plant that merits a place on stone or brick wherever it can gain a root-hold in the soil. It is alike a decoration to the church and the residence, the school-house and other public buildings, and the stone pillar or archway entrance of the sleeping-place of the dead.

This plant has so many excellent qualities that it rapidly took a first place among our climbing vines, wherever its somewhat subtropical nature will permit it to survive. This is a very large country, and there is a wide range of climate between Maine, where Professor Munson states that the Japanese ivy "is not hardy save in the most southern part of the state or in protected localities," and Florida, from where Professor Rolfs writes, that "there is no good vine for brick walls." Even in Michigan the climate is not congenial, for Professor Taft writes me that "on College ground most of the plants kill back rapidly," while in Iowa, according to Professor Craig, "Japan ivy is not hardy." In Missouri, according to Professor Whitten, "it occasionally kills back in winter. It, however, quickly renews itself after being injured." Professor Green, of Minnesota, writes that "the Japanese ivy is quite tender here, and I know of only a few specimens in this section that are successfully grown." When the Pacific coast is reached, the Japanese ivy is again the favorite, and leads all others in some localities, according to Professors Shinn and Davy.

It has been shown that the best of vines for one locality is not the favorite everywhere. The Japanese ivy is highly effective for a considerable area from Massachusetts to Florida, but north of Ohio and beyond the Mississippi river, it is tender, and does not appear again in its beauty until the moist, even, soft climate of the Pacific coast is reached.

The American Ivy.

The American ivy, properly so-called (Parthenocissus quinquefolia L.), and perhaps as often known as the Virginia creeper, and erroneously "Woodbine," is very closely related to the species of the same genus from Japan and China above considered. This high-climbing vine of the grape family is native in the woodlands from "Quebec to Manitoba, Florida, Texas and Mexico," and therefore has accommodated itself to a wide range of climate from the cold northern regions to those of great heat.

The American ivy and the Japanese ivy stand at the head of the list of live covers for walls of brick or stone, in fact, any material other than wood. Each has its own peculiarities; the Japanese ivy is the closer clinger, and makes a cover in which the three-pointed leaves hang closely one over the other like shingles. To some it is so uniform that it is tiresome, and preference is given to the American ivy with its more irregular growth and festoons and garlands of foliage and berries. However this may be, the fact of its great tenderness of the Japanese species remains, and there is a large portion of our country where it cannot be grown at all, and there no choice remains between the two. This condition of things suggests the superior value that may reside in a hybrid between the two species in question, and the production of a form that will hold firmly to walls and with foliage that may be a happy combination of the compound "five-finger" of the American form and the deeply three-lobed leaf of the Japanese species. Attempts are now under way to obtain such a result and secure a form that has the hardiness that will permit its being grown in regions where the Japanese ivy is now excluded.

The Wistarias.

The Wistarias are somewhat different in type from any climbers that have thus far been considered. In the first place they are genuine twiners, that is, they turn around the object of support. Unlike the Japanese ivy, they do not make a smooth, green, leafy surface upon the wall, as if clipped even with a lawn mower, but have the opposite habit of exceedingly loose growth, and are at their best when producing great festoons along the cornice of the high house, with its stem, like a great sinuous rope, descending to the ground along the water-pipe. The Wistaria is nothing if it is not lofty and is scarcely beautiful until it can overflow the roof of house or piazza, or both, with its buckets full of pendulous lilac blooms in spring, followed by the great sprays and splashes of green later in the season. As if not satisfied with one bold attempt to surprise itself and all the world with its giant clusters of pea-like blossoms it will intersperse minimized clusters in flowers with its wealth of great airy, far-reaching leaves in midsummer, and show that it is possible to do its blooming in a moderate and half unobtrusive way. In short, the Wistarias are the giants among the climbing plants, doing things on a grand scale, and needing space for doing it. It is a member of the pea family (Leguminosæ), and in fact, it makes a bean-stalk down which "Jack" could literally climb with safety, both to himself and the live rope-ladder of descent.

There are at least four known species of the Wistarias, of which one is native to this country and the others of Japan and China, the homes of this class of vines, where it is one of the leading features of oriental floriculture. The native species, Kraunhia frutescens (L.), grows in low grounds from Virginia to Florida, and then westward and northward to Louisiana and Kansas, clambering over trees and making stems several inches in diameter. With us the Chinese species is the Wistaria most generally seen as a live cover for homes and other buildings. The plants are somewhat slow and disappointing in the first two or three years of their youth, but when once well established the growth is rampant, often several feet in a month, and only heroic treatment with the pruning knife between each growing season will keep this climber within bounds.

There are two leading types differing chiefly in the color of the flower, namely, the lilac the more common color, and the white (alba) variety. Very good effects can be produced by twining a vine of each together along the piazza eaves and mixing the two colors, while others prefer to keep them somewhat separate, the one being for the house eaves and the other for the porch. There are dwarf forms that are suitable for low growth when such are desired.

In fruit the Wistarias are interesting, as the pods several inches in length hang like great ear-drops from the vine and may be attractively disposed over the entrance way to the house. In autumn, long after the American and Japanese vines have dropped their robes of royal purple and gold, the Wistaria carries the foliage of midsummer with a freshness that is in high contrast with the gray of neighboring trees and vines.

Correspondents have kindly answered the question, "Are the Wistarias used in your section satisfactory?" For Maine (Munson), Vermont (Waugh), Iowa (Craig), Minnesota (Green), North Dakota (Waldron), South Dakota (Hansen), Oregon (Lake), the reply is condensed in the one word—No. For the south generally, Texas (Price), Mississippi (Herrick), Alabama (Earle)—Yes. Professor Balmer writes: "In western Washington the Wistaria does well and is much used on porches and walls. It is very satisfactory. In the eastern part of the state it is very little seen. A lot of young plants in my nursery freeze to the ground each winter." In Wisconsin "they are used, but are satisfactory only in sheltered localities" (Goff). "Wistarias are occasionally used in Colorado, but are seldom satisfactory" (Crandall). For Michigan: "Many plants fail to flower" (Taft). "Wistarias are all exceedingly successful in California, especially the Japanese species. Sometimes they fruit quite heavily and have been known to grow from self-sown seed" (Shinn). "Wistarias in northern Florida rival the pictures of this plant representing it in Japan. It blooms profusely one year from time of setting out" (Rolfs). "The only plant I know of here is at the College, and is very satisfactory, and should be grown extensively," writes Professor Keffer, of New Mexico.

From these notes the impression is deepened that a vine perfectly at home in one locality may not thrive in another, and that there is much work to be done in widening the range of hardiness of choice species of climbing plants.

The Trumpet Creeper.

In a little family (Bignoniaceæ), including the catalpa, is the trumpet creeper (Tecoma radicans L.), a native of the moist woods from our state to Florida and Texas and westward to Illinois. This vine is easily classed with the wistarias in some of its habits of growth; but it climbs to the tops of tall buildings, holding fast by roots at the joints and hangs from the corners of the eaves in luxuriant festoons of loose, airy foliage. The young stems do not cling as firmly as the English ivy, and may, therefore, need some anchorage from time to time as it ascends a high wall. The trumpet creeper thrives well along with the wistaria, and their two shades of foliage green accentuate each other, and as the blooming is at different seasons, there is no clashing of the best floral effects. It does not flower until July and August, and then the small clusters of long funnel-shaped, orange-yellow flowers bend down the tips of the out-reaching sprays of dark, shining midsummer green. It is a particularly good vine to work in with the Japanese ivy upon stone walls or angles in brick structures to give variety to the otherwise rather too plainly shorn cover produced by the ivy, but it may be trained upon wires for a piazza screen.

There is a Japanese trumpet creeper (Tecoma grandiflora Loi.) which has an unusually large flower, as the scientific name indicates. This is less inclined to climb than the first-named, and proves of value for low screens for the piazza.

In Bignonia capreolata (L.), the people of the south and the Pacific coast have a climber of considerable merit, a near relative and closely resembling our trumpet creeper.

The Clematises.

The genus Clematis, a member of the crowfoot family (Ranunculaceæ), is one that furnishes a number of the choicest climbing vines. Of the sorts native to our region of the country, none is perhaps better known than the Clematis Virginiana (L.), or Virgin's bower, found climbing over woodland bushes, along streams, generally north of the gulf states, delicate in stem and unobtrusive in flower and fruit, although the plumes of the latter, as met with in autumn, are perhaps the most attractive feature of the plant.

In the northwest the closely related Clematis ligusticifolia Nutt., is the favorite instead, and Professor Buffum places this at the head of the list of ornamental climbing vines for Wyoming.

Another small-flowered clematis is the C. paniculata Thunb., an exceedingly fine introduction from Japan that has rapidly become deservingly popular, because of its vigorous habit and profusion of small, sweet-scented white flowers that cover the plant with a sheet of bloom for several weeks, followed by the abundant light, airy plumes of the fruit that in maturing in autumn pass through very attractive shades of green, pink and brown.

The foliage is light, delicate and in strict accord with the fine bloom and fruit. The vines thrive well in the full sun, and when carefully pruned may be taken anywhere upon the porch, using wire netting to hold it in place and thus not detracting from the light, feathery nature of the vine in all its details.

The large-flowered clematises are the most showy of all climbing plants, and, with their blooms, several inches across, overlapping each other upon a vigorous plant in June and July, the display is a source of mingled surprise and pleasure. These are hybrid varieties combining the blood of Clematis lanuginosa Lindl., and other species, as that of Clematis viticella (L.), in the C. Jackmani, which was originated in 1862 by Mr. George Jackman and still remains among the most popular of the hybrids and known by its velvety purple, large floral leaves, and central tuft of pale green stamens. The stems can be twined among the coarser vines like the American ivy, and be recognized as present only during the period of blooming, when it is the most attractive vine upon the trellis. There are many varieties and crosses of this hybrid, so that the list of forms and shades of color among the great flowered varieties is sufficiently long to satisfy the most fastidious.

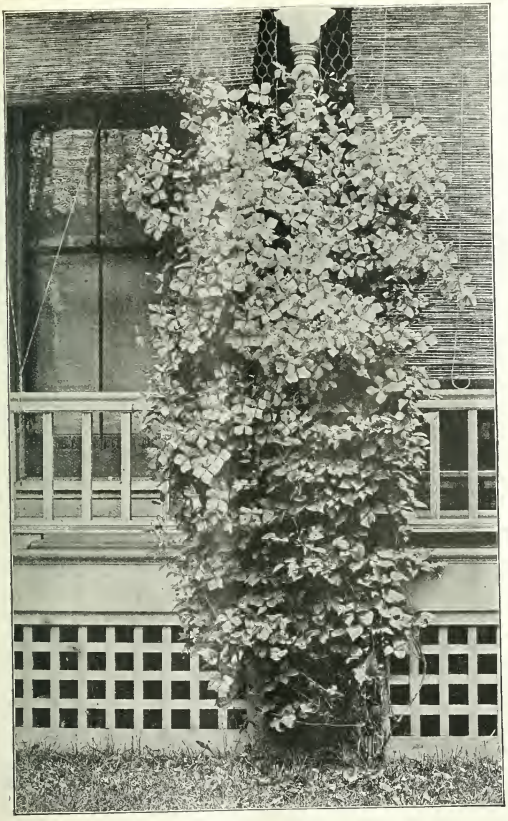
Some of the pure white sorts are extremely attractive, as exemplified in the Clematis Henryi, a hybrid of C. florida var. Fortunei with the C. lanuginosa, the former a Japanese species and the latter from China.

The number of species of clematis is large, thirty-two being described by Bailey, and as hybridization is easy and frequent among them, the list of floriculture varieties is almost endless. The clematis cerulea Lindl., is a Japanese species with a charming blue or lilac color to the blooms, and with a long list of varieties in which mauve, purple, silver-gray and carmine-ribbed sepals are beautifully displayed.

Mention should be made of Clematis Viorna (L.), and particularly its variety, coccinea, with the medium-sized, urn-shaped flowers of a scarlet hue, and therefore quite a distinct type from any that have been mentioned, and wonderfully effective when worked upon wire screen along the piazza, alone, or in connection with the fine, snowy paniculata or the blanket of azure, purple, or even pure white, of the large-flowered hybrids of the lanuginosa type.

With us the various kinds of clematis named above are hardy and in every way to be recommended. From elsewhere some notes are of interest. Professor Earle states that "C. Jackmani succeeds in Alabama only in shaded situations," and "when protected it is fine," writes Professor Rane, for New Hampshire, while for Colorado, Professor Crandall reports that "Hybrids of the Jackman class are used to some extent and bloom freely, but they require winter protection. It is the usual practice to lay the plants down and cover with earth or straw." For Iowa, Professor Craig writes that "it succeeds with winter protection." "The Jackman class are not so hardy as the others in Missouri" (Whitten). The suggestion from the above and other notes is that a hardy, large flowered clematis is needed for the more severe portions of our country.

A Clematis Paniculata used as a Screen Cover for a Rear Portion of the House.



Young Plant of Jackman Clematis upon Wire Trellis.

The Clematis Paniculata likewise is not safe in many localities. Professor Taft, of Michigan, writes that "it is a favorite, but last winter all our plants died." Professor Craig reports it "not hardy in Iowa," and Professor Rane that "it dies back but makes a fine growth yearly" in New Hampshire. The paniculata needs some infusion of a hardy blood, as for example, that of C. ligusticifolia, for the region centering around Colorado, and of C. Virginiana for northern New England and the states bordering upon the great lakes. In a genus where crossing has done so much to improve these charming piazza vines, it seems probable that by similar methods the range of hardiness can be extended by the wide-awake and thoughtful hybridizer.

The Honeysuckles.

There are many species of the honeysuckles, all members of the genus Lonicera, grouped in a small family containing shrubs like the elderberry, snowball and snowberry, and herbs as horse-gentian and the delicate twin-flower (Linnæa borealis L.), a trailing plant, and the only one in all the world bearing at the front of its botanical name that of Linnæus, the "Father of Botany." Several of the honeysuckles are ornamental shrubs, but only the climbing kinds are to be considered here. There are a few native species and these may be met with in the thickets, clambering over bushes and trees, conspicuous for their large light leaves, in pairs, and the terminal clusters of long tubular flowers. The trumpet-honeysuckle (Lonicera sempervirens L.) is the chief one of this type in this connection. It is a strong grower with handsome foliage (evergreen in the south) and scarlet flowers two inches long produced through the summer. The Lonicera flava Sims, is a wild species of the southern states of the same type as the last, with large bright yellow flowers, and is good for twining about veranda posts.

The leading ornamental climber of the genus is Hall's Japanese honeysuckle (Lonicera Japonica Halleana), which is evergreen to a considerable degree, greatly increasing its value. This is a hardy vine in New Jersey, easily grown under almost all conditions, propagating itself by rooting at the joints when the stems are upon the ground, and with protection of straw, such prostrate branches hold their green leaves all winter. This vine is easily trained upon wire netting or single wires and bears an abundance of showy and very fragrant blossoms from June, when they are most profuse, to near the close of the growing season. The late holding of the foliage makes the Japanese honeysuckle a special favorite for the late autumn, when all other vines have lost their leaves, except the English ivy, if perchance this latter is able to grow at all.

The Woodbine (Lonicera Periclymenum L.) is a showy European species of merit with us.

There are golden-leaved honeysuckles, as the variety aurea reticulata, with yellow flowers and the foliage netted or variegated with yellow and a mixture of red. An occasional vine of these golden varieties may be tastefully disposed among the green-leaved sorts upon a veranda with pleasing effect.

Among my notes from correspondents upon the honeysuckles, it is gathered that as a whole these plants are generally used. While for Maine, Professor Munson writes, "The climbing honeysuckles are very seldom met with in this state;" and Professor Waugh, for Vermont, "not used at all;" Professor Earle states that in Alabama Lonicera Japonica "has escaped everywhere and is almost a troublesome weed." The writer recalls that the honeysuckles are very much used in the cities of Tacoma and Seattle, and Professor Shinn writes that for California "the climbing honeysuckles are much used." For Wyoming, according to Professor Buffum, "no climbing loniceras are in the state," while for Florida Professor Rolfs writes that "many species are grown and L. sempervirens is used extensively about the country homes—that is, on the plantations." "But few climbing honeysuckles do well in Minnesota and none hold their foliage in the winter" is the report from Professor Green. "They are used to a limited extent in Colorado, where it is necessary to take them down and cover them for the winter," as stated by Professor Crandall. Even in Michigan they are often injured (Taft), and for Iowa, "the Lonicera Halleana is not hardy" (Craig). The green foliage is held during some winters in Texas (Price) and also in North Carolina (Curran).

A Specimen of Rosa Multiflora Japonica upon Side of House, in Full Flower.

It is seen that there is a large part of the intercontinental region of our country where the climbing honeysuckles are not able to stand the severe climate, and here again thought should be turned to the question of supplying the much-needed honeysuckles for the homes in the middle states and the far west.

The Climbing Roses.

Little need be said by way of introduction to the "queen of flowers." Roses are always popular, and it is a pleasant fact that some of them are genuine climbers. Van Dyke, in his artistic introduction to nature, writes that "The wild rose—the common wild rose—growing along the woodland road unseen by the farmer's boy and the summer tourist [there are exceptions in the case of the former], is a vision of loveliness, beyond all descriptions. How many times it has led poets to prove the poverty of language! With the dew upon it in the early morning, it is the fairest, purest growth in all the floral world." Of the native species, the leading one of the climbing type is the prairie rose (Rosa setigera Michx.), found generally in the central or prairie region of our country. From it have sprung some of the choicest of climbing roses as the "Baltimore Belle," "Prairie Belle," "Queen of the Prairie," and later the "Crimson Rambler." They grow rapidly, will reach to great height, propagate freely, present a satisfactory foliage, and when in bloom the attractiveness of the vines is complete. In the plate is shown a specimen of Rosa multiflora Japonica in full bloom, trained upon a wire netting along the side of the house.

And yet roses are not at home in all parts of the country. In reply to the query, "Do climbing roses prove of value for piazza screens?" there is a "No!" for such states as Vermont, North Dakota and Wyoming. They need to be covered in Colorado, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Of the latter region, Professor Goff writes: "Last winter destroyed nearly all roses, except the Russian Rosa rugosa Thunb." A climber with the rugosa blood introduced into it may bring a hardiness of great value. In Washington, Professor Balmer writes that climbing roses upon the west side of the Cascade Range "grow to the tops of two-story houses, and all other roses are a great success in that moist climate, while upon the east side they do not thrive. * * * All freeze within a foot of the ground * * * owing to the unripe condition of the wood. * * * It is a case of too short a season."

For the far south and Pacific coast the roses are among the most successful of climbers. In a recent talk with a Floridian, it was gathered that the Marechal Neil, when budded upon the Cherokee rose (Rosa laevigata Michx.), climbs vigorously and blooms almost constantly. Professor Rolfe writes for the same state that "the Marechal Neil does so well and is so beautiful that it has no rivals." Of the extent to which climbing roses are used in California many are familiar, for they reach to the tops of the houses and bloom perpetually in many of the most congenial regions of that wonderfully diversified state.

In New Jersey there need be no lack of climbing roses, and when trained with honeysuckle and clematis, they give a satisfactory effect to the porch throughout the whole growing season. Think of a Crimson Rambler, as it may be easily produced alongside of almost any piazza. For the less favored regions combinations of blood might be made between hardy and other sorts resulting in the production of highly-prized hybrids.

The Pipe Vine.

The genus Aristolochia contains a considerable number of vines of interest. They are often called "Dutchman's pipes," because of the long flowers that are curiously bent into a form simulating that of a smoker's pipe. Several species are cultivated, among the foremost being Aristolochia macrophylla Lam., or the large-leaved Pipewort, as the name indicates. This is a twining vine with long, slender, green branches, bearing great heart-shaped leaves, suggestive of tropical luxuriance, affording a dense shade, and when properly trained upon the piazza is remarkably attractive and satisfactory. This species is native to the rich woods throughout the eastern central portion of the United States, and is worthy of much consideration for exterior house adornment.

In Vermont the Pipewort is one of the best climbers (Waugh). For Missouri, "where, on account of the long, hot summer, people live on their porches during a large part of the year, vines are appreciated more than almost any other plant as house covers. * * Among the best for this purpose is Aristolochia macrophylla Lam., which likes a north front, and Aristolochia tomentosa Sims., which is native to our woods" (Whitten). For Connecticut, Professor Gulley writes: "We have no other climber that will make as dense a cover in a short time. As a porch screen I would rank the Aristolochia very high." It is commended by several others.

The Matrimony Vine.

There is an old-fashioned climbing shrub, with an expression different from all other plants in this class. With a strong liking for a trellis, it has no tendrils, or a twining or climbing habit, excepting that it is somewhat thorny. The stems are long, slender, leafy, and when brought up against a lattice will develop side shoots that produce pendant branches and a peculiarly soft and pleasing effect. The flowers are small, numerous, and followed by oblong scarlet berries that hang on late in the fall.

One of the pleasing characters of the Matrimony vine is its early leafage in spring, being green long before most other climbing plants awake, and the foliage is held very late in the autumn. The writer has one large vine of this Lycium barbarum (L.), upon his piazza, and enjoyed its comforting shade during some hot summer evenings while preparing this bulletin. The only objection to this vine is that it does not screen its larger stems upon the porch side unless the pendant branches are permitted to hang toward the house, but from the street the effect is one of grace, softness of texture and delicacy of coloring.

The Akebia.

In the Barberry family, in which we have as native only shrubs and herbs, there is a choice vine from Japan well worthy a place among our climbing plants. It is a rapid grower, and the leaves are prettily "five-fingered" like the American ivy; but borne upon stems having the delicacy of the clematis. The flowers are small, of two distinct sizes —the male (small) and female (large) —sweet-scented and these, and later, the fruit, are attractive from the porch side of the vine. The Akebia—its Japanese name—(Akebia quinita Dcene.) is one of the cleanest and most attractive of the more refined type of small vines, and adds a charm to any collection that may be selected for draping the piazza trellis.

The Moonseed.

We have a native vine quite closely related to the refined Akebia, the Moonseed (Menispermum Canadense L.) that grows in the woods, clambering over shrubs, throughout the eastern Atlantic region. The foliage is luxuriant and is a welcome addition to the list of ornamental climbers.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

All is now serene. There is a very decent supply all around and a very decent call for about all of it at very decent prices. What is the use to kick under such conditions?

If anyone has a grievance it must be the bulb-goods man. His wares seem to be a bit over-plentiful perhaps. If anything else gets clogged very soon it will probably be the very best grades of roses in different colors. But with the "coming event" of Santa Claus "casting his shadow before," the grower looks very complacent. He expects some good sales at good round prices in the course of the next ten days.

But the potted plant men seem to look rather bewildered. Their goods do not ship city ward so fast as they wish and have not done so at any time this fall. They seem to be wondering what they had better do about it.

The wholesale stores are getting congested with supplies for Christmas. Holly is coming good and selling freely. There is more competition from the vegetable market men than usual, however, in obtaining orders.

Various Items.

J. J. McCormack is getting out cards to advertise himself a wholesale florist at 22 Hawley street. This will make 22-34-84 a good policy "gig" to play. If Welch Bros. should decide to occupy a [illegible] that street the "four of a kind" that formed would surely be hard to beat. The "hand" could put up a great "stiff," too, if necessary. I will not attempt to say whether they would be "jacks," "knaves" or "deuces," but each would surely be a "full house" whenever there is a great "deal" of a "cut" "raised" for their "trays," and "draw" many a "five spot" and "ten spot," in which case they will be "flush" whether "straight" or not. One of them must always "stand Pat," too. But I "pass." You may "call" this too "blind" and not be able to "see" it.

A Glimpse of Coburn Land.

I prophesy a rapid growth in the establishment of J. E. Coburn & Son, of Everett, Mass. This is their first season as commercial growers of cut flowers, although their prowess in local vegetable traffic and enormous pansy plant business is well known. I imagine their acre of open ground put to table vegetable growth produces as much and as good material as any acre in the state. And I know it well, as it lies only a stone's throw from my window, and specimens of different products are almost always on my table. Their pansy plant trade now amounts to about 600,000 plants yearly, most of them being sold from teams in the street. Four acres of ground are utilized.

A Matrimony Vine in Flower and Showing the Long Pendant Sprays.

For their new wholesale venture they have erected a yet unfinished house about 200 feet long and a somewhat smaller one is now in process of construction, and a new office facilitates a growing home trade for which three older houses are well stocked, with house plants and innumerable slips, for next spring's wagon trade. They do not affect a costly style of build, but do build very substantially. An interesting experiment in connection with the house now building is that of using "creosoted" posts, obtained at the Malden rubber factory. They are white cedar into which creosote has been forced at a pressure of 200 pounds per square inch, each post taking up about six quarts of it in a thick liquid form. It is claimed to make them vastly superior in lasting quality at a very small expense. I should consider it an experiment well worthy of general trial.

My excuse for prophesying enlargement is the protected location of the plant, the particularly fine soil in the locality and the general makeup of the men composing the firm. Their carnation plants were too lately set to have produced very much yet, but for the most part are looking A1 and will be heard from later in the season. J. S. Manter.

The Market.

Advance orders for Christmas are unusually large and as the supply will probably not equal that of last year, at least in high grade stock, the present outlook is for more of a shortage than usual. The market is rather bare at present and many growers are undoubtedly storing up as much of their cut as they dare to, though in many cases they probably have little to store. The main shortage promises to be in choice shipping grades and it is quite likely that there may be more than enough of the overdone seconds and thirds when all the storage rooms are opened at the last moment.

Several large growers say there will be a fair supply of Beauties, but a shortage of Meteors and possibly of Maids. Carnations of the first grade will probably also be short in supply. Of the lower grades the supply will probably be as large as usual.

The effects of the warm autumn are not yet entirely overcome and though there is much stock of fine quality, that from growers whose cut usually averages about No. 2 will this season be apt to average about No. 3.

About the only things of which we can be certain of an abundant supply are Romans and paper white narcissus. Of these there will be plenty and the prices will be very reasonable.

One noticeable feature about the advance orders received is that they are almost uniformly for high grade stock, and there is no haggling about the price. If no seconds are to be used in shipping orders it will be apt to make a surplus of the seconds at the last for the local market to take care of, if there is any quantity of them to be placed.

Any grower who has stock stored would be wise to move it in pretty fast as quick as Christmas prices go into effect. Sunday will be the heaviest shipping day and a good deal will go out Friday and Saturday. Anything that is of shiping grade should reach the market by Sunday to enable the dealer to get best value for it.

Various Items.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the usual place tomorrow (Friday) evening. At this meeting the retailers will have an inning.

BUFFALO.

Ten days of hard freezing weather has brought us to realize that Christmas is close at hand. And now I begin to think that we are going to have a soft time for our plant delivery. However much good sleighing may suit Santa Claus in his grand delivery, it is many dollars in our pockets if we can deliver a flowering plant without half a dozen sheets of wrapping paper around it. You occasionally meet a man or woman born in the Vermont hills who says: "Oh, yes, I like cold weather; it's seasonable." They say it because their grandmothers said it. It suits the retailer in all lines of business when you can walk the streets with comfort.

Buffalo hasn't been so gay with parties, balls and receptions for many years and as they are well divided we are all feeling satisfied.

It looks now as if Buffalo would be well supplied with plants of all kinds but flowers would be scarce and high. November was a dark, dreary month and anything but favorable for putting plants in shape for producing good flowers. Stores are decorating very generally, some most elaborately. Ground pine is exhausted. We haven't heard from a reliable source why the supply of this material is so short but did hear casually that the supply was giving out. If so something else will be found to take its place.

Holly is here in too great abundance. We give our order to the amiable drummer in June for so many cases at a certain price and when the middle of December comes we could buy it for at least one-third the price. If there were as many cases sent north as there are carloads now we could almost get along. The price realized after paying freight and commission will certainly make some of the shippers sick this year.

The death of W. J. Palmer, Sr., was a shock to us all. Elsewhere in your columns I have attempted to tell you what we all thought and what I knew of this solid, good natured, successful man. We all looked up to Mr. Palmer. A large gathering of the fraternity was held Saturday afternoon and it was decided to attend his funeral in a body. A committee consisting of W. Scott, D. B. Long, and W. A. Adams was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions of sympathy and condolence, have them engrossed and tendered to the family. At his funeral were many of Buffalo's foremost citizens and it was touching to see as honorary pall bearer the venerable Porter Thompson, Mr. Palmer's employer of 45 years ago.

There runs one trait in Mr. Palmer's character that I have not touched on elsewhere. When he dropped business he was as good natured and full of fun as a school boy. This is a trait that many of us could emulate to the comfort of our fellow beings. He brushed away the clouds that are always ready to hover between us and life's sunshine.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Items.

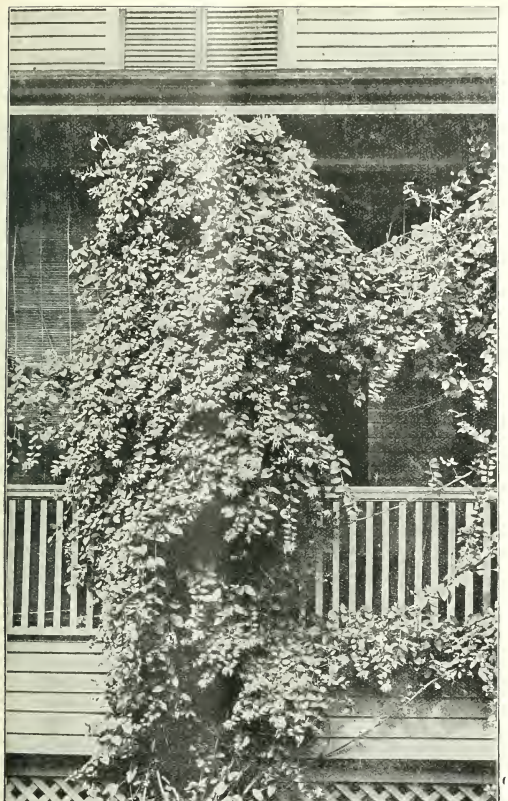
We have had our first touch of genuine winter, the thermometer falling to 15 degrees and 16 degrees for the past five nights, but the air has been crisp and invigorating, the skies the clearest, and the sun the brightest, so that it has so far been ideal weather for the production of flowers, at a time when every factor which makes towards the production of fine blooms is desired and availed of.

Good roses may be said to be scarce, but if there is a shortage of these, there is not likely to be of carnations, which promise to be abundant enough to supply the demand, though in most cases the quality is not of the highest grade. The market at this writing (Dec. 17) is practically bare of violets. Whether growers are holding their product for the end of the week, when Christmas prices will prevail, or there is a real scarcity, cannot just now be told. There is an insect enemy which seems to be doing much damage, and we hear of some growers who are abandoning the culture of this flower, discouraged by the pests, insectivorous and fungous, which infest it. A few days ago one of the savants from the State Agricultural Experiment Station was in the vicinity of this city experimenting with remedies to abate the ravages of the black aphis, but so far no public notice has been given of the success or lack of it, attending his tests.

The Liberty rose is making a reputation here which first appearances did not promise. Indeed, it is said that more than one of our growers, disappointed with its unpromising growth and apparent lack of vigor, had already discarded it, but its magnificent, fiery color, beautiful foliage and stiff, upright stems, all conspire to show that the new candidate, when well grown, is a sure winner amongst the popular favorites.

There have been an unusual number of social festivities during the past few weeks, and these, with some funerals, where the floral displays were large and handsome, have distributed a considerable amount of business throughout the trade.

Mr. Theodore Eckhardt, a well-known German gardener, who some years ago erected a large commercial place near this city, and who latterly has been the correspondent here of one of your contemporaries, has determined to return to Europe. Mr. Eckhardt is an accomplished, all round horticulturist, a man of agreeable address, and an effective and versatile writer, and it is to be regretted that he has not been able to suit himself with a position fitting to his abilities in this country.



A Chinese Honeysuckle Loosely Trained upon Piazza and Showing the Graceful Sprays of Blooms.

The friends of your correspondent, W. S., read with interest his auto-biographical sketch in the last Review, especially as the personality of one of his comrades and co-workers is not concealed, but rather revealed under the initials "A. S.," by which we recognize the efficient and accomplished manager of our Florists' Exchange. To those who know him, it is a matter of felicitation that the attempt of the "three old partners" to assist in the founding of another British Empire in Canada did not succeed, but that two at least "chose the better part," and betook themselves to the United States to grow up with the country, prospering as it has prospered, esteemed, by wide circles of friends, and both known at last, as they desired to become, as skillful and successful gardeners. RIX

PHILADELPHIA.

Business was lively for the first four days of last week. Then came two days of cold weather and the market weakened somewhat. This was due to the weather only in so far as it diminished transient trade. There were other causes. The debutantes were all launched on the social sea, and there was the usual quietness preceding the Christmas rush.

Beauties suffered most, the price falling away on the higher grades. Maids, on the contrary, held their own, as did carnations of good quality. In last week's report I appear to say that "Anything brought $2 a hundred," whereas I intended it to read that anything nice brought that price. Many ordinary flowers were then and still are sold for $1.50 a hundred.

The indications for Christmas point to a very large demand, a fair supply of first-class stock and a heavy supply of the lower grades unless the weather is adverse. In plants business has been active. The stores have large blocks of foliage plants in their conservatories and this week will receive many flowering plants. The indications are that we shall see a great blooming plant Christmas, almost a little Easter in fact.

Poinsettias and stevia, good old favorites, are being pushed to one side and azaleas, cyclamens, begonias and other choice bloomers are here in great shape. It is to be hoped for the sake of this class of stock that the weather proves favorable for the next ten days. Ten degrees above zero may be all right for handling cut flowers if you are careful, and for holly, but it is awfully risky for Gloire de Lorraine and the other plants in flower.

Hugh Graham has offered a reward of $50 for the capture of the person who damaged his glass and plants on Dec. 7. Such outrages are dastardly. It is to be hoped the perpetrator will be found and severely punished.

Best wishes to you all for a profitable Christmas business. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held on Thursday, the 13th, and was the first meeting since the flower show. The show committee reported that there were enough funds on hand to pay all prizes, and they were ordered paid at once. The committee was continued until the next meeting to give them time to wind up all matters pertaining to the show.

Henry Johan of Collinsville, Ill., was elected a member.

N. Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had on exhibition their new late chrysanthemum Superba and was given a certificate of merit. E. W. Guy of Belleville, exhibited a fine vase of Marquis carnations and Dr. A. S. Halstedt showed a fine vase of well-grown mixed carnations.

F. W. Ude, Jr., and H. G. Ude, read their essays, one on "New Carnations," the other on "Violet Culture," and both were well received. Dr. Halstedt was not prepared to read his essay, but will have it ready for the next meeting.

The next meeting of the club, on Jan. 10, will be the annual carnation meeting, and growers of carnations are requested to send new varieties. The club has donated $10, divided into three prizes, for 50 blooms each. First, $5; second, $3; third, $2; open to local growers only.

The delinquent members were given one more month to pay their dues before being dropped from the rolls.

At the next meeting there will be three essays read, one by J. F. Ammann, one by F. C. Weber, and one by Dr. Halstedt. These with the carnation display should make a very interesting afternoon and everybody is invited regardless of membership.

The Market.

The past week the cut flower business was quite lively, especially with funeral work, and very little complaint was heard, and all seemed satisfied. The wholesalers all feel happy. They report out-of-town orders more plentiful and business as a whole an improvement over last year. The retail stores look bright and pretty with lycopodium wreaths, holly wreaths, and other Christmas greens.

Stores with greenhouses have displayed fine pots of azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamen, stevia and primroses, with a fine collection of palms, ferns and other foliage plants. Carnations seem to be in good supply while violets are none too plentiful. Roses are not over-plentiful and the best bring from $4 to $8 per 100, Brides and Maids from Vesey and Kuhl being especially fine. Meteors seem off color and a great many buds are seen which are not salable. Beauties are very scarce, and will be from now on. The best bring $4 and $5 per dozen; short-stemmed roses from $2 down to 75 cents per dozen.

It looks like there will be an overproduction of Romans and paper whites as more of them are coming in every day than there is a demand for. Harrisii are very scarce. Growers about here don't seem to care to force them for Christmas. They would sell well just now. Callas are very scarce, too, and they also would sell well at this time of the year.

Carnations are selling better than ever and plenty of them are coming in. The demand at present is great and they bring from $1.50 to $4; only the fancy varieties bring the latter price. Good Daybreak, Scott, Flora Hill and other standard varieties sell at $2. California violets brought $1.25 for the best. Very few were sold below $1 per 100 and they are very scarce at that. Smilax has become scarce; very little is coming in and price is still $12.50 per 100 strings.

Notes.

W. E. Jordan, who was hurt recently in a street car accident, is up, but not well enough to come down town. Willie says not until after the first of the year.

Winfred Whitman, who was formerly with H. G. Berning, is now with Frank Ellis. Winfred is quite a hustler.

R. G. Mohr of the Missouri Botanical Garden will spend his Christmas at his home in Omaha and will leave for that place this week. J. J. B.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Trade Notes.

Trade conditions here are about the same as last week. Good stock continues in good demand and the retailers report a good demand in all lines of flowers. The weather has lately been just the kind we need at this time, and if we can have a few inches of snow this week it would benefit the holiday trade a good deal. Everybody expects a good holiday business and all are preparing to meet a heavy demand. All available stock of good quality around here has been spoken for for some time and a few who were a little slow are hustling around trying to place their order somewhere. Shipped stock is seldom as satisfactory as home grown, and especially is this true at times when there is an unusual demand everywhere, such as Xmas and Easter.

Bertermann Bros. have a fine stock of plants to meet the holiday demands, and will no doubt do a large business as usual. Back of their store they have a conservatory which is at present a blaze of color. Besides a fine lot of azaleas, begonias and cyclamen, they have a grand lot of poinsettias, both in pans and on the bench, to cut from. There is no doubt about this being one of the best Xmas plants on account of its brilliant color, and those who take the trouble to handle them properly usually do well with them. This firm also has some handsome baskets filled with plants on which they did well last year. One can hardly overestimate the value of even a small greenhouse in connection with a store. Not only are they handy for storing decorative plants, but all kinds of plants can be kept so much better than in a dark storeroom. Those who have them can carry a much larger and better line of stock. Bertermanns' have theirs fitted up with electric lights and it shows up fine. They have recently purchased a lot of orchid plants and intend to use them more extensively in their high grade work.

John Rieman is usually busy with funeral work, and as a designer he is hard to beat. He handles a very high grade of stock, which is after all the most satisfactory.

A Merry Xmas to the Review and all its readers is the wish of A. B.

DENVER, COLO.

For several weeks we have had a beautiful run of weather, very summery indeed. Nearly every afternoon it's warm enough to give one that feeling to look out the door and expect to see the 'bus go by loaded with ball-players. I guess we all lean a little bit that way. Such weather may not be good for stock, but it certainly helps trade and if it will only continue till after Christmas everybody will be thankful.

There will be a shortage in cut flowers for Christmas. Beauties, perhaps, more so than anything else. Good teas will also be scarce. Carnations promise to go round, although reds may be scarce before the day is over. There will be enough violets, but very few really good ones. One or two growers promise mums. Holly and greens are going off well and greens bring a good price, owing to the shortage. It is pleasing to state that from advance sales it will be a plant Christmas, and the market is pretty well supplied. A few fine poinsettias are to be seen, although the sale on the plant has been heavy since Thanksgiving day. Other fine plants seen around the growers are azaleas, cyclamens, primulas and hyacinth pans.

In looking around I noticed a fine lot of lilacs being forced in by the Park Floral Co. Rocky.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The weather is cold, bright and sunshiny. The demand for carnations has been so active that it has caused an advance in the price; they will be in very short supply for Christmas. There will be plenty of roses mostly of good quality. There are a few Jerome Jones, Rieman, Murdock and Bonnaffon mums still to be seen at some of the greenhouses; they will help out on Christmas. Murdock is the best midseason and late pink mum we know of. There will be large quantities of Romans and paper white. The violet crop is remarkably short as a whole, all owing to the protracted hot weather in the fall, and even now it is hard to keep the temperature as low as required. An attempt to get in a house of Harrisii is a partial failure, only a portion will be in bloom. Judging from the immense quantity of holly on hand, besides other greens, it is expected vast quantities will be used in decorating. Brown's seed store alone has two carloads of holly besides wreathing, laurel, etc.

Funerals have been numerous, and prevented much if any pickling of stock for Christmas.

Prices: Roses, $2 to $3 per dozen; carnations, 75 cents to $1; Romans and paper whites, 75 cents; violets, 30 cents; mums, $1 to $2 per dozen.

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. have a nice supply of poinsettias and will hit it rich.

Aug. Rolker, of New York, was a visitor this week. G. F. C.

SOME NEW LABELS.

Mr. Daniel B. Long, Buffalo, N. Y., sends us some samples of new address cards or labels he has prepared for use on packages of cut flowers and plants to be shipped. On the label for cut flowers appears a rose in colors, the red and green being very natural. The rest of the matter, including the usual phrases, such as "Perishable," "This side up," "Keep from extreme heat or cold," etc., is printed in black and there are lines left for filling in the name and address.

Another label is for shipment of plants, and bears a pretty picture in colors of a pot geranium. Red and green are again used. There are lines for the address and in the letterpress in black appear lines reading: "Florists' greenhouse stock. Not subject to San Jose scale laws," and "Bill at special plant rates."

They are well gotten up and are sure to attract attention. They will no doubt prove generally useful.

THE BUFFALO BERRY.

Well berried branches of the Buffalo berry (sheperdia) have this year been added to the list of material for Christmas decorations, and they have taken well in the Chicago market. The berries are not so deep a scarlet as those of the holly but they are very showy, and the narrow leaves permit them to be very readily seen. While this berried shrub could not take the place of holly it will no doubt prove a welcome addition to our Christmas material if it can be put into the market every season in as good condition as this year.

The shrub is a native of the Western States and is hardy as far north as Dakota. It is a native that should receive more attention from the planter of hardy shrubs.

MULCHING: ITS USE AND ABUSE.

That mulching is a good and important detail in the culture of many crops and trees no one will deny, but I am afraid it has its evil effects also. The principle of mulching is liable to be misconstrued, and there is a likelihood of the system falling into evil repute among those who neglect or do not understand some of the details that go to make mulching an unqualified success. To those who well understand the principle of mulching and its advantages it will appear quite superfluous that I should attempt to explain here the details of practice and mention some of these advantages; but those who are beginners in horticultural pursuits—and they are a daily increasing body—will probably appreciate a few details, for there is more useful practice than that of systematic mulching.

What is mulching? is a question that the beginner may very well ask. It is the application of various substances as a covering to the soil above the roots of trees, plants, or vegetables to prevent or check evaporation, thus preserving, as far as possible, a uniform degree of heat and moisture in the soil. This indicates the broad principles of mulching. All recently transplanted trees and shrubs, ornamental or utilitarian, are greatly assisted by a mulching of decayed vegetable refuse or half-rotted manure. With a covering of either of these warmth and moisture is retained, and to newly planted trees this is of much consequence, as in their weakened state they are less able to withstand extremes of cold, heat, or drought. Especially to growing crops, like peas, for example, the conservation of moisture about the roots is much better than the artificial supply of water. A mulching of any material prevents sun and wind drying the surface soil to such an extent as to cause fissures to appear, and it is through such fissures the sun absorbs moisture from below, thus robbing the roots of one thing necessary to their well-being. For newly planted fruit trees and shrubs in soil that is heavy, and therefore retentive of moisture, half-decayed horse manure is the most suitable mulch, but for light, sandy soil freshly collected manure from the stable or cow shed is the most valuable.

For kitchen garden crops any non-conducting material, such as straw, cocoanut fibre refuse, decayed vegetable refuse, or even grass, is advantageous in the absence of manure. The evil in connection with mulching established crops in the kitchen-garden, like peas, is deferring too long the application of the mulch. It is useless waiting until drought has laid the foundation of mildew fungous and partly ruined the crop before attempting to arrest its progress or prevent its inception. Early mulching is a good system to follow, whether the weather is excessively dry or not; it will undoubtedly be wanted. In connection with newly planted fruit trees I wish especially to notice the bad practice of applying a mulch in November and allowing it to remain until it has decayed. When the soil is of a heavy character it is naturally cold in the spring, owing to its retention of moisture. The mulching material keeps the soil still cold by intercepting the warming influence of the sun, and in this way the soil remains cold and is not at all favorable to early root action. By moving the manure to one side from off the space where the roots are, when warm, dry weather sets in in April, and leaving it off until the soil has become tolerably dry on the surface, the sun's warmth will penetrate to the roots more quickly, inciting them into action.

There is still one other point to guard against—that of leaving the material off too long, thus allowing the soil to become over dry and so neutralizing the good effect of mulching.—E. Molyneux, in Gardeners' Magazine.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Hartford Florists' Club was organized Dec. 11 with officers as follows: President, T. J. McRonalds; vice-president, W. W. Hunt; treasurer, D. A. Spear; secretary, J. F. Coombs; trustees, John Coombs, George Osborn and G. W. McClunie, with the four officers. A committee on by-laws was appointed to report at the next meeting, which President McRonalds will call.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

A visit to several of the leading establishments revealed the fact that there is going to be a decided scarcity in most all kinds of flowers for Christmas and wholesale prices have already advanced 20 per cent more than a year ago. The retailers are wondering where the supply is coming from and consequently a little cautious about booking large orders.

We have had no signs of winter here yet and the weather during the past two weeks has been anything but favorable for the growers. Albert Barbee is on good terms with himself as all his stock with the exception of carnations is coming on in full crop for the holidays. His Brides and Maids are grand—cannot be beat. All florists visiting his place can now smoke at Mr. Barbee's expense. He has also a bunch of fine azaleas.

Trade in the past two weeks has been a little disappointing and not nearly enough funeral stock to please Arthur Newell.

Notes.

Timothy Noll has left the city and engaged in business for himself at Joplin, Mo., a thriving mining town where he ought to do well. Percy Beachenburg, an aristocratic looking young man in the employ of Mr. Geo. M. Kellogg, was in town last week telling us how to grow eight-foot Beauties. Mr. Beachenburg says the houses built last summer are all right, and when he becomes thoroughly familiar with our climatic changes, thinks he has a remedy that will prevent a shortage of stock at this important time of the year.

W. C. Lodder, of Hamilton, Ohio, bound for the Pacific coast, was a visitor last week. Mr. Lodder is in search of good health and recuperated so rapidly while here and was so well impressed with Kansas City, that he promised to return this way, and tell us of things horticultural of California. GOVERNMENT SEEDS.

Washington.—The lowest bidder for the contract of furnishing seeds for congressional distribution during the fiscal year 1902 received by the Agricultural Department was the New York Market Gardeners' Association, at $101,975. The other estimates submitted were:

Henry Phillips Seed and Implement Company, Toledo, Ohio	$113,065
California Seed Growers' Company, San Francisco	118,000
Ullathorne Seed Company, Memphis, Tenn.	119,957
E. J. Weatherly, Chicago	119,765
Germain Seed and Plant Company, Los Angeles	122,000
Sioux City Seed and Nursery Company	130,000
J. L. Schiller, New York	150,000

West Brookfield, Mass. — Samuel Wass, formerly of the firm of Wass & Brown, florists, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. The liabilities amount to $2,697.93, with no assets.

Hamilton, Ont.—The Robert Evans Seed Company, Limited, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The directors include R. C. Steele and S. E. Briggs, of Toronto, and James W. Hogg, of this city.

MADISON, N. J.

The regular meeting of Morris County Gardeners and Florists was held in Masonic Hall on Wednesday last, President Duckham in the chair.

The treasurer reported all matters in connection with the recent show settled and the proceeds showed a slight advance upon the previous year. A letter was read from F. G. Laeverenz thanking the society on behalf of the Galveston Florists for the hearty way in which their cause had been advocated and the substantial results that had followed.

Election of officers was the chief order of business and resulted in the re-election of President Duckham, Secretary Atkins and Treasurer Charlton. J. Davies of Morristown, being the successful candidate in the vice-presidential contest. The president in an earnest speech requested the hearty support of the members in making the coming year even more fruitful of good results than the past had been.

He also told of some of the things he had seen during his recent European trip, referring specially to the chrysanthemums he saw in England. The best he saw were fully the equal of the best produced here, whilst he thought they had a much longer list of kinds that stood in the front rank of highest merit than we had here and not a few of them were well worthy of trial here. The new plants in the Sander establishment at St. Albans and the pot fruit trees at River's Sawbridgeworth nursery were also highly praised.

It was decided to have a "smoker" on the occasion of the regular January meeting. H.

CHESTNUT HILL, PA.

At the December meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, John T. Morris; vice presidents, William Boyce, Alexander Stewart, Frank Gould, Fred Michell; treasurer, William H. Houston; executive council, Charles A. Knapp, Robert G. Carey, Hans Reuter, Charles W. Henry, Randal Morgan, Robert Le Boutillier, J. H. Humphreys.

The exhibits were of good quality and several premiums and certificates of merit were awarded, the winners being G. W. Brown, James Bell, M. Bunch, William Vander Ver, John Little, Frank Gould and Edwin Lonsdale.

Eleven applicants were admitted to membership, and the committee on the fall show reported all accounts and premiums paid and a small balance in the treasury. J. H. H.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES FOR XMAS

ever offered in this market. Our "long," which we quote at $12 per dozen, measure from 36 to 48 inches, are stiff-stemmed and well covered with dark green foliage. Do you want some of them? We shall have a large supply of Beauties from 15 to 24 inches. We have booked a great many orders but will have some to spare. If your wholesaler cannot fill your order, try us.

Of tea roses Meteors will be very scarce, and Maids will also be short of the demand. On Brides and Perles we expect to fill all orders.

We shall be well fixed on Carnations, but red will be scarce; you had better think twice before taking orders for them. All other stock we shall have in quantity. Write, telegraph or telephone your order today.

ST. PAUL.

Various Items.

Thanksgiving trade was very good, there being a good demand for all cut flowers. Stock has been somewhat scarce and prices have ruled higher than for several years. Indications point to a big Christmas trade and every one is making preparations for the biggest trade on record. In cut flowers, roses and bulbous stock will be quite plentiful, while violets and carnations will fall short of the demand.

While there is an increased area of glass over last year, there is still a shortage of good stock, which leads us to remark that our growers are not growing the proper stock. If they would plant more carnations and fewer bedding plants, more specialties and less general stock, profits would be larger and much of the good money that now goes to Chicago would remain at home. However, preaching is easier than practice, and I will not sermonize more at present.

Christmas greens are very much in evidence on every hand. Bouquet green is very short in quantity, but of good quality. Holly appears to be of good quality and fairly plentiful. Mistletoe is apparently as popular as ever and every one seems to want a sprig or two at least, while many buy it by the pound.

One party here who carried over some green from last year seems to be making a good thing out of it. By carefully selecting and dyeing it, a very presentable festooning is made which sells readily.

L. L. May & Co. have a nice lot of Harrisii lilies and azaleas that will be just right for Christmas gifts.

Holm & Olsen are out with a brand new rig for delivering.

Haugen & Swansen had quite a bad freeze a few weeks since, which proved disastrous to several houses of violets.

All violets in this vicinity are late and will be scarce until after the holidays.

GRAFTING.

Under the heading "Molecular Possibilities" Mr. A. V. Folsom contributes to a California paper an interesting article on grafting from which we print some extracts below:

To the speculative mind the study of some phases of horticulture and floriculture afford peculiar interest. One of these is the objective faculty exhibited in tree growth. The orange, for instance, takes from the generous soil those elements that through the agency of the sun's rays are converted into the outward color, structure and flavor characteristic of its fruit. The lemon tree, on alike soil and from the same soil produces a fruit that differs materially in every essential. Whence comes this difference? It is not in the root. You may graft orange to lemon or lemon to orange and the top graft will determine the fruit. It is not in the sap. You may have orange and lemon, grape fruit and lime all growing on one tree and the sap is the common carrier for them all. Does it reside in the wood? The writer saw recently a lemon grove, the trees of which were originally grafted on bitter-orange roots, but oranges being more profitable, the owner was topping the trees preparatory to budding to navel oranges, confident of the result. The lemon-wood stem would not affect the orange flavor an iota, but the lemon stem would produce only buds after its kind. The structural difference of the cells of these two woods, which microscopic investigation would show to be slight, accounts for the difference of the fruit.

Budding permits the union of more widely diversified members of a family. All members of the citrus family bud interchangeably. The order rosaceae, of which the apple, pear, peach, rose, etc., are members, is another illustration of the affinity that exists in families. Apples are commonly grafted on pear stock to insure speedier growth, and those desiring rose trees can achieve their desire by budding roses to peach stock. Recent discoveries tend to destroy the old idea that a difference in order was necessarily a bar to the budding of one tree on another. A French scientist has been conducting a series of experiments in grafting along these lines and finds that plants of entirely different families might be grafted with success. For example, the maple upon the lilac, the kidney bean upon the castor-oil bean, the cabbage upon the tomato. The whole question of grafting seems to resolve itself into one of molecular similarity. As chemists classify metals in groups by their atomic weight, so family types are marked by the similarity of the molecules of their cell formation and it would seem that it would be only necessary to find some means of determining the molecular size of a wood to be able to graft it. This opens up a vista of surprising possibilities. You cannot graft orange on apple, not on account of any family barrier, but because the molecular atoms that go to build up the apple cell are coarser than those of the orange and cannot circulate through the exquisitely minute channels of the orange wood. Note the difference between the close-grained orange wood and the coarse-fibered apple wood and see if the theory is not reasonable.

A WARNING.

We have received the following communication from Prof. Wm. Trelease, Director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, St. Louis, under date of Dec. 14:

It may possibly interest you to know, for the benefit of your readers, that plant agents have been operating in Indiana, at least, as representing a firm located at Shaw's Garden, St. Louis, Mo. One such party is said to have given the name of G. A. Sawley & Company. If you care to protect your readers who may be subject to similar misrepresentations kindly announce that "Shaw's Garden," as the Missouri Botanical Garden is popularly called, is not a commercial etsablishment, does not sell plants or have agents on the road, and knows nothing of persons making representations similar to those that are here referred to.

CHICAGO TRADE PRESS.

The Chicago Trade Press Association is an organization of about fifty of the leading trade papers of the city, and at its monthly meetings there are very interesting and useful discussions upon the various phases of the work of the editors and publishers of trade journals. Various social events have been inaugurated by the association, and the latest was an informal entertainment on Dec. 11, at which the ladies were present and at which a most enjoyable programme was rendered by artists who kindly volunteered for the occasion.

Of those who gave selections were Mr. E. J. Southwick, humorous recitations; Mr. Ralph B. Adams and Mr. George B. Knaggs, assistant, sleight of hand; Mr. Harry E. Davis, French horn soloist; Mr. G. B. Brigham, accompanist; Miss Alma Borman, vocalist; Prof. Wm. Rahn, zither soloist. Of those who came through members were Miss Mills, piano; Mrs. Barrett, piano; Mr. E. T. Clissold, vocal; Mrs. H. J. Bohn, piano; Mrs. John J. Bohn, violin. The Cable Piano Company kindly sent one of their finest pianos for the use of the artists.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Iowa State Horticultural Society at its annual meeting held last week elected the following officers: President, M. J. Wragg, Waukee; vice-president, N. K. Fluke, Davenport; secretary, Wesley Green, Davenport; treasurer, Elmer D. Reeves, Waverly.

SOMERVILLE, N. J.—As the result of a boiler explosion the greenhouses of Houston & Norton were destroyed by fire Dec. 12. The loss is estimated at $6,000.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

After New Year's there is the commencement again of operations for our Easter crops, but before I attempt to remind you of any of these, just a word about some things of which you want to preserve some stock for future crops.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias that have been grown in pots and cut should be laid under a warm, dry bench and be let go perfectly dry, where they want no attention, till early next April. If grown on a bench, lift the plants and place them in flats, with a little dry soil around the roots and put them under the bench. If you don't have a dry bench, then a corner in a warm shed will do just as well.

Azaleas.

It's not likely you succeeded in getting into good flower all your early azaleas, but they will be quite as useful for a few weeks yet, so keep them going in a warm house, for they will about stand still if removed to a house where you are keeping your late azaleas.

Stevia.

We seem to want an ever increasing quantity of that graceful common flower, the sweet stevia. It helps wonderfully in many a bunch of flowers, but is usually all cut before the new year. Save a dozen pots after the stems are cut down to within a foot of the surface and put on some cool, light bench. You will want them for propagating in March and April.

Lily of the Valley.

From now on the newly imported pips of valley will be depended upon for forcing. If you sorted them when received, keeping the strongest together, these should be first used. Last year we boxed in sixteen feet of bench beneath which are four-inch pipes, placing slates instead of board for bench bottoms, and on that seven inches of sand. We shade the first ten days with one-half inch wooden shutters, and then replace the boards with cheese cloth shading, and to finish them off for the last few days no covering at all unless exposed to the sun. As the sand is about 80 to 85 degrees, and the air of the house about 55 degrees, you cannot fail to produce good flowers and foliage. When first put in the sand or till growth starts you can water over the whole bed, but after a week water between the rows only. Water faithfully every day and twice, if you are firing hard, but don't let water touch the bells after they show color.

Lilac.

Lilac was offered during December, possibly from plants kept in cold storage. Imported plants can be forced for the holidays, but it requires much higher temperature and hardly pays. From now on M. Le Graye comes along very nicely and without any special demand it is always most useful. In the absence of a very warm house the pots or boxes can be stood on edge of path, where the heat from the pipes will soon start the buds. Syringe frequently till the color shows.

Spiraea.

Some say they can force spiraea (Astilbe japonica) in six weeks. We never get it much too early in three months, and soon after New Year's start them going in six and seven inch pots. It is true there is not a great demand for it, nor is it profitable, but you want a few. If the roots have been kept dry till now soak a few minutes before potting, and they do just as well under a bench for two or three weeks as on the top.

Cyclamen.

Few plants have sold better this Christmas than the cyclamen, and how few we see really first class! The trouble with their cultivation is that during the twelve or fifteen months of their growth from the seed to flowering there must be no let up to their care. Once a serious check to their growth and it's all off. There is no such thing as to bring them around again, as we can with so many of our plants. Now, this everlasting watchfulness, the quality that marks the true and successful grower, is seldom bestowed on the cyclamen except by specialists. You start off with seed, meaning well, but a fatal day comes around Easter, when the young plants have been allowed to get parching dry, or two weeks in early June they have bad most slipshod care because you were driven to death with your bedding plants. We are all guilty of this, but I tell you it's not gardening, and there is no plant more deserving of your unremitting care than the beautiful cyclamen.

I would call a plant in a six or perhaps a seven-inch pot, with perfect but not too luxuriant foliage and fifty open flowers and more buds to come, almost the unequaled and ideal Christmas plant. There are a great many such cyclamen plants, I am aware, and some much finer, but the plant I have described would retail at $2 to $3 each, and would that not be a most profitable plant to grow? I am commenting at length on the cyclamen because the Christmas just past has impressed me more than ever that it is our ideal flowering plant and you can say with such confidence and pleasure: "Oh, yes, ma'am, that is one of its best qualities; it is an ideal house plant, growing and blooming in a light window of your house as well as it does in our greenhouses here," which is all about the truth, but is much too long a speech for Christmas eve. Lengthen your cultural dissertations to your customers according to exigencies of the season.

Cyclamen sown at end of September or early October will be about ready to take from the seed pan and transplant either several in a three-inch pot or in flats again. The latter is preferred, as there is less likelihood of neglect of watering, or rather the plants suffering from it. Use a good loam and leaf mould, half and half, and keep the young plants on a light bench in about 55 degrees at night. Cyclamen sown even now and grown without any check will make most acceptable plants for next Christmas.

Cannas.

There is not much hurry about many seeds for a few weeks, but remember that if cannas are wanted a good size at bedding time they must be sown early. They require a strong heat to get them to start and there is also danger of fungus carrying off the seedlings when the sand is very warm. The cannas come largely true from seed, and if sown at once you can have fine plants in flower by middle of May.

The great bulk of cannas are, of course, increased by divisions of the roots, but sales are so close every spring that we never have stock enough left and have to depend on raising a good many from seed. There is not the slightest indication that the canna will in the near future decline in popular favor. It's a plant that suits our semi-tropical summers in every way.

William Scott.

CARNATION NOTES.

Temperature.

If you have been running the temperature in your carnation houses higher than usual during the past week or two, you must be just as careful in reducing it now after the holidays are over. If you lower it too suddenly it will cause the calyxes to burst, so be careful and lower it a degree each night. There are very few varieties that will not burst their calyx if subjected to too many sudden changes in temperature.

Weak Stems.

If you notice any weakness in the stems or any other evil effects from the recent forcing there is nothing better than a dose of lime. Sprinkle it on the soil between the plants about as thick as you do bone meal before planting. Rake it into the soil about one-half inch deep and then water the bed thoroughly. Have the bench just a little on the dry side when you put it on; but do not apply when the soil is quite dry.

Many growers do not appreciate the value of lime in keeping the soil in good condition and their plants in good health. An occasional dose keeps the soil sweet and puts the food into proper condition for the plant to take up. If you put on a light mulch in November it will by this time be washed into the soil and taken up by the plants. A dose of lime will put the soil into condition to receive another light mulch in a week or two.

Better not begin feeding liquid for a month yet at least. It takes great care and excellent judgment to feed properly at this time of the year and unless you are an expert you would better wait until the sun is stronger and the soil dries out quicker. There is still a good deal of food left in the soil and with an occasional light mulch and a few doses of lime or hardwood ashes the plants will keep in good condition and produce fine blooms for some time to come.

Profitable Varieties.

Now that the holiday rush is past you will likely be getting ready to propagate your next season's carnation stock. Every year we are obliged to change our list of varieties or the quantity we plant of each variety. Of some we want more, of others less, and some varieties we want to drop altogether to make room for the better ones.

Of the standard white varieties there are really only two that are grown in quantity all over the country—Flora Hill and White Cloud. Both are grand varieties and it is hard to say which is the more popular, or profitable, taking the season through.

For the wholesale grower of fancy stock White Cloud is perhaps the more profitable because it produces an enormous crop of fine blooms on long, strong stems during mid-winter when they bring good prices, while as an all season variety Flora Hill is the best. Flora Hill begins to bloom soon after you plant it and keeps on blooming freely all winter. Up to about February the stems are rather weak and it does not sell as a fancy; but when the stems come strong again it is a favorite with everybody. It is one of the very best keepers the year round.

White Cloud with most growers begins to bloom about December and continues to bear fine blooms until warm weather sets in, when the blooms begin to get poor and it does not keep well after being cut. During cool weather it is a good keeper.

If you want a steady supply of high grade blooms throughout the season you must grow both of these varieties as each is at its best when the other is in its poorest stage. But if you grow only a limited quantity and want only one white variety I would advise you to plant Flora Hill. It blooms from the time you plant it until you throw it out the next fall and with the exception of a few months in winter it produces the highest grade of blooms.

As an exhibition variety White Cloud is the best on account of its fine stem and general showiness.

These two varieties are as different in their requirements as they are in appearance. White Cloud wants plenty of water and a cool temperature and a good strong soil, while Flora Hill wants a higher temperature, a little on the dry side, and not too much feeding.

L. McGowan, which was once the leading white, is no more a profitable variety. It is not a better producer than Flora Hill and the blooms always grade low.

Evelina has been a great disappointment to those who bought it when it came out. We all expected it to become the leading white, but it had a weak constitution and bacteria soon settled it.

Mary Wood is considered by some to be a profitable variety and where it does well it may pay. It is not a pure white, though, and it is inclined to burst.

Glacier makes fine, large, pure white blooms, but on short stems. Where there is much design work this variety ought to be profitable. John Young is very free, but the blooms are small and warm weather soon settles it.

Among the standard pink varieties we place Mrs. F. Joost far ahead of all the others as a money maker. It has a fine upright habit, always makes a strong, wiry stem and is a remarkably free and constant bloomer. The color is the ideal pink, as it never shows the slightest trace of blue. The blooms are hardly large enough for exhibition, but of ample size for a commercial carnation. It is a favorite with the store men on account of its color, stem and good keeping qualities; and with the growers because of its great productiveness and selling quality. This variety is likely to take the place that Scott held several years, when it becomes more generally known. Last spring we discarded all other pinks in favor of this variety and we are satisfied that we did a wise thing.

Triumph is a favorite with some growers and wherever it does well it is profitable. Most growers have trouble in making it bloom during midwinter, but those who have mastered this difficulty consider it one of the best. The color is good and the blooms are large and borne on long, strong stems. This is a variety for the experts.

Victor has a fine color in winter, but warm weather causes it to fade. Being a sport from Daybreak it is very brittle and straggly in growth. Mrs. Jas. Dean is one of the prettiest pink varieties, but comes into bloom too late unless given an extra early start as a cutting and on the bench. The color is fine. Also a variety for the experts. Melba failed to come up to general expectations. The bloom and stem are fine, but the growth is soft and subject to bacteria. Cerise Queen is considered profitable by many and it certainly is away ahead of old Tidal Wave, which it somewhat resembles in color. Leslie Paul has a fine color, best described as American Beauty color, but is hardly free enough to be profitable. The growth is healthy and the stem is long and strong.

Wm. Scott is still a favorite with many on account of its easy culture, but it cannot compare with Mrs. Joost in color or stem. Daybreak still leads in that color, but there are several good ones to come out soon in that color. Whether they will displace it or not is yet to be seen.

Mrs. McBurney was looked upon by many as Daybreak's successor, but it failed. The color is not as pleasing and the growth is no better than Daybreak.

TYING CARNATIONS.

In the Review for Nov. 29 I noted an article on tying up carnations. The method described is certainly a good one if the first wires (six inches from the ground) are put in shortly after planting, but at this time of the year it would be a difficult matter to run these lower wires through a bench of plants that were laying down. I use the following described support with success:

I cut wires about 40 inches long and bend them over a piece of 4-inch pipe, so as to make it the same as two 18-inch stakes, only connected. Then on a 6-row bench I stretch three wires (one on each side and one in the center of the bench) about 12 inches from the surface of the soil. To these wires the supports are fastened the same as in a rose house. Four more supports are placed, one between each plant. Then string is used, making a niee square for each plant. Having your string on a spool enables you to do the work the quickest. This, to my notion, is better than the old ring, for the plant is not crowded and you have plenty of room for working the soil.

A. N. Sherg.

Lansing, Mich.

Mr. Sherg's method no doubt serves the purpose of supporting his carnations and must be satisfactory to him at least. However, I do not consider it superior to, or even equal to, the method I recommended some weeks ago, and used by us. There is certainly more work about it, and it is perhaps more expensive as well. He has to use as much wire (if not more) and it needs to be heavier for the upright arches. Mr. S. does not say just how he applies the string, but whatever way he does it, he can hardly do it quicker than we can tie the string to the outside wire and wrap once around each wire across the bench and tie to the other outside wire. The strings are cut beforehand in lengths to reach across the bench. It takes two men to work our method to advantage, but they do not need to lose any time in waiting on each other if both are dexterous with their fingers. While one does the first half on one string the other is doing the last half of the other, and it would surprise you to see how fast two quick workers can get over a bench.

Any support is easier put on shortly after planting, and any support will take longer to put on after the carnations are laying all over the bench, but our method is not so hard to put on even then, as Mr. S. seems to think. The wires are stretched just the same, whether the carnations are standing up or laying down, and as the strings are put on, the plants are lifted into place without breaking even the most brittle stems. It is not necessary to run the wires between the stems before putting on the strings, but every plant and every stem is put into its square as the strings are put on. It takes longer to put it on than it does before the plants begin to lay down on account of lifting the plants into place, that is all. We aim to put on the first tier as soon as the beds have been weeded thoroughly, to save time in weeding. There are other methods that do the work as well as ours, but for cheapness and the time it takes to put it on, etc., we have never seen its superior.

ROSE NOTES.

Taken as a whole, the weather has favored the grower up to Christmas and if the Christmas crop did not turn out as desired we ought not to throw the whole blame upon the weather. Our roses may have been very nice during the summer and early fall, and we may have had roses to throw away then. But it is a mistake to cut the plants down too much at that time, for by taking away so much of the foliage we deprive them of their breathing surface and thereby check the action of the roots, and as a result the plant lacks strength at the time we expect the most from it. Or we may have given too much water at times, or mildew, greenly and a host of other things may have caused a setback, much of which could have been avoided had we thought before it was too late.

If you have been compelled to force your roses much it is best to give them a little rest, which is done by lowering the temperature some and keeping the plants on the dry side for a week or ten days. This will enable them to regain their strength, and the new growth will be far healthier and stronger than if the plants were forced continually.

Manetti stocks are arriving and there should be no delay in potting them. Place in a house having a temperature of about 55 degrees, keep somewhat shaded and spray them occasionally. Encourage the root action in every way. I am a firm believer in grafted plants. They not only produce a better flower and a better stem, but they are not so susceptible to disease or to injury from mistreatment, which last is an important item when you are unfortunate enough to have poor help. This applies to the teas only. In the case of Beauties I have seen no advantage from grafting and favor own root stock.

GERANIUMS.

To the florist with only a limited amount of room the question of growing a sufficient number of geraniums cheaply and profitably is a serious one. Yet, with plenty of hot-bed sash, considerable quantities of good plants can be economically produced.

Taking it for granted that all available space is occupied in October or by the time the plants outside ought to be in, dig your plants, taking off most all the foliage, pot into medium-sized pots and place under the lightest benches until mums or some other crop is out of the way, when the geraniums can be brought up and placed in the full light. By January the first batch of cuttings can be taken and propagation can continue until the first of March, when the old plants can be trimmed back, shaken out and repotted, and brought along with the rest.

By the latter part of March or in early April prepare your frames, not by placing on hotbeds, but by putting manure around and between the frames so as to make them wholly frost-proof and give some heat, with some long litter in reserve to throw on the glass when needed. When repotting from 3-inch to 4-inch the geraniums can be brought out and placed in the frames, partly plunged and set the right distance apart. They make fine, short, sturdy growth in this way and are not occupying valuable space inside. Some of the newer varieties are well worth trial. J. O. E.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The week preceding Christmas has passed quietly. There has been but little demand for flowers and growers seem content not to hurry delivery of goods. Indications are that large orders have been taken for Sunday and Monday delivery.

Green material of all kinds is moving rapidly. Nothing is getting out of condition except it may be bulb material, pricea on which have not advanced and probably will not do so, but on the more important crops the figures have been steadily growing and have probably not yet reached their maximum (Saturday p. m.), except in the case of violets, which have touched $2.50 per 100, and I do not think will exceed it.

Best American Beauties are being quoted at $18 per dozen, and a few Meteors and Liberties will bring $4, as reds are quite scarce. A few very choice bridesmaids and Carnots are spoken of at $6. Carnations from $3 to $8 per 100. Lilies are not too numerous to bring $2.50 and $3 per dozen.

Various Items.

W. W. Taibby fluttered blithely down the stone steps on Park street upon Dec. 17 with a pot of yellow jonquils in one hand (the very first of the season) and the best box of Roman hyacinths in the city in the other. Five minutes later L. H. Mann followed with a dozen cut blooms of jonquils and a day or two later a small bunch of double ones were in. It is said "Troubles never come singly," but jonquils do, and they will soon prove themselves "troubles," too.

The widespread interest of our best citizens in street trees and other plants was proven at a banquet of the Wellesley Club a few evenings since, which I attended by the courtesy of W. J. Dana. In widening a short section of the main street of Wellesley, justly celebrated for its beauty as well as for its wealth and respectability, a few trees have been sacrificed and a committee appointed to examine the whole length of the street raised something of a protest by recommending the removal of more of them for different reasons. It looks lucky for that committee that they did not remove them before explaining fully why this should be done. One leading citizen told plaintively of the removal of trees almost as valued as his best and oldest friends, and actually threatened to leave town if more were taken away! The town carries a "tree warden," who can talk as well as saw and chop. He votes with the committee, as do most of the club after things are properly held up to them.

Malden.

The smaller greenhouses around the Hub are more liable to produce surprises than the larger ones. One hears so much of the latter that they sometimes fail to come up to expectations.

Burdened with this thought I occupied a stray hour by a trip to the establishment of E. D. Kaulback & Son, Malden.

In an almost secluded corner of the city upon a street almost entirely owned by Mr. Kaulback, although well populated, lies their range of ten houses, each 100 feet long. They build rather cheaply, planning to rebuild at least one house each year rather than to make general repairs upon them all. Is there not an element of philosophy in the plan? In connection with the two rebuilt this season they use the first specimens of the new iron gutter, which comes in 5-foot sections, that I have seen. They speak very highly of it.

Chief among the plant life of these ten houses are their 6,000 lily bulbs, each with a sprout from 3 to 10 inches high. A feature Mr. Kaulback notices about these is that more of them than usual are throwing two shoots instead of the preferable plan of throwing one stronger one. We wondered if that peculiarity is general. The larger part of this crop is wholesaled, it being the only crop grown for that purpose.

Probably the next most interesting feature is the huge supply of boxes of all kinds of bulb goods in the cold storage vaults. These are for their retail trade and are only brought out as fast as demanded for that purpose. Then comes an immense supply of all kinds of house plants of all sizes from the slips in the long propagating shed, to rubbers fifteen feet tall. There is also a department of bedding material and a large section is used for growing cut flowers of many kinds.

Mr. Kaulback is an exceedingly pleasant man to meet, and although all hands were particularly busy, he made my call a very pleasant one.

I also made an official examination of their store in the busiest part of the city. I found it in first-class shape in every way. Here the son, Fred, dispenses the product of the houses and is quite a regular visitor to the wholesale establishments of Boston.

The near-by store of John Walsh & Son was in equally good trim, being run in the same way with greenhouses, to partially supply the stock, situated in Stoneham. Naturally, Mr. Walsh in his position as manager of the Park street market, makes a good Boston representative. And does the telephone accommodate any one much more than it does the busy suburban florist?

The smaller, but perfectly shipshape place of Mrs. Newcomb was also included in my visit. We do not need to extend best wishes to the retail floral establishments of Malden; they will have their well-merited success whether we do or not. J. S. Manter.

Bringing material for a decoration in a Mexican city.

MEXICAN DECORATIONS.

In the accompanying engraving from a photograph kindly sent us by Mr. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, is seen a man bringing in material for the decoration of an enclosure in a Mexican city in which a bull-fight was to take place. The material seems to have good length of stem and the bunch is rather larger than the average messenger boy would deliver in good form. In fact it would be interesting to know what would happen to the man if a strong wind should spring up and caress his long-stemmed stock.

To northern eyes the bareness of the street seems strange, but the Mexicans generally plant their trees and plants inside their enclosures, and not in the street. On a hot day eggs could probably be roasted in that street without a fire.

RAIN WORMS.

I am growing carnations in solid beds and find rain worms very troublesome. They consume the manure and render the soil stiff and hard. Will some one tell me how to get rid of these pests?

Southerner.

To rid his soil of rain worms, I would advise Southerner to use slaked lime. Get some fresh lime and slake it with water and let stand until thoroughly cooled. Sprinkle enough on the soil between the plants to make it white all over, then rake it into the soil about one-half inch deep and give the bed a good watering with clear water. Put on about as much lime as you do of bone meal before planting. One dose like this will usually do the work, but it can be repeated in a couple of weeks if deemed necessary. An application about once in six weeks would greatly benefit his carnations and keep his soil in good condition.

A HANDSOME TROPHY.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the silver cup offered by the Board of Trade of Elmira, N. Y., for the best new chrysanthemum at the exhibition of the Elmira Horticultural Society. It was won this year by Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Ont., with the big white Timothy Eaton. The variety was illustrated in these columns last month.

The Elmira Horticultural Society is a progressive body and it is a pleasure to note that it has secured such recognition from the business men of the city as to result in the offering of such a handsome trophy by a body representing the city's commercial interests.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade during the past week was rather quiet, however, with some funeral work and working up greens and Christmas designs every one appeared busy.

The weather the past week was fine and should make cut flowers of all kinds plentiful for the holiday trade. The indications at this writing are that trade will be fully up to last year's mark; prices have stiffened considerably on all stock except Roman and paper white, which have been plentiful.

Plant sales are reported large and palms of every description take the lead, with ferns, azaleas and other blooming plants following. Taking it all together the store men here may well be pleased with their sales before this Christmas. Many orders will, of course, come in the last day, which, here, is considered the best day.

Great quantities of Christmas green, holly and laurel have been sold and many are already sold out, as ground pine was scarce and many had only a limited supply on hand; still, with the scarcity of greens the fakirs were offering wreaths for sale at cheap prices, the wreaths being, of course, very inferior to those sold by the florist.

Christmas prices went into effect Saturday. Roses seemed rather plentiful with prices ranging from $6 to $12 for Brides, Maids, Perles, Meteors, Golden Gates and Wootton. Some extra fancy stock sold as high as $15 per 100. American Beauties of the first grade brought $1 to $1.50 each and from that down to $2 per dozen for short stemmed ones. Beauties will be very scarce for the holiday trade.

The supply of carnations should be good and the demand should equal it. Some very fine blooms are coming to this market which bring top prices. Extra fine Lord, Crocker, White Cloud, Bradt and Crane bring $5 and $6; seconds $3 and $4; very few are sold under this price just now. California violets piled up at an alarming rate the past week, but were cleaned out the latter part at 75 cents per 100. Good fresh stock will bring from $1.50 to $2 per 100; of small singles and doubles none are in the market.

Romans and paper whites will stand at $3 and $4. The best valley brings $6; some is sold at $4. Smilax is fine and is sold at $15 with a good supply in the market. Asparagus and adiantum are also selling well.

The wholesale dealers are all smiles these days as stock is going at a rapid rate and at good prices. Saturday and Sunday all hands were busy packing and shipping and the wholesalers claim that shipping trade was never better than this year. In the next issue of the REVIEW we can give a more accurate account of the Christmas trade.

Notes.

Wm. Lyred, who opened the first flower store in St. Louis some 35 years ago, died last Tuesday at his place near Webster of lung troubles. Mr. Lyred was well known by all the local trade, and a number of the old timers attended the funeral.

BUFFALO.

The Christmas Trade.

There is about one hour to spare between business and Christmas turkey. Just time to tell you, Mr. Editor, what little I know of how business has gone in general and with us in particular. It will be very safe to say that it is larger than ever, because in a growing community we expect that. First, there has been far more gayety in our society circles than ever before, which kept several firms on the jump. Church decorations were perhaps about as usual, certainly not any more. The great business with the florist, as it is with all business men except perhaps the barber, is the Christmas present business. It has grown and grown to prodigious proportions. And who could or would be bold and cruel enough to say there will ever be any reaction. The florist is decidedly in it when presents have to be bought, and it is at least 80 per cent of all the business done.

You don't want a newspaper man's account of this extraordinary time; you want to know what sold best. With some firms flowers were the leading article, with others plants. I think as presents that plants must have taken the lead. I never remember less kicking, or to use a more polite phrase, less grumbling at prices than this year, which must be conclusive evidence that people generaly are feeling well to do. "Violets are $4 to $5 a hundred, yes, sir, fine ones. Carnations $1 a dozen for the ordinary and $1.50 to $2 for the fancy kinds. I am sorry to have to tell you that Beauties are $18 to $24 per dozen. Other roses? Oh, yes, sir, quite different; Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteors from $3.50 to $5 per dozen." And so it went, with scarcely a remark of, "What dreadful prices," which we so often heard in other years.

In plants I must give the preference to azaleas. Many more good plants of these could have been sold, especially was there a demand for large azaleas worth $7 or $8. All good cyclamen sold readily and many palms and Boston ferns were disposed of. Since we have been growing poinsettias in pans the people have been quite spoilt and no longer want a single plant. Many pans were sold at $3 to $5. Begonia Lorraine went only fairly well. People are already onto its frailties. If there had not been a plant of them offered till the last moment they would have gone better; they were no novelty here. I believe small but well flowered plants of Cypripedium insigne will be one of the leading Christmas plants of the future. There was no call for rubbers to keep your feet dry, but rubber in the growing state sold well and there was a better demand for araucarias than we expected.

We saw no imported mistletoe, but the native species filled the bill and was in good demand. The amount of holly disposed of and used must have far exceeded any previous year. A week before Christmas it went begging, hundreds of cases at any price, but yesterday afternoon it was gone somewhere, and our commission man, Kasting, had the audacity to ask $5 a case. If he had the pluck to buy a lot cheap when it looked as if a bonfire would be the end of ear loads he deserves to make a good thing out of it.

If you were to ask me what were the features of the business, I could only generalize and say it was immense all round and mostly pleasantly done. Personally we would have liked a few thousand more good colored carnations, and we are going to have them. It's a pity to see flowers go up so high, but how can it be helped? Occasionally a woman past the attractive age says, "Oh, la, that makes 'em sot high?" And then we always feel like, and occasionally do, indulge in a little dessertation, which relieves us, but does no other good. "If you could manufacture these flowers as you can mousetraps, earrings or ladies' hats and put them on a shelf, they would not go up so in price, but we cannot, and if we could there would be no charm about them, and a rose bush blooms no more for Christmas day than any other day, so as there is not enough to go around, those that have the price must have the blossoms." That's the essence of our story, with variations and fluctuations according to the victim we have in hand or the state of our liver.

While the florists should feel grateful that they have largely participated in the general prosperity and good times, for I do believe that hundreds of our wealthy people resort to a handsome plant or box of flowers as conveying their joyous wishes to friends better than anything, yet we must notice the extraordinary growth of this Christmas giving institution. It pervades all ages and sexes and conditions of life. It's a tremendous circulator of money, and the bills that come in to poor papa after New Year's makes many hump, but don't think of that till the evil hour comes; think of the beautiful slippers and muffler and your own picture framed that your dear wife and daughter hung on the tree last night while you were hard at work.

Some of us are growing old and can only participate actively in the busy work of a few more Christmases. I have found this year that the boys will do the business all right and will do it better if not bothered with the fussiness of the old man. Take it easy and through the gray smoke of the best cigar you can afford listen to the marvelous ways that the young men did the business, and if they will listen tell them how you twenty years ago put in sixty hours' work around Christmas without closing your eyes. If they are meek, dutiful boys they will say, "I know you must have worked terribly hard, papa." If they are natural, wideawake boys, they will say, "Smoke up, father."

For the past week we have been able to deliver plants in an open wagon and not till this morning did it fall below the freezing point, with just enough of the beautiful to give the landscape a light overcoat. Yesterday's papers announced that Sunday evening while Park Commissioner Kasting and his family were away from home burglars entered their residence by a duplicate key and ransacked the house, taking with them Mr. and Mrs. K.'s stock of jewelry and trinkets. Very sorry to hear it, but that's one of the evils of owning jewelry. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The Christmas trade was immense and broke all records. Though the supply was short of demand orders were filled better than seemed likely a few days before the holiday. This was especially the case with American Beauties, the advance orders for which were filled full in most cases. A more serious shortage developed in high grade Maids and Meteors. Prices on first class stock held right up to advance quotations but there was a good deal of undergrade and pickled stuff in evidence, a good deal of which sold at low figures, especially poor white carnations and bulb stock. Inferior violets also suffered though really first class flowers brought top price.

There was a big call for fancy carnations and everything in this line went well at fancy prices, the very best bringing $6 to $8 per 100. One feature of this year's Christmas trade was that there was no grumbling about prices so long as the stock was really first class.

It would appear that the total volume of trade in money value was on the average some little in excess of last year, but there were many growers whose crops were small and the quality poor whose returns were considerably smaller. It is evident that the grower of low grades will be more apt to get the best value from his stock by keeping the flowers coming to market as they are ready rather than attempting to store it. In the latter event he is apt to lose entirely what value there may be in the stock.

The retailers all did a rousing big business and aside from some unfortunate experiences with pickled stock are well satisfied with results. There were some pickled Beauties in circulation that caused a good deal of wrath. They had kept their color but the heads would drop off on slight provocation.

The market is still rather hare and prices have fallen off but little from Christmas rates. The prospect is that prices for New Year's will be about 20 to 25 per cent less than for Christmas.

Various Notes.

There was no meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening as every one was too busy with holiday business to attend.

The youngest son of John Zech died last Friday morning of scarlet fever, aged 3 years and 4 months, after an illness of twelve days. Mr. Zech has the sympathy of many friends in his affliction. The sad event naturally interfered considerably with his attention to business during the holiday trade.

Mr. S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill., was a visitor last week.

Bassett & Washburn's Christmas trade exceeded $6,000, which was considerably more than for any previous Christmas.

Lady Campbell violets don't move in this market so long as there are dark ones to be had. The retail buyers seem to imagine they are pale because the flowers are not fresh and pass them by. As a consequence the dealers avoid them.

THE GOLDEN ELDER.

This is a form of the European Sambucus nigra, known there as the Boon-tree, Burr-tree and common elder. The generic term sambucus is derived from the Latin word sambuke, an ancient musical instrument supposed to have been made from the elder wood.

This golden-leaved form is but one of many departures from the type. There are several cut-leaved forms, some with variegated foliage, and again a change in the color of the fruit. The subject of these notes is one of the few golden-leaved shrubs that stand the full sun without burning; in fact, it must have the full sun to color well. While it is a strong growing shrub, attaining a height of some eight feet, it may be kept within bounds by a severe cutting in each spring, and a still more dense head may be obtained if the growing tips be pinched back at times during the summer. It seems to thrive in any soil or situation.

The elder has probably had more admiring friends and more bitter enemies than any shrub we are familiar with. It has been called "the stinking elder," and supposed to be associated with evil. In mediæval times it was said that Judas hung himself upon the "tree of eldre." However, it also had its friends, as in 1644 there appeared a book devoted entirely to its praise that went through several editions, being published both in Latin and English. In Southern Germany it is believed to drive away evil spirits; in Denmark and Norway it is held in esteem, and in the Tyrol it is said that an elder bush trained into the form of a cross is planted on the new made graves and if it blossoms the soul of the person lying beneath it is happy.

STREET TREES.

Frederick W. Kelsey, of Orange, N. J., has secured the passage of a law in New Jersey that enables municipalities to control through a commission the planting and care of street trees. The city of Passaic was one of the first to adopt the law and several thousand trees have already been planted there by the commission appointed under the act. The advantages of having a matter of this sort under the control of the city government is obvious, as only in this way can the work be done with system and uniformity.

In the city of Washington the street trees have long been in charge of a commission, of which Sup't W. R. Smith of the Botanic Garden is the active head. A property owner once complained that a tree was shading his house too much and applied to the commission to have it moved, and Mr. Smith's characteristic response was, "Move your house, sir."

A FRENCH GROWER estimates the number of distinct varieties of chrysanthemums grown in France at 8,000 to 10,000.

REVERE, MASS.—J. B. Shurtleff, Jr., the florist, is secretary of the Revere Taxpayers' Association, an organization formed for the purpose of protecting the interests of the taxpayers. The membership is confined to those whose real estate is assessed for taxation at $2,000 or more.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Arrangements have been completed for holding the second annual exhibition of the American Rose Society on March 19, 20 and 21, 1901. The exhibition will take place in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, and the proceeds will be devoted to the charitable department of the Loomis Sanitarium for Consumptives, an institution which has enormous calls upon its resources in and around New York City. The schedule of the exhibition which has already been distributed, will be sent by the secretary, 136 Liberty street, New York City, on application. Several special prizes in the form of cups and other plate are being arranged for and indications point to a brilliant event. The art management of the exhibition will be in the hands of one of New York's most able artists.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Mr. Edgar McConnell, Sharon, Pa., registers the following: Sunrise—Color outer part of petals pure white, blending to a clear pink at the center. Flowers two and one-half to three inches, with fine clove fragrance, and hold their size and color to midsummer. Stems strong and wiry, eighteen to thirty inches long. Calyx never bursts. Foliage and growth, McGowan type; a vigorous and rapid grower and a very free and continuous bloomer. Albert M. Herr, Sec'y. Lancaster, Pa.

An adv. in our Special Carnation Number, to be issued Jan. 10, will do good business for you. Send copy early.

Trenton, N. J.—The New Jersey State Horticultural Society will hold its twenty-sixth annual meeting at the state house in this city Jan. 3 and 4. An unusually interesting programme has been prepared.

Pacific Grove, Cal.—A museum of natural history has been established in this city and it was formally opened to the public Dec. 11. The specimens include a valuable collection of Monterey county plants. Miss M. E. B. Norton is curator of the museum.

Jackson, Miss.—The magnolia has been adopted as the state flower of Mississippi. An election was recently held in which a total of 23,278 votes were cast for forty-two different flowers and the magnolia received 12,745. The cotton bloom was the magnolia's chief competitor, but sentiment won over typified industry.

Randolph, Vt.—Harry M. Totman has purchased of his brother, Forest, the latter's interest in the greenhouse business they have conducted together the past year. He expects to add new glass in the spring.

Utica, N. Y.—Edwin J. Glover, the florist, died Dec. 16, after an illness of several months due to heart trouble. He was born in England in 1840 and came to America in 1858. He leaves a widow and five children. The business will be continued by his sons.

Houston, Texas—The fourth annual flower parade was held Dec. 14, and a large number of decorated vehicles took part.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

DETROIT.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas, the last one in the 19th century, has come and gone and take it all in all has been a record breaker in every way. The weather has been all that anyone could wish for the delivery of stock, and the streets of our city have presented the appearance of those of some country town, on the occasion of a fair, being continually jammed with buyers and shoppers for the last two weeks.

Prices have ruled higher than formerly, for stock was none too plentiful on account of the dark weather and lack of sunshine for some time back. Carnations were very short. Roses in better supply but rather soft. Violets also short but some very fine ones coming from Mt. Clemens helped out. Breitmeyer & Son having a house of Farquhar just right. In carnations Rackham had a house of Crane that were very fine and prices realized confirmed the retailers in their opinions of him as a robber, but they were glad to get the stock just the same.

The call at Breitmeyer's seemed to be for baskets, ranging from $5 to $25, filled with plants.

Sullivan, Detroit Floral Co., and Taepke all report trade as exceptionally good in plants and cut flowers.

In the green goods line the bulk of the trade is done by the grocery and cornerstores and the florists in general are willing they should do it.

Club Notes.

Four new members were added to the roll at the last meeting and the premium list was adopted for the show which the club has decided to hold next November, 12 to 15 inclusive, and all seem very enthusiastic in the matter. The plan of having a question for each meeting and discussing it is proving a success and a benefit to the club. RAG.

JAPAN FERN BALLS.

How shall I treat Japan fern balls just received? SUBSCRIBER.

Plunge the dormant fern balls in a tub of water and after they are thoroughly soaked suspend them in a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees. Do not expose the young fronds to the direct rays of the sun. Do not allow the balls to get dry, but repeat the soaking process as needed. The foliage appears in two or three weeks. It will die off in late fall and a rest should then be given, starting anew after that. When growth is strong an immersion in weak manure water is beneficial. H. H. B.

A LARGE-FLOWERED heliotrope that originated in Quedlinburg, Germany, has been named Heliotropium hybridum grandiflorum mammuth.

AMONG the novelties shown at the Paris exhibition by Linden was Ardisia Brandneriana, a dwarf species with shining, undulate leaves.

EMERGENCY BOILERS.

My entire plant of 10,000 feet of glass is heated by one big steam boiler and it has done the work easily. But about 4 o'clock in the morning of Sunday last, when the thermometer outside stood at only 8 degrees above, I discovered a small crack in the boiler. I opened the safety valve and put the fire out at once, and found that there was a 6-inch crack just over the firebox. It was evident it would take a long time to make repairs. I got all the oil heaters I could and set them around, but the temperature in the houses fell rapidly. Fortunately the sun came out brightly in the morning and I was safe for the day.

Some miles from my place I found a farmer who had two engines used for threshing grain. I got these at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and by 4 o'clock had them connected with my piping and steam enough to keep the frost out until I could set a new boiler. As these threshing engines are on wheels they can be quickly moved. I thought the suggestion might be useful to some brother florist when unfortunate enough to have a boiler give out.

MILWAUKEE.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was unprecedented. White stock was the only weak spot in the market, and as good colored stock was short of demand much of the white was substituted and worked off at good prices.

The supply of holly was almost entirely exhausted and much more could have been sold had good stock been obtainable.

Dealers report the sale of palms and blooming plants far in excess of former years.

A most noticeable feature was the absence of pickled stock—a feature quite satisfactory to both wholesaler and dealer.

American Beauties were extremely scarce and prices were almost beyond reach of buyers. Good fancy carnations, violets and colored roses led the call, while Romans, valley, paper whites and stevia were plentiful. Geo. W.

Astoria, L. I.—Fire did damage amounting to $200 in the greenhouse of Dr. B. A. Sill the night of Dec. 16.

If you have anything to offer to the trade you will want an adv. in our special Carnation Number, to be issued Jan. 10.

Paris, Ill.—F. R. Magner, president of the Levings Bros. Seed Company, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of his gun while hunting recently.

Indianapolis, Ind.—At the annual meeting of the Indiana State Horticultural Society, held here last week, officers were elected as follows: President, C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport; vice president, Mrs. W. W. Stevens, Salem; secretary, Prof. James Troop, Purdue University, Lafayette; treasurer, Sylvester Johnson, Irvington.

One of the neatest bits of printing we have seen for some time is the price list of gladiolus bulbs issued by Arthur Cowee, of the Meadowvale Farm, Berlin, N. Y. It is printed in two colors and contains a great deal of useful information about the gladiolus as well as prices. Mr. Cowee is acting as agent for the United States for H. H. Groff, the hybridist, of Simcoe, Ont. He sends with the price list a calendar the main feature of which is a reproduction of the certificate of merit awarded him by the Society of American Florists for his great display of gladioli at the New York convention last August.

Queen Louise Carnation.

This new Carnation produces the finest flowers, is perfectly healthy and is the best white variety ever introduced.
IT BLOOMS EARLY. IT BLOOMS LATE. IT BLOOMS ALL THE TIME.

From photograph of Queen Louise.

Our price list contains cuts from photographs taken every two weeks during the months of February, March, April, May, June, October and November. No other Carnation can stand such a test.

Rooted Cuttings READY February 15th. Price $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

Pre-eminently adapted to Roses and Carnations on account of its Economy and other advantages.

With the Tendril, Roses, etc., may be trained to an upright position from the start.

The Tendril does not crowd the plant, but holds it firmly and with freedom. Does not mutilate the foliage. Harbors no insects. Makes the plant come to a straight stem. Admits of free circulation of air. Requires no skilled labor to place properly. Can be moved up or down the stakes. Easily put on and easily taken off; and are durable.

BOSTON.

At the annual meeting of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association, held Dec. 8, officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, W. W. Rawson; vice presidents, Wm. H. Derby and J. O. Wellington; secretary and treasurer, J. B. Shurtleff, Jr.; executive committee, W. H. Derby, Walter Crosby, J. C. Stone, W. F. Symmes, M. Sullivan, Chas. G. Winn.

The fourteenth annual banquet was held at the Revere House Dec. 13, and it was the most largely attended one in the history of the association.

A BEGONIA rejoicing in the name Begonia semperflorens atropurpurea nana fl. pl. Bijou des Jardins has managed to exist under this terrible burden.

TREATING RUBBER PLANTS.

A reader sends us the following which he clipped from the Philadelphia Press of Dec. 3, and asks us to give "the homeopathic treatment for such cases:"

To Editor of Recipe Column. Having read a query in your column regarding the treatment of a rubber plant belonging to a correspondent, that is dropping its leaves, I would suggest in reply that the plant be washed carefully and tenderly, with a soft rag or a sponge once a week, with either tepid water or a mixture of milk and water. Then place the pot containing plant in a bucket or tub of water, and let it soak well. Take it out of water and when it has drained a little pour a teaspoonful of Castor oil close to the root of plant, so that it will trickle down and be absorbed by plant. This treatment will, I think, bring the plant around all right. A healthy plant only requires a washing of leaves, soaking and Castor oil about once in three weeks to keep it vigorous. MRS. T.

We have heard of a gentle lady who gave a rubber plant castor oil to remove worms from the soil but never before of a plant being dieted with the oil. Rubber growers will no doubt stretch a point in considering this new fertilizer before they slip back into the old rut.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

After New Year's we get the much needed room to shift and spread out stock, that is of great importance to us in the spring. Among them is the important and ever popular plant, the zonal geranium. Our most satisfactory plant is from the cutting that has been rooted in September. They are now fine little plants in 2½-inch pots, but for want of room have been occupying as little space as possible. As soon after New Year's as we can get at it they should have a shift into a 3-inch. By taking a little soil off the top of the ball this gives them shift enough and starts them into growth, so that by the beginning or middle of February you are able to get a cutting from almost every plant. This does them no harm, for they would want pinching in some way.

Don't use too rich a soil or at least a mixture with much leaf mould or rotten manure, as geraniums like a good stiff loam. A fifth or sixth of well decayed manure is enough. A firm, solid growth is what is desirable in geraniums at all times. Pot firmly and give them the lightest benches. Geraniums are the most important of our summer bedding plants. Nothing for the outlay gives us such a continuous, brilliant display of color, and good, thrifty plants are always in demand.

The Ivy Leaf section is also an important one. They do not flower continuously when planted out where the roots have plenty of room, but when used in veranda boxes and vases they are very attractive and flower so freely in May that thousands are sold in our markets to people who just keep them growing in the pots and they flower a long time in this way. For our largest plants we shift these now also into 3-inch. And the cuttings made from the tips, if put in sand, make fine plants by bedding time. Many of the Ivy Leaf section are now so beautiful both in size and color of bloom that they are worth growing as pot plants equally with the zonals.

Marguerites.

Plants of these that were lifted from the ground in September and put into 7 and 8-inch pots sell well at Easter, for if they have been cool and light they will surely be in full flower in April. Whether you have given them one pinching during winter or not, some very attractive and salable pans can be made by taking off a number of the leading shoots of these old plants and putting them in the propagating bed; they root quickly and then can be planted in 8, 9 or 10-inch pans. They will soon flower and there being, say, 9 or 10 plants in an 8-inch pan, they make a sheet of bloom which is most attractive. There is yet time to do this and have them in fine order for Easter, and the large plants will flower in plenty of time. This wrinkle I owe to a western friend.

Propagating.

There are many things to propagate now. Some plants you can get up a great stock of in a short time, but others want more time. For instance, you would be foolish to propagate a great lot of coleus or ageratum just now, for they would be too large or get exhausted before bedding time. Others want several months to make good plants.

Lobelias that we use for baskets and vases should be put in the sand in quantity, for you want showy plants. Acalypha should be propagated at once. Put in all the fuchsias you can this month, for those later propagated make stunted plants. The conditions for propagating what is necessary are more perfect this month than any; usually a cool atmosphere with little need of shading and a genial heat in the sand. Carnations, roses and everything else that is propagated by cuttings root readily and surely just now.

Azaleas.

Let me remind you once more that your Easter azaleas that you imported in October will be making a lot of young growth from the base of the flower buds, and if that is allowed to remain on it will grow at the expense of the flower bud, which won't amount to anything. They must be pulled off. We usually have to go over them twice during the winter. If you want most of the azaleas in at Easter you can hardly keep them all in the same temperature. Varieties that want to flower early, such as the favorite Mme. Van der Cruyssen, will do for two months little above the freezing point, while late varieties, like Emperor de Brazil and Souv. de Prince Albert will do better in 50 degrees.

Rhododendrons.

We have never been quite satisfied with rhododendrons as a forcing plant, although they are a most decorative plant. They are of course almost hardy, but should not be kept so cool if wanted for forcing. We found that when you do put them into heat, which should be about two months before they are wanted, they need a good brisk heat, say 60 degrees at night, with lots of syringing. The latter is important, as the moisture is needed to loosen up their compact tight buds.

Cytisus.

Many of these are still grown for Easter. It is not advisable to do any more clipping of the shoots after this date, but they should be kept quite cool, say 40 degrees at night, or they will be in flower before you want them.

Pansies.

If you do not sow pansies in the fall and have none in cold-frames for early spring use, some fine plants can be raised by sowing now or within two or three weeks. Transplanted into flats or on to a bench that is not too valuable in a cool house they make very fine plants by middle of April and for filling vases are just the thing. The main thing is to keep them cool enough so that they don't draw up.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.

Lowering the Temperature.

If you began reducing the temperature in your carnation houses right after Xmas, you will likely have them at their normal temperature again by this time, and they can go ahead producing strong, healthy growth and good blooms. The drop in the temperature may have shortened the cut to some extent for a few days; but as soon as the plants are accustomed to the lower temperature they will move along as before. The demand is usually somewhat lighter for a few days right after Xmas, and it is better for everybody if the market does not become crowded, as would be the case if the forcing were kept up right along. If you were careful and succeeded in reducing the temperature without causing any of the calyxes to split you were fortunate and there is no danger of your plants having suffered much from the recent forcing. That is the way it usually shows first. If you have not already lowered the temperature to where it belongs, do so at once. Too long a spell of forcing will weaken the stems and make the blooms smaller, and it is hard to get them back into good shape again after they once get that far.

Carnations will soon be getting more plentiful; before long only the best grades will bring fair prices, so it will pay you to sacrifice a few blooms now in order to keep your plants in good, healthy and strong condition, so they can produce the highest quality blooms. The next few weeks will determine whether your blooms will be found among the better grades or whether they will be among the lower grades, and often find their way to the ash barrel. Do everything you can to promote a strong, healthy, well matured growth.

Standard Varieties.

Last week we went over the white and pink standard varieties, so now we will take up the others.

Among the scarlets we still consider Jubilee king. There is nothing out now that can touch it when it is grown as it should be. It has by far the finest color, the blooms are good size and the stem is long and strong. When it is allowed to develop properly before it is picked it is a fine keeper and it always brings the top price. It takes special culture to make it pay, but it will well repay the grower who will take the trouble to grow it properly. Strike the cuttings early and plant inside early in spring, or, handle it so it does not suffer any kind of a check during hot weather, and it will bloom early and freely until hot weather sets in again.

America is a good one for ordinary good culture. The blooms are large and borne on fine stems; but the color is a light red. A bunch of them shows up fine and sells well, but it must not be mixed up with Jubilee. We like it on account of its freeness and easy management.

G. H. Crane is considered by many as the best all-around scarlet. The color is between America and Jubilee. The growth is strong and the stems are long and strong and bear large blooms. It is an early and free bloomer and should make a profitable variety for the average grower.

Red Jacket would have been a good one had it not stem-rotted so badly. The color, size and stem were good, and it grew rapidly.

Bon Ton was a failure from the start on account of its lateness and small blooms.

Wellesley has a fine color and is very free, and if it were a little larger it would make a good one for those who want quantity of bloom.

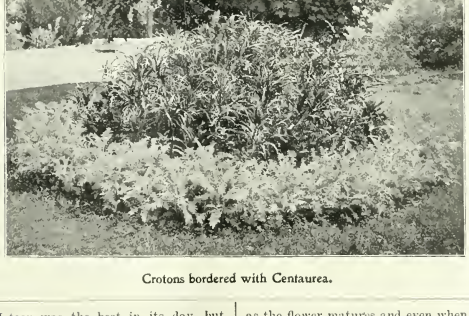
Chicago makes a fine bloom and may be profitable if grown like Mrs. Bradt, from which it sported.

Portia is now grown by only a few back numbers.

In maroon there is perhaps nothing to compare with Maceo. The blooms are fine and are produced in enormous quantities.

Gomez is not so free, but has longer stems and we think a more pleasing color, being not quite so black.

Empress is too late to be profitable under ordinary conditions. The blooms are large and are borne on long, strong stems and where a good maroon pays it might pay the grower to give this the special culture it needs to bring it in early.



Crotons bordered with Centaurea.

Meteor was the best in its day, but Maceo is much better.

In fancy varieties Mrs. Bradt is by far the best. Its large blooms on fine stems always command a good price. If given about two-thirds as much room as most varieties it pays as well as any. This variety wants an early start and does well grown inside all summer.

Armazindy is one of the freest bloomers we have today, but it has not enough stripes to make it popular as a fancy. The blooms are fair size and the stem is fine. Many use it for white, and where this can be done it is very profitable. The growth is strong and rapid.

Sandusky seems to have struck a snag and sunk. A weak constitution and bacteria did the work.

Gold Nugget is the best commercial yellow. The color, size and stem are fine. This variety to be profitable needs to be started early and kept bushy by pinching often early in the growing season.

Mayor Pingree is too shy and too late.

There is no doubt about our varieties of today being much better than we had ten years ago and yet there is as much room for improvement now as there ever was. We need, for instance, a strong-stemmed Flora Hill, a large-flowering Mrs. Joost, a Jubilee that blooms freely with ordinary culture and a Mrs. Bradt that produces about twice as many blooms to the plant, and many other improvements of which we have not thought at all yet. The time will perhaps never come when we will not be able to improve on the carnation, but what we want now is a few good commercial sorts.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

New Carnations Registered by the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

Sunbeam—Light pink. This is an entirely new shade of what is generally called flesh pink. Flowers of good form, size averaging three inches, borne on stiff, wiry stems from twenty-four to thirty inches long, free from disease and a very strong, healthy grower. Produces more blooms per plant and bench space than any other variety known regardless of color.

Bon Homme Richard—White. This flower has a fine form and at times will show the faintest flush of light pink on the petals, which fades out entirely as the flower matures and even when discernible it detracts none from its beauty. Blooms will average three inches, on strong wiry stems two and one-half to three feet long. Its habit is such that plants in our benches with from thirty to thirty-five buds on and flower spikes stand very comfortably in the model wire support. It will produce 50 per cent more blooms than White Cloud and command the same price when grown under the same conditions.

Xydia—Variegated. The ground work of the flower is pure white striped with light salmon, which with its splendid form gives an extremely beautiful effect in a vase for decorative purposes. A grand keeper, improving as the flower ages; not as large as Mrs. Bradt, but will produce twice the quantity of blooms. Stems are very strong, from 20 to 26 inches in length and the health and habit of the plant is of the best.

Prolifica—Cerise pink. A shade deeper than Lawson; average size of blooms three to three and one-half inches, with strong, stiff stems from two and one-half to three feet in length. An idea as to its freedom can be had from the fact that a representative of the trade papers counted on the original plant three seasons ago sixteen open flowers, fourteen large buds and an abundance of new spikes showing below.

BEDDING.

We present herewith three engravings from photographs of beds that were seen last summer on the grounds of the Athens State Hospital, Athens, O., where Geo. H. Moores is the florist in charge. The photographs were all taken August 12th last.

The bed of crotons was twelve feet in diameter and contained 100 plants, mostly of a narrow leaved variety. It was bordered with two rows of Centaurea gymnocarpa. It received the morning sun, but was shaded in the afternoon. After planting the bed was heavily mulched and although the season was a dry one the bed was fine.

The bed of cannas was also twelve feet in diameter, and was bordered with Pennisetum longistylum. The cannas were a dark leaved variety and the contrast with the pennisetum made the bed a very handsome one. The pennisetum was grown from seed sown Jan. 16th and planted out of 3-inch pots about June 1st. This bed was also mulched.

The third bed contained bananas and caladiums and was considered one of the best beds on the grounds. The soil was made very rich and the bed was heavily mulched. Some of the caladiums grew to a height of seven feet, with the banana plants well above them.

CATTLEYA PERCIVALIANA.

Ed. Florists' Review: In your issue of Dec. 20 we note on page 91 the following: "Orchids will be few. Cattleya Percivaliana is too small for the American trade," etc., etc.

We send you by express six flowers of this variety to show that the writer of the above is not entirely correct in his statement. As you will see, they compare favorably with other varieties. Cattleya Percivaliana is a variety whose flowers increase in size the longer they are left on the plant. At this time of the year, when they are in flower, the demand is very great and we find it impossible to hold them until they are properly developed and have to cut them only half finished, which to a great extent accounts for the small size. On the other hand, the flowers are the most beautiful of any of the cattleyas.

As to price, this is naturally governed by supply and demand. The supply being very limited at that time of the year and the demand heavy, we see no reason why they should sell cheaper than other varieties. In our case it has proved to be the contrary.

Lager & Hurrell.

Summit, N. J.

[The flowers were of good size, measuring five inches across, and they would compare favorably with most cattleya blooms seen in the market. But we do not recall having seen any quantity of Percivaliana blooms of equal size before. Evidently there is a useful suggestion in the note about the blooms of this variety increasing in size when left for some time on the plant. The rich coloring of the lip certainly makes this a most beautiful cattleya.—Ed.]

Begonia Lorraine.—Mr. Geo. Wittbold, Chicago, is grafting Lorraine on other stronger rooting begonias and believes this is the way to get a good growth and the most serviceable plants.

Please send us the news of the trade in your vicinity.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Christmas Trade.

The Christmas business of this city, both in cut flowers and plants, was tremendous, exceeding in volume anything experienced in the past. Everything salable found a ready market. Gilt-edged stock brought gold letter prices; also, in the rush, some stock that was by no means gilt edged; but we are told quietly that the sellers of these spurious goods are down on the black list for next month. Second and third class stock found their level and sold much better than for the past few years at slightly lower prices than then.

It was a cut flower Christmas, the increased demand being for boxes of loose flowers as gifts for the home or friend. Red was the most popular color. Beauties, Libertics, Meteors; then red carnations, which were very scarce; then poinsettias, which were good and in fair supply. The roses were generally used alone, the carnations with asparagus sprays or stevia. Maids were next in demand; this rose was in much better shape than seemed possible two months ago; the supply was heavy and more could have been used. Violets were very scarce, the supply not nearly equaling the demand.

The cut flower growers near the city made second trips to the stores on Monday night and another early Tuesday morning. The commission men were hard at work filling shipping orders and visiting the stores at all hours of the day and night, but growers and commission men combined were not half so busy as the retailers, who with all the intelligent extra help they could command were still unable to fully meet the rush. Few of them were in bed Sunday night and none of them slept Monday night, yet most of them were refusing orders Monday afternoon from persons not in the habit of dealing with them.

The business done in plants was probably ahead of former years, although it paled beside that done in flowers. In blooming plants red again was the most popular color, poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens, and Jerusalem cherries giving a touch of the desired color. One exception to this may be mentioned. The bon ton shops sold many Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Boston fern was in brisk demand, especially in six-inch pots. The palm sales were also very heavy.

Believing that the growers would be glad to have some ideas and suggestions at this time from the men who market their product the REVIEW has asked each of the ten commission florists of this city to give a few notes on the cut flower business at Christmas. Much valuable information will be found in their replies, which follow.

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

Taking Christmas as a whole, I think this year was the best Christmas we have ever had. Prices generally ruled good for good stock. The cheaper grades were not held at as high figures in the beginning, and, of course, moved off in better shape, as the demand seemed to be more for good quality stock. I think this is the only way to do—keep the price down on the cheaper grades.

Beauties, Meteors and Liberties were more in demand than any other roses; in fact, enough of them could not be had. Violets also sold well. There seemed to be a general scarcity this season. As far as I could learn there was no glut of any stock, excepting a few bulbous flowers. Some Liberties we received from S. Mortensen, Southampton, brought $9 per dozen, and our customer said they were the cheapest flowers he bought, as no flower gave the value for the money that they did. This is certainly a grand rose, but whether it can be grown to make it pay is a question, for it is a shy bloomer, and the season is so short, being only about half the length of the Meteor season.

There was less salted stock this year than ever. I think the growers are realizing more every day that it is to their interests to supply the market with nothing but the freshest stock. It must assuredly is far more satisfactory to handle good, fresh stock than stock that comes in to you three and four days or a week old.

EDWARD REID.

Christmas trade was very satisfactory; with myself it was 25 per cent ahead of last year. It is my opinion the price on Beauties, which averaged from $5 to $18 per dozen, was rather too high for the best interests of all concerned, but it was a case of must have them with the retailer. Teas sold very well, Maids having the preference, and brought from $8 to $20, according to quality; the writer got $25 for some selected Maids. Carnations, ordinary stock, sold at from $2.50 to $4; fancy from $4 to $10, the number sold at the latter price were very few; the greatest demand was for good medium grades at from $3 to $4 per 100. The writer could have used a few thousand more, but as it is I feel better satisfied, as I made a complete clean up, which will be more satisfactory to the grower than to have a lot carried over, thereby reducing the general average.

I note some of the growers, with the idea that everything goes, did not use care in bunching their carnations, putting in splits and other inferior blooms; now this was a great mistake, as the value of the bunch was based on the worst flowers; I am safe in saying the grower lost from 20 to 25 per cent. I also note there was no surplus of green, such as smilax and adiantum; in fact, there did not seem to be enough of asparagus in bunches to supply the demand. Violets were in good demand, with not quite enough good ones to supply it. Flowers reached the commission houses from four to twenty-four hours late, owing to the congested condition of the express offices. Bulbous stock sold better than I ever knew before.

DUMONT & CO.

The florist trade in Philadelphia has been exceptionally good this Xmas. All kinds and grades of cut flowers sold well. Carnations, fancy grades, brought from $8 to $10 per 100; standard varieties $3 to $4 per 100, according to the length of stem and size of flower. Beauties were very much in demand and sold at $6 to $15 per dozen. The next scarcest flowers were good Maids, which were bringing $15 per 100. Northern double violets sold very well at $1 to $1.50 per 100. Southern doubles arrived too late to be of any use, as the express companies were a day late in delivering goods. Taking it altogether, it has been a very successful Xmas.

FRED. EHRET.

Christmas trade in cut flowers was better than expected. Prices of roses somewhat lower than other years, especially in lower grades. In regard to this grade of stock it was offered to the trade at very favorable rates, enabling them to make use of it in cheaper work, such as galax leaf work, etc. Other years cheap roses were held for the street fakirs, but the commission men this year gave the florist the benefit of their prices, enabling them to fill satisfactorily cheaper orders.

First class roses were in good demand, with supply equal to the orders. Carnations sold very well at $4 per 100 for ordinary good stock, $1 per 100 better than usual Christmas prices, the trade using all stock on hand, leaving nothing for the street fakirs. Bulb stock, hyacinths and narcissus were plentiful, but were all sold at from $3 to $4 per 100.

The plant trade appears to have fallen off somewhat this season, with the exception possibly of good azaleas, which sold very well. Poinsettias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, etc., which were expected to sell freely, are still seen in the stores, having been passed by the customers.

There seems to be a good demand for calla lilies at $15 per 100, which I think would warrant a grower in bringing in a few more. No Harrisii lilies appeared on the market. They would have found ready sale.

GEO. M. MOSS.

I think the past Xmas trade has been very satisfactory all round from a general point of view, although the grower will no doubt say that he didn't have as much stuff as he ought to have had. High prices for what he did have will. I believe, more than counteract that. Flowers of all kinds were in great demand, and the commission men were unable to fill all orders in full. Everything was cleaned up, and there was an absence of salted stock in comparison to former years.

Some very fine Beauties were seen that sold readily at $18 per dozen. Maids, Brides, Meteors sold at from $15 to $20; extras at $25. Perles $10 to $12, Morgans $12. Valley, Narcissus and Romans $4 per 100 (with valley scarce), Mignonette from $4 to $8, adiantum $1, double violets $1.50 to $3, single violets $1 to $2, yellow and white daisies $2 to $3, smilax $15 to $20, asparagus strings $50, asparagus bunches, 35 to 50 cents each. Carnations, standard varieties, $4, and fancy varieties from $6 to $8, and a few very fine ones at $12.

Beauties, Maids, Meteors, valley and double violets seemed to have the preference, although there was no surplus of anything, with the possible exception of "Greens," which generally happens at Xmas and Easter.

To the growers: You must grow good stock for us if you want to receive in turn good prices for the same. Ordinary stuff used to do, but it won't go now. The flower buyers know what good flowers are now and are willing to pay good prices for them.

CHAS B. STAHL.

The farewell Christmas of the nineteenth century has proven a very satisfactory one all around, and the growers who have been fortunate enough to have a good cut will have a comfortable addition to their bank accounts, with which to greet the New Year.

The demand for cut flowers was greater this Christmas than ever before, and the stock reached the market in better condition than heretofore. No extra heavy cutting of any one kind of flower caused the price of all stock to stiffen up and keep at good figures throughout the holiday without the usual slump.

The specially heavy demand for carnations of all grades has proven that it is fast becoming the popular flower. The fact of there being an ample supply of the finer and newer grades gives the lover of flowers the chance to buy these grades in fair quantities and at a fair price. Much satisfaction was expressed all around as to the quality of carnations. One would have to go quite a distance to find any "sleepy" ones (a very unusual occurrence). This proves that flower buyers are willing to pay a good price for good, fresh blooms and that growers should be careful to send only fresh stock for the holiday trade. Give us good, fresh carnations (keep the inferior ones out of the market), and send no "salted stock," then we can demand a good price and give satisfaction, and the increase in demand for carnations each year will soon bring it to be the king of flowers.

A happy and prosperous New Year to you all. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade in St. Louis was very satisfactory, being much better in every way than last year. The wholesaler and the retailer have no cause to complain and as a rule they feel very cheerful over the Christmas trade.

The quality of the stock this year was rather poor. Very little fancy stock came in, and it was disposed of rapidly and at a good price. The weather was very favorable for delivering, which, of course, helped us to deliver our goods on time.

In roses the colored sorts were in great demand, but very scarce. The few Meteors that came in commanded a fancy price, as high as $15 and $20 per 100. Beauties were retailed at $24 per dozen and not enough of them to supply the demand. Brides and Maids were plentiful and the demand brisk; the fancy stock brought $12 and $15 per 100; most of them, though, were of the poorer grade and some sold as low as $4 per 100. Golden Gates, Perles and Woottons were sold out clean at prices ranging from $12.50 down to $6.

Carnations were very fine and plentiful and the demand great. The colored sorts were scarce. Scotts and Daybreak sold the best. The white sorts sold a little lower than the colored ones. In the fancy varieties the price went as high as $6 per 100, and none was sold below $3.

The demand for violets was far in excess of the supply, and $2 was asked for all that came in. Romans and Narcissus sold well, but at no advance in price, $3 seems the standard price at all times. Valley was quite plentiful and very fine at from $4 to $6 per 100.

Our wholesale men, Kuehn, Berning and Ellis, report that the Christmas sales were better than ever, and that they sold out clean, nothing left but a little rubbish. Shipping trade was never better, some having to work late at night in order to pack their orders.

Among the retailers general satisfaction is expressed from all quarters. In the West End, Weber, Waldbart, Mrs. Ayers, Miss Newman, Miller, Connon, Sanders and Mary Ostertag say their sales were materially larger than last year, with prices about the same. The great demand was for red roses, which were very scarce. Carnations of all kinds were great sellers with them, as were violets and valley. Holly and greens sold better than ever and at better prices.

The downtown florists had a big trade, and Riessen Floral Co., Ellison & Tesson, Young & Sons Co., North, Miss Badaracco and Foster say that the Christmas trade was never better, with prices equally as good as last year. Everything sold well, with little left over when closing time came.

The greenhouse men in South St. Louis had a great plant trade, and are almost sold out of everything. Fillmore, Schray, Beyer, Meyer, Kruse, Eggling, Windler and others claim that they never were so busy as this year. Everything went, and all were tired out when the day was over.

In North St. Louis, Koenig & Sons Weinhardt, Rotter and Brix are well satisfied with the business done. They say that never before did they handle as much stock as this year, and the prices were better; and you can safely say that the St. Louis florists never experienced better trade than this year, and all wish their brother florists a happy and prosperous New Year.

Notes.

Wm. Kalish & Sons report that they were very busy during Christmas. They made a large twelve-foot cross of Bride roses and orchids costing $300. It was one of the largest crosses ever made in St. Louis.

Winfred Whittman, who is now with Frank M. Ellis, was with H. G. Berning two years ago.

C. C. Sanders had the finest lot of poinsettias for Christmas ever seen in St. Louis. They sold at sight.

Frank M. Ellis will move from his present location, 1402 Pine street, to 1316 Pine street, on January 1.

The Florists' Club meeting, on January 10, will be called promptly at 3 p. m. This will be our annual carnation meeting, and the display of new carnations promises to be large. Growers of new carnations will do well to send a few blooms of their new varieties to this meeting. Essays will be read by Fred Ammann, Fred Weber and A. S. Halstedt. President Guy looks forward to a large gathering of local florists. All are invited to attend. The contest for the $10 prize, by the local growers for the best vase of fifty carnations, promises to be great.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, and Henry Johann, of Columsville, were in town the past week. Both report a good Christmas.

The bowling club has not been rolling of late, owing to all of us being too busy with our holiday trade. Rolling will resume next week, and all members are expected to attend regularly, as a prize will be offered for the most regular member in the new year. Other prizes for bowling during the year will also be made, which will make it more interesting for the members.

"Rocky," your Denver correspondent, has very little to say nowadays regarding their bowling, now that they are rolling on the new regulation alleys. I hope their scores are not so small that they would not look well in print. Out with them and let's see the scores of your usual two-hundred men. The mighty Scott, the great John Berry, Mauff, Zimmer and Valentine should make a good team to roll at Buffalo next summer.

J. J. B.

BUFFALO.

New Year's day, the first of the century (or was it a year ago?) is drawing to a close and I have just time to tell you that it has been an ideal winter day; the tinkling of sleigh bells and a clear bright sun has made all happy. Buffalo, like other cities, marched and shouted and drank and burned powder in honor of the new century. It was such a night as our city has not seen before.

New Year's is no longer the busy time with florists, yet there was a good business. The plants handled were comparatively nothing; but a good demand for flowers at about Christmas prices. It has been a gay season and the end is not yet. Last week was the swell Buffalo Club ball, at which Palmer did some fine decorations. On Christmas night all parties were eclipsed by a ball given by J. J. Albright. The decorations were superb, but Mr. A. did not need the help of the florist to so great an extent as others, as they have a fine range of houses on the place. Take it altogether, I don't think flowers of every kind have been so thoroughly cleaned up for a long time as they are on this first day of the year, and there is every reason to look forward to the coming days with cheerfulness. People are feeling well to do and have the spirit of live and let live in their daily conduct.

One hundred years ago today there was no white man, woman or child in the territory on which now stands the city of Buffalo. What a marvelous change in a century; not more so, or as much, as some cities can say, yet wonderful enough. Three hundred and thirty-five thousand people, 600 miles of steam railroad track within the city limits; a steel plant, building at an outlay of twenty millions, and the Pan-American Exposition that at first was thought to be local, then state, then national, but now by millions of intelligent people known to be what its name implies—all-American. An exposition that for completeness, for beauty, for enjoyment and delight of the finest senses of man, will eclipse any exposition the world has ever seen. I can hear several murmurings that say "Hold on, Will, you are piling it on." I am not, but if I had the ready and beautiful phraseology of an Austin Shaw I could say much more and could not exaggerate the beauty of this great effort on the part of our people.

The growth of horticulture in the past 100 years would be a marvelous tale and would fill volumes. It has grown from the cultivation of a few plants, or the adornment of a garden by the wealthy or enthusiast, to a great commercial business; but our trade or profession is the oldest on record and constantly attended to all through all civilized histories. When we read of the banquets of Nero, where showers of violets fell from the ceiling onto the guests, we must not think yet that we have no further step yet to take in floriculture. It is comforting to think that ours is a business that gives joy to him that gives and to him (or her) that receives. "'Tis twice blessed," as "William" said and as long as our civilization lasts and the more civilized and refined the nation becomes the more will the use of sweet flowers extend. They are the pure and harmless, but welcome, messengers of love and joy, of friendship and sympathy, and, rather than their use being curtailed, will they be seen in the home of every family throughout the land.

I wish all those kind and considerate people who have done me the honor to read my notes a very happy and prosperous New Year. I will join them in being thankful that we have lived to see the end of this marvelous century. In material prosperity unequaled in the world past; in invention and discovery of the truths of nature still more marvelous. Best of all freedom of thought and the glorious truths that science has revealed. The dark veil of bigotry has been lifted, for all if we want to see. One hundred years ago an Episcopal sermon would be largely devoted to the temperature and general conditions of hell; today it is to be moral and you will feel better.

There are greater problems for this century than the one just passed. I hope our children will live to see the day when war will be looked on with horror instead of glory; when poorhouses will be vacant; when our municipal government will be a pride to us instead of a scandal; when socialism of the best kind will have put an end to labor troubles; when there will be less religion and a higher morality. To those who think I use the wrong word I beg to say that the correct meaning of the word religion is the outward observance and when people say a certain man is truly religious they mean that he is highly moral. I hope all mankind will go on progressing as in the past 100 years—there is plenty of room upwards. I hope for a greater equality of man. And that must come and till it is here we are only emerging from barbarism.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas is spoken well of by the craft generally, the bulb goods men being the most marked dissenters, as expected, and the rose men generally did not come out with colors flying quite so high as they had hoped. Prices were not broken, however, and the shortness of the crop during the next two or three days allowed time for the absorption of any surplus.

Carnations proved to be about as scarce as predicted, but not quite. If there was a surprise concealed in the violet situation it was that the crop turned out heavier than expected, and that the demand exceeded expectations enough to fully meet the supply at good prices, $2 being the general figure for first-class ones.

It seemed to me personally that the trade as a whole was not so heavy as it ought to have been, but most others seem to think I am mistaken and claim a 25 to 35 per cent increase. Several of the retailers in the city did not handle the supply of roses they bargained for so advantageously as they hoped, even with the assistance of heavy orders for ex-Gov. Walcott's funeral.

Naturally towards the end of the week the cut of all kinds exceeded the always light demand of that date and prices began to melt. This is a dangerous symptom always and I fear it will be hard to check the movement at the proper point. At this writing the disease seems to affect the best grade of pink and white roses the most of anything. There are quite a few extra heavy ones coming in.

The "Traveler" tells a joeose story of how a certain Smith, of Hebrew lineage, while selling Christmas green for Samuel Katz, took possession of the whole stock in trade, some $28 in value, and disappeared. Being apprehended by the proper officials, he settled the case out of court. J. S. Manter.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

New Year's trade averaged about the same as last year in volume with prices possibly a trifle lower than a year ago. The supply was good and there would undoubtedly have been demand enough to take it all at top figures but for the bitter cold weather that arrived just prior to New Year's day and that no doubt kept many retail buyers from venturing out. As it was, prices held up firmly on the highest grades though they were shaded some on seconds and thirds where stock had accumulated. First class Beauties showed some weakness the latter part of last week, the receipts being unusually large for the season, but on Monday and Tuesday the demand strengthened sufficiently to put prices back to the old notch. There has been a splendid cut of Beauties this season and the supply has come nearer to meeting demand than during any previous year. At Christmas it was easier to secure the extra long stemmed Beauties than the shorter ones, the demand for the medium lengths being so great.

The supply of carnations was extra good and large quantities were disposed of, prices being slightly shaded in some instances to move lots of the lower grades.

Yesterday (Wednesday) the receipts were light and it was just as well, as demand, though fair, was insufficient to clean up all that came in except that of first grade. Prices have of course weakened but have dropped but little below New Year's quotations on first grades. Violets seem to have suffered most, probably due to the prevailing severe weather.

There has been a noticeably strong demand for white flowers of late owing to the large number of deaths. The death lists in the daily papers are appallingly long and pneumonia is mentioned as the cause of death in very many cases. It seems to be almost epidemic.

The "pickled stock" question is again to the fore. The picklers should thoroughly grasp the fact that such stock is under no circumstances included in a shipping order and that its only chance of being sold is to a local buyer and invariably at reduced rates. To include any stale flowers in a shipping order would be a very foolish move on the shipper's part. He cannot afford to send such stock to his customers, a loss all around being sure to result. There are complaints enough regarding the condition on arrival of fresh stock, and that which has been "pickled" is sure to be quite worthless when it reaches its destination. It is not at all uncommon for a shipper to go out and buy fresh stock for a shipping order though he may have on hand an abundance of the same kind that lacks freshness. The last named must await the advent of a local customer who can use it at once, and he always drives a close bargain for it too. "Pickling" is becoming steadily less and less profitable.

Various Items.

William Barnard, father of W. W. Barnard, died Dec. 25, aged 79 years, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Professor Howe, Champaign, Ill.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held tomorrow (Friday) evening. Mr. John Reardon is to read a paper on "A succession of plants to keep the greenhouse benches full."

Mrs. C. L. Washburn is still seriously ill though improving slowly.

E. H. Hunt received no less than 25,000 violets for the Christmas trade. They were all of extra quality and sold at top prices.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. did the largest Christmas business in their long experience, in both the retail and wholesale departments.

E. R. Tauch has gone to Marquette, Mich., where he takes charge of the greenhouses of Mrs. L. H. Stafford.

Bowling.

At the league games played Dec. 27 the following scores were made:

Geo. Asmus	151	161	177
F. Stollery	176	190	169
F. J. Hauswirth	182	155	154
C. Balluff	196	175	180
Ed. Winterson	178	143	155

It was an expensive evening for Mr. Balluff, as during the games some sneak thief made away with his overcoat and contents, the last including his cuffs in which were some valuable cuff buttons.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade of 1900 is conceded by all the florists to have been the largest and most profitable in the history of the trade here. The home production of cut flowers was limited, and as a consequence many had to buy heavily from Chicago, and not a complaint was heard, as stock arrived in splendid condition. Notwithstanding the fact that retail prices were higher than previous years, the people bought freely, and double the amount of stock could have been sold. It was a general cleanup of cut flowers and flowering plants.

The weather was mild and a little soft until Monday, the 24th, when the mercury dropped low enough to give good flavor to the turkey and called for light protection in the delivery of tender plants. The sales of holly and lycopodium were a trifle better than last year, and those who handle this material in large quantities still have a supply on hand. Their failure to dispose of entire stock may be attributed to the absence of conventional Christmas weather. Kansas City is located close to a mistletoe producing country, yet this important adjunct to the Christmas festivities arrived in poor condition, not being carefully selected or properly packed.

George M. Kellogg, our largest grower, had only a limited supply of stock, yet it was of a high grade, and brought topnotch prices.

Samuel Murray's collection of flowering plants was immense; the Eucharis amazonica, Begonia Lorraine and azaleas were his specialties. Two plants of the latter sold for $25 each. Mr. Murray was also well supplied with American Beauties, the best retailing at $20 per dozen.

W. L. Rock's window looked gorgeous all Christmas week with the cream of the market. A leading flower with him this year was the poinsettia, which took favorably with his patrons.

In addition to an immense cut flower trade Arthur Newell disposed of twenty-five crates of decorative material, and says he has purchased a $200 box for the twentieth century ball.

The Humfeld Floral Co. and W. J. Barnes were successful in holding back their late mums, which brought $6 per dozen.

August Blankenfeld is cutting a fine crop of carnations from his small place and sees the necessity of increasing his glass another year.

Visitors in town the past week were a heavy snow storm and Arnold Ringier, both from Chicago. H. J. M.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Christmas Trade.

The Xmas trade passed the bounds of expectation. The supply of cut flowers was considerably larger than last year, with the output of full 25 per cent extra of glass area to draw from, and then, was far short of the demand. The greatest shortage was in Meteors, Beauties and red carnations, many a red carnation order being filled with bright pink instead. Shipping orders were more persistently numerous, and larger than ever before, and in connection with this, a run of funeral orders ran through the entire week, taxing the resources of the florists to their utmost, although the funeral orders served the good purpose of working off much stock that might not have been used otherwise. White carnations and pink and white roses were in best supply. There were plenty of Romans and paper whites, but the local demand being light, most were shipped, as were what Harrisii and mums there were left. There were less flowering plants than last year and they sold out clean, yet the demand was for palms and other decorative plants, of which more were sold than at any previous Xmas.

As predicted, there was enormous quantities of holly sold; the hanging of a holly wreath in each prominent window being little short of epidemic. Most of the holly was handled by the commission and seed stores, which have come to make a specialty of these goods with green, laurel and mistletoe. The total sales were probably 20 per cent in excess of last year, which was itself a record breaker. Prices obtained were about the same as last year, with the quality of flowers much better, very little pickled stock being offered; in fact, funeral work kept that cleaned up.

Prices.

Roses, $2 to $3 per dozen; carnations, 75 cents to $1 per dozen; violets, 25 cents to 35 cents; paper whites and Romans, 75 cents per dozen; Beauties, from 20 cents for very short to $1.50 for a first class rose and stem.

NEWARK, OHIO, December 27, 1900.

THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., Chicago.

GENTLEMEN: Please ship to me as soon as possible 300 more of your Nephrolepis Wittboldii.

The plants I received from you a short time ago are doing so nicely that the more I see of them the more I am convinced that Wittboldii is the Great Fern of the Future, and I feel I cannot get too heavy a stock.

And I know that every enterprising florist will purchase a stock of it as soon as he sees what a grand decorative plant it will make.

Wishing you a prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours truly,

A. J. BALDWIN.

Christmas Trade.

Xmas trade seems to have been very satisfactory with everybody around here and complaints are few. All the stores report a fine business and most of them could have disposed of more good stock, if it could have been obtained. Both pot plants and cut flowers sold well. Begonia Glorde de Lorraine sold quickly, as did what cyclamen that were in good shape. Azaleas and primulas also sold well. Poinsettias sold well both cut and in pans. Palms, ferns and rubbers had their usual Xmas sale. In cut flowers fancy carnations easily took the lead, and immense quantities were disposed of at unusual prices even for Xmas. Roses sold very well, but the high wholesale prices made it impossible for the storemen to sell them at as good profit as they did the good carnations. Violets went well in spite of the high prices. What few good chrysanthemums that were left went readily. Holly and ground pine are handled by the grocers and immense quantities are disposed of; the better class of florist stores do not handle them much except in large wreaths, etc., and in decorations.

There was not the usual complaining about pickled stock, caused perhaps by the extra good demand just previous to Christmas. The growers also have learned better how to take care of the stock and that it pays to keep it in good condition.

There may not have been much increase over last year, but all seem better satisfied. The growers had no trouble in getting fair prices for good stock, and the people seemed more willing to pay a good price for it. Everybody wanted fancy stock regardless of the price. The weather during the week previous was favorable to the growers and those who had the buds had no trouble in getting a good cut.

Notes.

On Jan. 8 the State Florists' Association will hold its annual meeting at the horticultural rooms at the state house. Officers are to be elected for the coming year and all the members should be present. There will be an exhibition of carnation blooms and any one having new varieties is kindly requested to send blooms. Secretary McKeand is sending out information in regard to certificates, etc., to those desiring to show seedlings. If you have something good, send it along.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Roderick McKenzie, for the last nineteen years manager for E. H. Barnes, died Nov. 27 of typhoid-pneumonia, aged 52 years. He was widely known in the profession generally as well as locally. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Scottish Caledonian Club, both of which organizations were prominently represented at the funeral. The display of funeral flowers was the finest ever seen in this city.

Mr. McKenzie left a widow, four sons and one daughter. He was insured in the New York Life. He was prominent in Masonic circles, and at the time the Masons' Home was founded he contributed $2,000.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz. $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade just passed showed considerable increase over that of previous years. The weather was ideal and deliveries were gotten out with little difficulty. As was expected, plants took the lead, Azaleas probably at the head. All that were in shape sold and a good many more could have been disposed of, the price ranging from $3 to $5. Pan poinsettias also sold well, as did a few good lilies. Plant baskets took well and could be called a feature of this year's business. Hampers of Gloire de Lorraine and adiantum were the best. On cut flowers the market was a little short, with the exception of violets, they having turned up in large numbers on the last day. They held their price though and sold at $4 per 100, and were all cleaned out, as Christmas morning was a violet day. Good teas and Beauties were scarce and prices ruled high; teas going at $3 to $5 and Beauties at $5 to $18. Carnations were about equal to the demand and quality good, the fancies especially so.

Trade in ground pine and holly moved along fast. The supply of pine ran away short, notwithstanding the fact that it was sold by every grocery store and corner stand in town. Rocky.

OTTAWA, ONT.

The Christmas Trade.

Ottawa florists express themselves as satisfied with the holiday trade this year. It is unnecessary after this information to say it is unusually good, since any one acquainted with the business aspirations of the enterprising dealer in midwinter blossoms knows that it takes more than a little success to make him feel his labors are getting their due reward. The weather was very favorable this year, an important consideration in a climate like that of eastern Ontario, and the mild days just before Christmas and New Year's made the delivery of goods possible without the risk attending the mercury placing itself at 10 or 15 degrees below zero.

The stock held by local florists for the holiday trade this year was exceptionally good, and some very fine goods, both in cut flowers and plants, were offered.

With a record-breaking Christmas trade, and Parliament, with the extra display at state and social functions attending the return of the Laurier government to power, opening here Feb. 6, the Ottawa florist has reason to believe his energies will all be needed to keep the supply equal to the demand until Ash Wednesday closes the quiet season and begins the preparations for Easter.

DAILLEDOUZE BROS., - Flatbush, N. Y.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Christmas trade was the best we ever had, the supply and demand being equally good. Roses and carnations were plentiful and of good quality. Violets scarce and poor. Some woe begone looking mums were still in evidence. Pot plants, such as azaleas, primulas and poinsettias were plentiful and sold readily at good prices.

The Van Bochove Bros. were fortunate enough to strike into a good cut of both roses and carnations. Their Maids and Brides were of excellent quality and Meteors were especially fine and plentiful. Beauties, of which they have one house, were good. The supply being short and demand brisk have determined them to plant this rose more largely in future. They are cutting some very fine carnations of both the standard and newer sorts. Ethel Crocker and Lawson are doing remarkably well with them and will find more bench room next year. Hill, White Cloud and Bradt are grown in quantity and are superb. They have this year devoted one house to adiantum, which is panning out well. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine (of which they had a table of nice specimens) found ready purchasers at from $3 to $5 each. Poinsettias are so much in favor they could not nearly supply the demand.

The Dunkley Floral Co. had some fine carnations of standard sorts, the newer varieties being also well represented. They also had some fine cyclamen and poinsettias, which found ready sale at good prices.

Queen Louise Carnation.

This new Carnation produces the finest flowers, is perfectly healthy and is the best white variety ever introduced.

IT BLOOMS EARLY. IT BLOOMS LATE. IT BLOOMS ALL THE TIME.

Our price list contains cuts from photographs taken every two weeks during the months of February, March, April, May, June, October and November. No other carnation can stand such a test.

Mr. Batson, who confines himself almost entirely to carnation culture, had a splendid cut, his especial favorite being Armazindy, which he grows to perfection.

The prospects for next month are good. If prices hold up there won't be so many long faces among our florist friends for some time to come.

Rides.

Advs. for our special Carnation Number, to be issued next week, must reach us by next Wednesday morning at the latest, and earlier will be better.

The Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, report that they are receiving 50 per cent more for blooms of their new rose Queen of Edgely than for those of their best Beauties. At Christmas they received $10 a dozen for their best Beauties and $15 a dozen for their best Queens.

Readers will confer a favor by sending in items of trade interest.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

Pre-eminently adapted to Roses and Carnations on account of its Economy and other advantages.

With the Tendril, Roses, etc., may be trained to an upright position from the start.

The Tendril does not crowd the plant, but holds it firmly and with freedom. Does not mutilate the foliage. Harbors no insects. Makes the plant come to a straight stem. Admits of free circulation of air. Requires no skilled labor to place properly. Can be moved up or down the stakes. Easily put on and easily taken off; and are durable.

PITTSBURG.

Christmas trade was very satisfactory, both in cut flowers and plants; of the latter more are being sold every year for Christmas and Easter. Cut flowers were cleaned up except some few carnations that went to sheep as soon as out of the box. They don't look so pretty after traveling a couple of hundred miles as they do in the greenhouse on the plants, and the extra forcing and holding over for Christmas trade seems to just take the life out of them, and if it is kept up for a few years more will kill the Christmas business in carnations.

Home grown stock averaged better in quality than in former years, both in roses and carnations. A few Romans were left over. Paper whites were not too plentiful. Charles Koenig had some good Prosperpine tulips cut and planted in pans which sold well. Lilies were scarce and brought $3 per dozen wholesale; otherwise prices were about the same as last year, but more flowers were sold. Christmas trees were all sold and most of the other greens. Ground pine was scarce and high priced. The week before Christmas carnations were scarce, but the day before they came in by the wagonload.

F. Burki is putting in a mechanical stoker to do away with smoke.

Hope every florist will have a happy and prosperous New Year. BAER.

APPOINTED BY THE PHILADELPHIA FLORISTS' CLUB TO JUDGE OUR

GRAND NEW ROSE

QUEEN OF EDGELY

PINK AMERICAN BEAUTY.

"We are convinced that this variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect, except color, the exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good, even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as fine as that of Beauty, and the exhibited blooms showed remarkable vigor."

QUALITY IN CARNATIONS.

Quality is the cry of the retailers, the cry of the man who has new varieties to introduce and the ambition of the cut flower grower.

Can quality be made to pay is a very interesting question for the new century, and the answer will no doubt be made in the affirmative before it is many years older. Today it is an unsolved question with many of the growers. Some very good ones have given it up in disgust and turned their talents into other channels and a few have gone to pieces trying to solve it.

Quality can be produced in any ordinary house, with a good grower at the head of it and an unflinching attention to every little detail of the culture from the selection of the cutting to the end of the plant's career the following summer. The expense of getting quality under these conditions is a very large item and should be carefully reckoned when estimating the cost of production, not forgotting that the man who can produce quality under adverse conditions is worth at least a thousand dollars a year.

It is not such an unattainable thing when the grower has houses to produce it; good big houses, well lighted, well ventilated, well heated and, of course, well managed. The cost of production in such houses could be figured from one-third to as much as one-half less than in poor houses, but the difference in the cost of the plant must here be taken into consideration.

Another item of expense in producing flowers of high quality is the necessity of keeping right up to date with varieties. It is not absolutely necessary that all novelties be bought by the thousand the first year of their introduction, but all of apparent merit should be bought by the 100 (less not being a fair trial) the first season, and then out of a possible dozen you will pick one or more that are so much of an improvement over the old variety of the same color that you will have to plant a house or two of it. This brings us to the point where we can figure on having to replenish our entire plant at least every four or five years (a portion each season, of course). At the price some of the novelties are being held at the past few years a very low estimate for the cost of this replanting would be $60.00 per 1,000, and more likely to reach $80.00 than less, counting the cost of the trial hundreds.

Still another item of expense to add to these high quality flowers is the one of marketing them. They cannot be packed into any old box in any old way, as many of the commoner sorts are, and sad to say often some of these very flowers we are speaking of, but they must be carefully handled all the way through from cutting to placing them on the counter.

After carefully figuring up all the expense side of the ledger, it might look as if there were little or no money in fancy carnations. This is one side of the question.

The deciding point for every grower between high grade carnations and medium grade must be his market. If he has a market that will take fancy carnations at a paying figure, there is no business under the sun that will yield as much pleasure as the turning out of these high grade blooms (to a lover of carnations), and if a fair amount of business sense is used in their production they will yield a reasonable profit, all expenses carefully computed. It is a bit hard to give figures with any degree of accuracy, but where the market will not pay an average of at least $4 per 100 for fancy carnations at least five months out of the eight that they are in season, and not less than half that amount for the remaining three months, the margin between profit and loss is so small that the grower who does not have money to lose had better be content with the medium grades.

In a market that will not pay more than from $1 to $2 per 100 for flowers the grower who is looking for profit will have to depend on the standard sorts that are of known commercial value as flower producers at the lower figure. The grower of this class of stock can by keeping careful watch over the growers of fancy stock pick out varieties that have proven themselves free bloomers and of fair quality and then wait a year or two, by which time the competition between the rooted cutting men will have brought the price down to a nominal figure, and he can stock up and make as much out of it as the man who had it in its first or second year. The grower of this class of stock does not have the fascination of paying $10, $12, $14 or $16 per 100 for rooted cuttings delivered too late in the season to make good plants, neither does he have the losses that accompany them through space taken up with varieties that have not met the expectations of either the seller or the purchaser, but if he is a philosopher he will console himself with the fact that he can watch others have the fascination and the loss and tread on comparatively sure ground himself.

The grower of poor carnations is more likely than ever in this century to be a continual loser until he becomes extinct. All or most all carnation growers consider their pursuit as the best in the whole world, but the constant addition to the number compels us to look to the financial end of it and carefully gauge our market and keep a strict watch on the items of expense and profit, so that we may keep in and up with the race.

THE LAWSON CARNATION.

In your issue of Nov. 22 Mr. Hartshorne's suggestions as to culture of the Lawson carnation have, I think, been generally misunderstood by the trade in general, and because of many inquiries on the subject I think it best to answer through the medium of your paper.

The Lawson, having a tendency to throw short stems early in the season, ought to have all buds or advanced flowering shoots pinched back when housed, which should be done late in July or early in August. The first growth made indoors will give a much longer stem, which will keep increasing as the season advances. At this date (Dec. 31) we have them growing very vigorously, and showing abundance of stems 18 to 24 inches in length, with half developed buds, which will stretch considerably by the time the blooms expand.

A night temperature of 52 to 54 degrees is, I find, a safe one to maintain, with a rise of not over 15 degrees by day during the dull and short days of December and January. Of course, this can be considerably increased by day as the season advances and abundance of ventilation given.

As I read Mr. Hartshorne's notes of 54 to 65 degrees, I understood him to mean the former for night and the latter for day temperature. Others have read it only as night temperature. While it would, owing to the vigorous constitution of the Lawson, be quite possible to grow it by night in this high temperature and get good results, it would have a tendency to impair its constitution. Better go more carefully during the dark days, and with the advent of brighter and longer days raise the temperature by degrees to suit the needs of the variety.

The Lawson is a rapid and vigorous grower, and I find needs and will amply repay any extra care given in the way of a stimulant early in the season. Plants housed Aug. 10 we top dressed in November, which is now filled with feeding roots. A light application of pulverized sheep manure every two or three weeks seems to meet their wants admirably and an occasional application of lime will keep the soil sweet and add to the quality of stem and general constitution. ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Since the popularity of the long stemmed carnation has set in, and for a dozen years or more it has been at least only second to the rose, millions of young plants have been bought from the specialist and the propagation of these young plants, both the novelties and standard varieties, has afforded a good business to many more or less honest firms and individuals. I take the liberty of saying "more or less" because some of the young stuff sent out in the shape of rooted or transplanted cuttings or plants is very often poor stuff. Every or any part of the plant that will possibly root is put into the sand and if it roots at all it is shipped off to some confiding correspondent at a good price per hundred.

It's a serious matter when you get rubbish of this kind, and if you have the pluck to throw them away you are the least out of pocket. But you don't usually do that; you put them in the field and fuss with them and lift them in August or September, and every time you pass them during the winter you swear voluminously if with confidential company, but if with dignified visitors you have to apologize every time with the same old story, "Yes, they are poor, I know. Mr. Thrifty sent me a lot of cuttings propagated from the old tough growths at the bottom of the plants and they, or course, don't amount to much, but I will be able to get plenty of stock from them"; and that's most all you do get from them. I don't by any means infer that all firms do this, for many of them can be depended on to send you only good, thrifty cuttings.

I have prefaced my remarks about rooted cuttings because I know from experience that very poor material is too often sent to customers, and is a great disappointment and loss.

I believe that nearly or quite all the propagators of young carnations believe in a gentle heat of the sand of the propagating bench. We always had it so in the old days of twenty-five years ago and had uniformly good results. The ideal to me is about 50 for the temperature of the house and 60 to 65 for the sand. Of course the temperature of the house will raise above this in day time. In these conditions nearly all root freely in about twenty to twenty-five days, but are all the better left for another week or until there is a good bunch of roots formed. Varieties differ in their tendency to root. We find the two well-known varieties, "Daybreak" and "Scott," root very well in sand without any bottom heat. Then again we found the two great varieties, "Mrs. Bradt" and "Crane," will hardly root at all in cold sand. Without bottom heat it takes any variety thirty-five to forty days. If the process of rooting by the warm sand was the slightest injury to the future plant there would be some reason to condemn it, but it is not in the least.

Now you often see rooted cuttings advertised as being "transplanted," which means that they have been taken from the sand when rooted and planted into flats two or three inches apart and from there they are lifted and sold. I have unintentionally bought such plants and never found them nearly as satisfactory as well rooted plants from the sand. In taking plants from flats you are very liable to break off and lose many of the roots, and unless cut out with quite a lump of earth you are sure to lose most of the working roots. I am aware that if there are no orders for those in the sand and they have a good bunch of roots that something must be done with them, but I am inclined to think that orders are more often ahead of the supply, and whenever it is so there is no advantage but a disadvantage in having them undergo the process of transplanting.

What can be more satisfactory than lifting the rooted cuttings from the sand and giving them a slight shake, or if you prefer, dip the root in water and every particle of sand will drop off and leave every fibre entire? Perhaps this transplanted business is practiced because the propagator wants to take out a batch as quickly as possible to make room for another lot of cuttings and supposes that rooting will go on in the flats. It does if you give them plenty of time, but if not well rooted in the sand they are very slow to start in the soil, and this is the poor condition in which they are often sent. Remember that carnations should be decidedly rooted; that is, the roots should be from one-half to one inch long.

Now I have written the above with this view: that if you intend to buy any new or standard variety you should give your order at once and say: "When rooted please send me so and so," and there will be no excuse for receiving wilted rubbish that went through the form of going into the sand for two or three weeks and then into the flats or bench whether they had roots or not. We are pretty well agreed on what constitutes a good cutting. It is the shoots that grow from the side of the flowering stem, but those shoots should reach a proper size. Some plants are much more prolific in this kind of cuttings than others, and some plants of the same variety. A little latitude may be allowed to a man who has a most desirable variety and every one wants it. The young growths that send up a flower stem can be taken for a cutting, and we used to propagate old De Graw, Edwardsii and La Purite entirely from this sort of cutting, but they are inclined to make a strong, bushy plant, with slow inclination to flower, and this cutting takes longer and is much less certain to root than the side shoot of the flowering stem.

What I am going to say about selecting cuttings for your own stock is nothing new, but yet poorly observed with many. You want, we will say, to put in 2,000 Flora Hill or Crane. You start at the end of your bench and grab every cutting that suits you without at all studying the growth or flowering qualities of the individual plant. Now like begets like, broadly speaking, and if there is a plant that has a perfectly healthy growth but has given scarcely any flowers and shows little for the future, why propagate from that when perhaps by its side or throughout the bench there are a lot of plants sending up numerous flowering stems, a plant that pleases you in every way, with equal health? I believe that many of us in this respect have been woefully careless and that by propagating from selected plants we could have a much better strain (if I may use the term) than we now have. I am sure careless selection of cuttings has been the cause of much dissatisfaction with a number of good varieties which we have become dissatisfied with and discarded for some newer and no better. It is absolutely necessary that some of the new varieties be acquired and grown, but not any more necessary, or even as much, as it is to grow what we have well at its very best.

The care and treatment of the rooted cuttings until the planting out time also has much to do with their future success and we all too often incline to give them indifferent care. One of the drawbacks to early rooted cuttings when kept in pots is that unless they are shifted in March or have been given ample room in flats or on the bench they get stunted and lose their roots. Cuttings that come from the sand by middle of February will do very well in 2½-inch pots till the planting out time. They do very well in flats, but each plant should have at least 2½ inches of space. In depth 2 inches will do. Where you have the convenience of a vacant bench with a few inches of soil the young plants can be planted on it three inches apart and with the greater uniformity of moisture will make larger plants than those in pots, and with a little care can be lifted and taken to the field with every promise of success. Yet on the whole I prefer having the young plants in 2½-inch pots, for then if planted and not watered they endure a dry spell much better than those from the flats or bench.

Young carnations, whatever they are in, want the fullest light, and when they have once taken root after removal from cutting bed they should be light and cool; 45 degrees at night is plenty for them. We consider that if possibly large enough all young carnations should have one "stopping" before they are planted out and only the very latest struck will not need it. Start the plant off right. You can "stop" it just in the right place and do it in half the time that you can in the field, and if planted in the field and the plants should be drawn up long and you suddenly decapitate them they stand still a long time. If you can put out by the first of May, or before, a sturdy little plant that has been once "stopped," with three or four side shoots, you are up to date on the road to success-ful carnation growing. In conclusion, ask for your carnation cuttings from the sand and see that they are well rooted or don't accept them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

SYRINGING CARNATIONS.

We feel like entering a protest against the continual syringing of carnations, which is said to prevent or kill red spider. Twenty-five years ago when everything about the greenhouse was new to us we grew a few carnations in pots and following the general instructions we thoroughly syringed them, but the more we syringed them the more the red spider flourished; finally the leaves were curled and they looked so bad we set them away to die, or if they lived to plant in the open ground. The unexpected happened, and after a few weeks we noticed that the young shoots were growing out strong and healthy and entirely free from red spider. We then came to the conclusion that to prevent red spider on carnations it was best to keep the water off of the foliage, which made it soft, and let the leaves get tough and hard.

For twenty-five years we have given orders to our men not to syringe our carnations except when first planted, and with the exception of Daybreak we have never had red spider to speak of and we grow and bloom carnations from the time to go in the houses until we throw them out to plant again. With Daybreak we some years have had trouble from red spider; the growth is so rank and soft that the spider just revels on it. We find that a heavy syringing twice a week about four o'clock in the afternoon for two or three weeks entirely banished them. The fact that we have never been troubled with rust to amount to anything we credit to the dry treatment.

We have found the best nozzle for syringing is made of one-half inch pipe two and one-half feet long, a socket on one end to connect it with the hose, an elbow on the other end with a piece of perforated tin soldered over it for the spray. With this you can get up close under the leaves and with a good force wash every insect off.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The program and schedule of premiums of the tenth annual meeting of the American Carnation Society, to be held at Baltimore, Md., Thursday and Friday, Feb. 21st and 22d next, has been issued.

The meetings will be held in Lehman's hall, Howard street, Baltimore, and the exhibition will be held in the same hall, the space being 71x53 feet. The hall will have electric light only.

The program includes a paper on "The Carnation in Health and Disease," by Prof. Albert F. Woods, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which will be illustrated by stereopticon views, and one on "Hybridizing the Carnation," by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass. And there will be discussions on "Stem Rot," "Sub-watering" and other subjects, in addition to the usual question box.

The exhibition promises to be an especially attractive feature, as usual. In addition to the usual certificates and special prizes for new varieties that show an advance on existing sorts there are general premiums in which cash prizes are offered by the society. In class A first prizes of $12 each and second prizes of $6 each are offered for vases of 100 blooms each of white, light pink, dark pink, scarlet, crimson, yellow variegated, white variegated and any other color. In class B prizes of $6 and $3 are offered for vases of 50 blooms each in the same classification of colors. Class C calls for 25 blooms each and is confined to introductions of 1900, the prizes being $3 for first and $1.50 for second in each case. Quite a number of silver cups and other special prizes are offered by various firms, and the Lawson medals will also be awarded.

It will no doubt be a great exhibition and a memorable meeting. And as Baltimore is famed for its hospitality there is no question but what the social side will be well looked after. Certainly pleasure and profit are admirably blended at these annual meetings.

Copies of the full program and premium list may be had by any one interested by addressing the secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

A VISIT TO PETER FISHER.

Hearing of many pilgrimages being made to Mr. Peter Fisher's place, I took a run out to see if I could find out what attractions the place might have. In connection with this thought comes the fact that Mr. Fisher is seldom seen in Boston. I found out why the place has attractions both for himself as well as others. He has a family consisting of a wife and four children, of whom he is, and should be, both fond and proud.

He has a fine home, almost ideally situated for both pleasure and his business, being sheltered on the cold side and open to a fine view on the other, with both steam and electric communication right at the door, and he has developed there a well paying business that is peculiarly suitable to his tastes, which can and does occupy his whole time, his whole mental and physical power, and from which he has won the unique and enviable position of the most noted new carnation producer of New England. Visitors get their enjoyment in seeing a respected coworker so pleasantly placed and in viewing the successive stages of his work as well as the magnificent results.

He has not been noted as a grower, because his plant was not large enough, but he will be heard from later, as his strictly first-class additions will make him a formidable rival when worked for blossoms instead of cuttings, as at present. The expected shipping of three hundred thousand rooted cuttings makes this necessary.

It would take a book to describe his work and no one can write it but himself, or at least some one remarkably well versed in carnation lore. I must not even attempt it. Suffice it for me to say I never passed a more pleasant afternoon. He tries to conceal nothing about his work. What he does and why he does it is as open as the field for astronomical research on a clear midwinter night. Mr. W. H. Elliott, in the course of a fine paper read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club three years ago said Mr. Fisher had "chased the Lawson pink so fast it could not get away!" He is still chasing others just as fast and I think you will find he has caught two or three about as good. But they will speak for themselves at the proper time. But he is commander-in-chief of an army of rooting cuttings which are fighting for one of those victories which "peace hath as well as war!"

The noticeable features about the greenhouses are: First, the absolutely perfect condition of almost every plant about the place. I claim there is not another man in New England that can have so many kinds under one roof and all of them so thoroughly illustrating the habit of its kind. Second, the absolute cleanliness of everything about the place. Third, the dozens of blossoms and seed pods which bear little tickets inscribed with facts concerning recent hybridization. His knowledge of these and his stern requirements of them are Mr. Fisher's strong points. He has thrown away many better varieties than others have tried to introduce and seemingly will not "let well enough alone."

Of course much attention centers around the new varieties he has "caught" and is working up a stock of them. Go and see them. J. S. Manter.

CARNATION REVERIES.

By Jas. Hartshorne.

On looking over the trade papers one finds a great difference in Christmas price reports from different sections of the country for the same varieties of carnations. Take, for instance, the New York reports, and then glance at Chicago's. Growers of the former city received $10.00 to $15.00 per 100 for Crane and its class, while for Lawsons and the other top notchers they were able to get as high as $25.00 per 100; and I have heard from reliable sources, of carnations wholesaling there at 50 cents apiece. There is no wonder that it sets the Chicago grower and retailer alike to thinking and looking for the cause, for highest price obtained in Chicago last Christmas for the cream of the cut was 8 cents each, and the great majority of it was only able to fetch 5 or 6 cents each, including good Lawsons and Cranes. How does it come about? I think any one who knows will agree with me that as good stock goes to the Chicago market as to any in the country.

During a brief chat I had a few days ago with a prominent eastern grower he dropped the remark that the eastern people would have the large blooms and were willing to pay for them. That is not the case in Chicago, excepting as to the fore part of it. Our people want the finest to be had, but when it comes to paying the additional price you see them squirm.

In our conversation I gleaned this much from him, that the retailers in New York and Philadelphia made it a point to arrange their blooms in such a way that the customer's attention would at once be attracted by the difference in the quality. For instance, a fine vase of Lawsons would be placed in the midst of a group of common carnations, sometimes with a placard attached stating that it was the genuine Lawson, etc. I think the scheme a good one, although it is not new, but it might be applied to other fine stock the same way, with or without the placard. The customer steps inside, inquires the price, pushes his nose into them, buys too or three dozen of the commoner ones, but cannot resist the temptation to at least get half a dozen to show his friends how much he knows about the difference in pinks, or maybe to take as a present to some particular acquaintance.

How many Chicago retail florists make a display of cut flowers in their windows? Very few. It is not the fashion here. People know they have got them inside. But that isn't the point. If your wife goes shopping she comes home loaded with merchandise that she never had thought of until she had seen it where the merchant had placed it for that very purpose. I am not a retailer and perhaps do not know enough about their affairs to be giving pointers, but this much I do know, that to ask and insist on getting more than three times for their stock than they have paid the grower for same is wrong, especially so on that very top grade which is called extra fancy or specials. It has been done in Chicago to my personal knowledge.

I should think it would pay better in the long run to aim to make only what profit is absolutely necessary on the extra choice grade of blooms, thereby establishing a trade for that class of stock and nothing else, and at the same time giving some encouragement to the grower to produce that class of goods. If the supply of all the common varieties is shortened the retailer will soon drive the street fakir out of business. Very few of the retail florists are fully aware of the fact that there is as much difference between carnations as there is between common tea roses and long stemmed Beauties, but such is the case. If he could see the seedling benches in the various hybridizers' establishments it would be well for him and the carnation man.

There are hundreds of fine carnations discarded by the hybridizer every year, some of which would cause a most agreeable surprise to flower buyers and carnation lovers in general could they only be marketed at a little profit. But this is the way the grower sizes up the situation, as he strokes back the petals of his pet: This is a grand thing, but the trouble is it will only produce about ten blooms to a plant during the season, and figuring on a basis of 8 cents per bloom at Christmas will only average about 5 cents each for the entire season. He turns around to the more inferior varieties and goes musing on: This is giving me twenty-five blooms to a plant at an average of 3 cents each and takes up no more bench space. He takes his label out of his pocket and marks his pet for the rubbish heap, thus turning more money into the fakir's pocket and less for himself and the retailer. Had that variety been introduced and the blooms marketed at an average of 8 cents each there would not be enough flowers produced to cause a glut in the market at any time, providing we can accustom ourselves to produce this class of carnations in all colors. They are in existence, if you are willing to pay the price for them. It is all up to the retailer himself to rid himself of the fakir by introducing these extra fancy shy bloomers to the public. Of course, he cannot handle very many of them at first, but I am sure if he sent to the hybridizer's establishment for a few dozen of these on his best days in the week and leave it to the grower's discretion what to send he would find it a profitable venture for his business and a good starter for elevating our business to the level where it belongs among the arts and sciences.

The growers have certainly done their part and are still going on with the good work of growing varieties of carnations that do not bloom freely enough to make them as profitable as they should be. Take for instance the money expended every year for new varieties; to satisfy the whims of the retailer who has seen such and such a carnation at the exhibition, you should get some of it, and the loss of hundreds of plants each year, costing $10.00 per 100, occurring from stem rot and other diseases. It strikes me very forcibly that this is the only feasible plan to follow for the retailer to rid himself of the crepe chaser and that other most tantalizing competitor, the street fakir.

CARNATIONS IN NEW ENGLAND.

Being interested as ever in the carnation as grown by different growers, and having a little more leisure than usual, we took a trip with several friends to the noted establishments of Messrs. Patten & Co. and A. Roper, in Tewksbury, Mass. At Mr. Roper's we were surprised at the quantity and quality of seedlings grown, three or four of them promising to become first class commercial varieties, most prominent of all being a very handsome one of light salmon color, and a very large flower. We understand that several good offers have been made to Mr. Roper for the stock of that variety.

Our next visit was to the well appointed plant of Mr. Patten, a truly commercial place, where none but reliable varieties are grown in the best manner and their best points developed. His Marquis, Crane and White Cloud especially were the best we have seen this season and all high grade flowers. Mr. Patten grows carnations only and does it well. He has been very lucky in getting good stock of the Marquis sent to him as we saw but few plants that were propagated from bottom shoots, as we and many others have had, and which will bloom late.

A few days later, in good company also, we visited Mr. Peter Fisher at the home of the peerless Lawson, which never looked better. A more even, healthy lot of carnations we never saw, and if the croakers, especially in our market, who never wanted to see any merit in the Lawson, will but open their eyes they can easily be convinced now. Three years ago we pronounced the Lawson the best commercial carnation to date, and now, as we grow it we are more positive about it. Of course, some allowance must be made for changes of soils and locations. There is, however, since its appearance in our markets, quite a reversion of opinion to its value and consequently quite a scramble for the plants also.

A very important part of Mr. Fisher's growing are his seedlings, and we may just as well admit that they are the most remarkable lot we ever saw (and we have seen many). We have always been rather skeptical about so much improvement in carnations, as we have been caught so often, but in these seedlings, we have been surprised; such a wealth of colors, forms and sizes. Mr. Fisher is if anything, most critical in his selection of seedlings, in a commercial point of view, and the least blemish in an otherwise splendid variety will cause it to be cast off unmercifully. (Raisers of new seedling carnations please take notice.)

Our visit to Mr. Fisher's place was, as it always is, a perfect treat, and no florist who has a pretension to that name ought to neglect to see where some of our best carnations are raised.

TYING CARNATIONS.

One more word about my method of tying up carnations. I said in my last communication that having your string on a spool enables you to work the quickest. I fasten the string to the support closest to me and by taking the spool between the thumb and first finger (letting it roll just as on an axle), wind around second support, and so on until I am back again where I started. On a narrow bench I reach clear across (using only two wires the long way), and on a 6 or 7 foot bench I reach only to the center wire.

The advantage I claim is that one man can do the work quickly and easily, and that there are no wires or strings running through the bench the long way close to the ground, which gives you plenty of room to reach your center rows when putting on a top dressing or working the soil. Of course every one thinks his way the best, so let's wait and see what 1901 will bring.

CARNATIONS IN THE 20th CENTURY.

The carnation enters the new century with colors flying. Step by step, back in the seventies and eighties, it began to rise from comparative obscurity, until during the last ten years it came with a rush, with leaps and bounds, and stands now, with the searchlight of the twentieth century turned full upon it, a fair and beautiful rival of the rose. The latter out a year and a half or so later, comprises a story so often told that it must grow monotonous to some; but it is a fact that we must proceed along the beaten path and be wary of radical departure from established methods. Thus we will continue to select the best cuttings, root them in the most ideal way, give them good quarters at all times, whether in the house or field, leave no stone unturned to effect improvements wherever possible.

We have never yet reached a stage where further improvement was impossible. We can for many years continue to have our soil nearer perfection, to ascertain which ingredients are best for a complete plant food, and the best possible condition to have them in. We can still continue to ascertain the right time to open our ventilators, and the exact time they should be closed. We can still build better houses than some of the glass palaces we even now see. Our systems of heating and ventilation can yet be improved.

But with all this continual striving for greater improvement, we must be prepared to encounter an occasional setback. Each particular year is not always a decided advance; in the matter of experience it undoubtedly is, but there are many unforeseen possibilities which can and often do temporarily check our advance; for instance, an unfavorable season for plants in the field, errors of judgment in various matters; these we all must experience, for we are all at school; there are no graduates, and certainly none so well versed that mistakes are an impossibility.

Experiments with sub-watering and indoor culture are yet in their infancy. Just how much they will contribute to the greater excellence of the carnation, or the profits of growing, if at all, is yet to be determined. So far, we must confess that our experiments with sub-watering are not all that could be desired; as yet we see no practical difference between it and the raised bench system; certainly not enough to warrant the extra expense of putting in the system. We shall continue our experiments, however, in the hope of evolving something of real practical benefit to the grower.

Indoor culture is undoubtedly making greater progress than sub-watering. Here and there are to be found very excellent examples of the possibilities of this departure from old time methods. The consensus of opinion is that fewer blooms are produced, but they are of better quality, and since the latter is what we are striving for, more good reports may be expected from this system right along. We were so placed as to be unable to continue our experiments in this direction this season, but will do so next season, and hope for greater success than we have hitherto had.

To the hybridist are we indebted for the magnificent creations we have today. The conscientious hybridist is deserving of the good wishes and esteem of every lover of carnations. He is, however, often held up to criticism, not to say scorn, for disseminating varieties which do not come up to expectations. Quite frequently the variety in question may prove worthless commercially, and yet if some of these same kickers who very often have excellent reasons for complaint were to exchange places with the hybridist, I am inclined to think that they would outdo him in holding too closely to the opinion accredited to every old crow, viz., that each think their own young crows the blackest, and in this way bring upon himself or themselves more criticism and trouble than they ever dreamed of.

It takes a thoroughly impartial mind to see all of the weak points of a pet seedling, and to compare it properly with other varieties, and do justice to all; but as none are perfect dissatisfaction must exist. The mass of wreckage and debris we have gone through in order to get the comparatively few very good paying varieties we have today is almost appalling, but continual improvement and the law of "the survival of the fittest" will certainly continue this process indefinitely, and we may never hope, at least for a long time to come, to reach a stage when we will no longer be compelled to invest in stock of new varieties which are heralded as improvements over existing ones. Let every grower who wants to, raise seedlings, but let him be mindful of the fact that his brothers in the trade expect, and rightfully so, to get a good thing when they pay a good price for it.

The seedling man's pathway is not strewn with flowers in the sense usually accepted by this term, but is literally strewn with defective varieties, as he proceeds on his way culling out year after year. Often several years' work is brought to naught by a variety going to the bad when all indications pointed to a promising future. Verily the hybridist earns what little he makes on a new variety. Were it not for the intense interest he takes in his work many would abandon it, finding the details entirely too intricate and time-devouring to keep it up.

The seedling of the future must embrace all of the good qualities of the various sections of the Dianthus family. The blooms must be large, the color must be good, the habit and growth of the plant sturdy, vigorous and ideal; and the production of blooms must be early, free and continuous. Here is abundant room for the hybridist to continue his work. The process of assimilatmust always be given first honors. It is a point we carnationists will concede. But to a greater or lesser extent, those honors will henceforth have to be shared with the "divine flower."

The carnation will no longer stand back and quietly await its turn to be disposed of after the roses have been cleared away; but, instead, the once modest little pink is as saucy as any rose, and will do quite as much elbowing, good blooms bringing anywhere from $6 to $20 per 100, and even more.

The carnation enters the new century with an enviable record, and the most alluring prospects for greater improvement. The same forces which contributed to the present advancement will continue to be the beacon light of the twentieth century. Of these, improved methods of culture and hybridization or crossing are co-equal for honors, and to these two forces we must look for the greater improvement in the future.

From the time the cutting is separated from the old plant until it is thrown ing all of these features into one plant or variety has been going steadily on with every prospect of ultimate success.

Baltimore will be the Mecca for all carnations in February, where a nearer approach to this standard may be seen; then let us all turn out to see Dianthus in all her glory. "Maryland, My Maryland" extends a most cordial welcome.

CARNATION NOTES.

Temperature.

During the past week we have been enjoying just the weather we needed to bring the carnations up to their proper condition. The nights were cold, requiring steady firing, and the days were bright, and warm enough to permit some ventilating every day; some days as much as ten inches. It is not often that we have such fine weather for so long at this time of the year, and if you are wise you will make the most of it whenever it does happen along.

Do not allow the temperature on such days to run up too high; raise the ventilators, keep it down between 65 and 70 degrees, and avoid cold drafts directly on the plants. If you allow it to run up to 75 or 80 degrees your plants will make a quick, soft growth, and that is just what you want to avoid. Do not allow the temperature to rise to the mid-day mark before you begin raising the ventilators, but begin as soon as the temperature has risen a few degrees above the night temperature, say about 58 degrees, and raise an inch or two at a time, according to the strength of the sun; and in the afternoon lower them the same way. Do not close them down tight while the sun is still strong, and likely to run the temperature up, in order to save some of the heat and a little coal, but if the day is cold have the steam ready to turn into the houses soon after you close them up and before the temperature drops quite down to the night temperature. This may seem to you like a lot of bother for a house or two of carnations, and you may have had pretty fair carnations without being so careful, but it is the attention and judgment exercised in these small details that produce the high grade stock. You may have good soil and good houses, but if you are careless about these small things you need not expect your stock to grade among the fancies. At this time of the year keeping the proper temperature is one of the most important factors in producing good blooms.

Watering.

With this steady firing you will need to be very careful in watering. There will be spots near the steam pipes that will need watering every day, while some of the benches will not need a drop for several days at a time. Carefully examine occasionally those benches that have steam pipes running along under and close up to them. They will likely dry out at the bottom before they do at the surface, and if allowed to remain in such a condition long it will have a bad effect on your plants. Take a trowel and dig to the bottom here and there and keep yourself posted all the time as to the condition of the soil. A good, careful grower will always know the exact state of moisture of nearly every square foot of soil on his benches.

Top Dressing.

If your plants are in good healthy condition they will now be benefited by another light top-dressing. If the last dressing was cow or stable manure it would be a good idea to give them a change, and I would suggest sheep manure and soil in equal proportions with a 4-inch pot full of fine bone flour added to each bushel. Mix thoroughly and spread on the benches about one-half inch deep and give a good watering. Before putting it on rake off all the loose material you can without injuring the roots. If you cannot get any sheep manure handy the bone alone mixed into soil will be beneficial, but increase the proportion to a 5-inch pot of bone to each bushel of soil and spread on only one-quarter inch thick. Allow this last mixture to lay several days before applying. Hog manure is good if you can get it, and use in about same proportion as sheep manure. Chicken manure is fine, too, but it is very strong and should be mixed about one part manure to three parts of soil.

Carnation Society's Annual Meeting.

Just six weeks from the tenth of this month the American Carnation Society meets at Baltimore, and every carnation grower who can possibly get away from his business for a few days will want to go. That there will be a fine show goes without the saying, and there will be a lot of new varieties clamoring for the society's certificates of merit and perhaps some of the other premiums offered. It certainly pays to attend these meetings if you can possibly get away, because here you can see both the new and old varieties in their best form and you can get a line on the true merits of the new ones in regard to size, color and stem, and, in fact, the only way you can judge the value of a new variety is by comparing it with the older ones. If you possess a seedling or two which you fondly imagine is "the finest thing that ever happened" you can find out whether you are right or not by sending it up against the criticism of these foremost carnation men in the country. Don't be afraid that your pet will not get a fair show or that the judges will be unable to see its good points. When you look at it you can see only its good qualities, and if you do see a fault or two you have a dozen excuses for each one proving that it is not really a fault of the variety. These judges will not fail to see the good qualities of your variety, but you may be sure that they will also see its faults, and they are not afraid to tell you of them. So the thing for you to do is to follow the example of the leaders. Grow it as good as you can and hide all its faults if possible from the judges, and if you are successful they will give it a certificate and you can use that to help sell it to the rest of us. You need not tell us its faults; we can discover those for ourselves afterwards, and swear at you to our heart's content. But woe unto you if you ever try to introdnce another one.

I see in The Review that Messrs. Hill and Craig have bought R. Witterstaetter's scarlet Adonis and paid over $5,000 for it. Whether they really paid that sum or not makes little difference; for me the fact that these two gentlemen have bought it is proof enough that it is a grand variety. There are perhaps no two better judges in the country, and you may be sure that they would not buy a second-rate variety.

Cuttings.

It is time now for you to be getting in your main batch of cuttings in order to have fine plants to plant out in April. You can have fair success with later cuttings, but we have always found that the early ones paid us better, if taken proper care of after they were rooted. If you want to plant out of 2-inch pots you better wait until February. There is nothing more important than the selection of your cuttings, and you should exercise great care in doing this. There is a great difference in opinion among the growers as to what is really the best cutting. I know some growers who would have nothing else but the side shoots from the base of the flower stems, while some of the best growers I know of use only the young shoots at the bottom of the plants before they show any sign of throwing buds. This proves that either kind will make fine stock if properly selected and handled afterward. If I have only a few plants of a fine variety and wish to make all I can I use both kinds of cuttings; but if I have plenty of stock to select from I use the side shoots from the base of the flower stems, providing they are strong. One of the reasons for doing this is that you are sure to take your cuttings from plants that are blooming well, while if you take the other kind you may take some of them from plants that are inclined to make grass instead of bloom, and if this were repeated several seasons you would materially decrease the average number of blooms you cut from each plant. Another reason, and a good one, with those who grow for cut blooms, is that each strong young shoot taken at this time means one bloom less between now and Easter while they bring fair prices. Those from the flower stems would not bloom until later, when carnations are plentiful, and you would not miss them. These cuttings are also usually more solid and not nearly so apt to damp off in the sand. However, I do not hesitate to take either one if it is necessary.

Do not take cuttings from plants that are diseased or weakened in any way. The young plants may seem to outgrow the disease, but bacteria and stem-rot and all such diseases will nearly always reappear the next winter. Try to avoid cuttings from plants that produce off-colored blooms. Do not take cuttings from a plant that is suffering from drought, because it will be hard to keep them fresh and crisp after they are put into the sand. Our greatest care from the time the cuttings are put in until they begin to root is to keep them from wilting without keeping them sprayed all the time, which is apt to cause damping off. For that same reason, I like to take off the cuttings in the morning, before the sun is strong, or on a cloudy day. Try to get the cuttings of each variety of a uniform size, then there will be no extra large ones to crowd the smaller ones, and your plants in the fall will average much better. I do not care for an extra large cutting, but would much rather have a well matured, medinm sized cutting, at least up to February 1. Later in the season you will need large cuttings if you expect them to compare with those struck earlier. We cut the bottom smooth and clip the ends of the grass, and we have never heard a good reason why it should not be done. We think clipping helps to keep them from wilting.

New carnation Dorothy.

The 1900 Varieties.

Of the 1900 novelties we are, of course, unable to judge as well as we can the older varieties; but from our own experience and that of other growers we size them up about as follows: As a commercial sort we consider Ethel Crocker the best of the lot. It has good size, color and stem. It is a strong grower and a free bloomer. With us it is a race between this and Mrs. F. Joost for planting in quantity. This variety does not seem to like much feeding, but seems to like about the same treatment as Flora Hill.

Genevieve Lord is lighter in color and smaller in size than Crocker, but it is a strong grower and a free bloomer.

The Marquis makes a fine bloom on a fine stem and the color is better than either Crocker or G. Lord. If this variety can be brought into full crop by Dec. 1 or 15 it would be a money-maker for sure. With ordinary culture it is too late.

Mrs. T. W. Lawson has only one fault and that is a short stem, but we think that with indoor culture it will make longer stems and if started early it will come into bloom in good time.

Our Bertram Lippincott nearly all turned out to be Daybreak, but the few that are true have a very pretty color. This is a sport from Daybreak.

Morning Glory is giving satisfaction on most places and a very pretty thing it is.

Olympia has made only fair blooms with us until lately, but now it is making fine blooms on long, strong, wiry stems. We like the color much better than Mrs. Bradt, but it will have to round into form earlier in order to displace that variety. Those who saw it at Mr. May's place last year say it can be done.

Peru is making grand pure white blooms on long, strong stems, but up to Dec. 15 the blooms would not open out well. This will also make a good one if it gets into form a month earlier.

If you fail to have success with a new variety, don't be too quick in pitching it out, but rather try to discover its real wants and treat accordingly. All these varieties are profitable if grown properly.

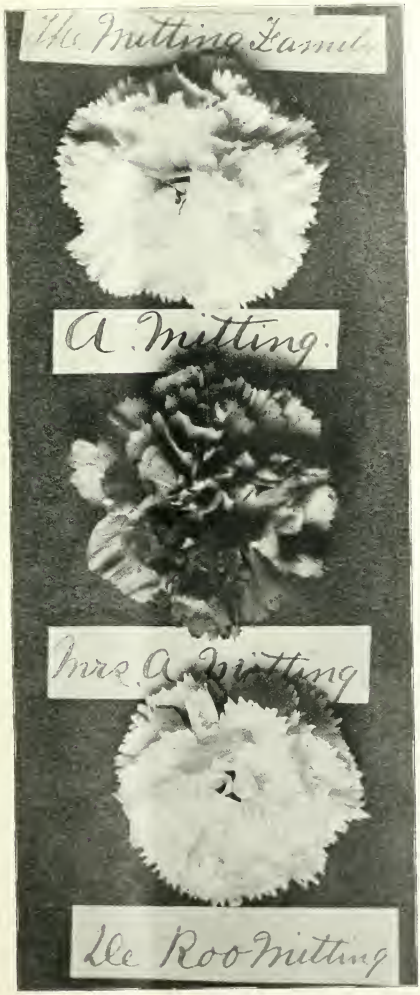
CARNATION DOROTHY.

This new pink carnation is a seedling raised by E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind. The color is similar to that of Scott, the flowers large and symmetrical and built out nicely in the center, and very fragrant. The stems average 2½ to 3 feet. It is said to be of very easy culture, wonderfully prolific and has never been affected with disease of any sort. Experts who have seen it growing pronounce it a decided acquisition.



Three New Carnations.

THREE NEW CARNATIONS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of three new carnations that are being sent out this season by the Morris Floral Co., Morris, Ill. They have been tested three years but no blooms have yet been exhibited. Mr. Mitting says he prefers to have his customers test them for themselves, merely pledging the honor of the Morris Floral Co., that they are exactly as represented. Following are his descriptions:

A. Mitting is a clear, light cream with no markings. A seedling of F. Dorner & Sons Co. It has the habit of Mary Wood, one of its parents. Bloom 3½ inches, good stem and calyx. Free bloomer.

Mrs. A. Mitting is a clear pink of a very pretty shade. A seedling from G. H. Crane. Same habit as Crane. Bloom 3¼ inches. Free.

De Roo Mitting is a snow white. The best habit of all the carnations we grow. A continuous bloomer. Flower 2¾ inches, on long, stout stems. Far ahead of any other white we ever grew.

NEW CARNATIONS.

Registered with the American Carnation Society.

By Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind.: "Hoosier Maid." Color pure white, medium to large size, two and one-half to three inches in diameter, very strong grower, with long heavy stem, strong calyx and has never shown disease of any kind. Daybreak type.

By William Hoffman, Pawtucket, R. I.: "The Challenger." Color clear bright scarlet, three to three and one-half inches in diameter, on strong, stiff stems and very prolific. Plant compact, rugged grower, producing cuttings freely, which root easily. "Twentieth Century." Color bright light pink, unlike any other pink carnation, three and one-half to four inches in diameter, stiff stems and very free blooming; flower very full and deeply fringed.

MOISTURE IN CARNATION HOUSES.

We hear a great deal about temperature and ventilation, but the important question of the amount of moisture that should be maintained in a carnation house is rarely referred to with any definiteness, though all recognize its great importance. All good growers have through years of experience and observation become able to tell at once on entering a house whether temperature and moisture are right. I have known men who could tell the temperature so closely that it would not be worth while to verify it by looking at the thermometer. But all do not have this quality of "feeling" developed to this high degree. Otherwise we would have no use for thermometers. To tell whether the air of a house carries the right degree of moisture is more difficult than to make a close guess at the temperature. And then decisions regarding the proper degrees of moisture often have to be left to employes. For these reasons the hygrometer or moisture gauge is an invaluable instrument, and we have found it quite as important as the thermometer.

The hygrometer registers the amount of moisture in the air just as accurately as the thermometer does the temperature. I have noticed a distinct improvement in our stock since we began to use them and begin to believe that in the past we have overlooked an instrument that should have been of the very greatest value to us. When we feel that the amount of moisture in the air is right we note the degree indicated by the hygrometer and then instruct employes that the moisture must be so regulated that the instrument will vary but little from that degree.

I am inclined to think that with the help of this instrument in securing regularity and exactitude as to moisture in the air we can almost entirely do away with the conditions that result in red spider and fungous diseases of the carnation. The matter is certainly one that is worthy of careful study.

OUR TITLE PAGE.

On our title page appears an engraving from a photograph of the youngest son of Mr. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., holding in his hand a bunch of Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson carnations. It is certainly a very attractive picture and suggests that while we hold fast to the best that we now have in carnations, we must still look forward to greater progress. What will the twentieth century bring forth? What will the best in carnations be like when that boy has reached his father's age? If he has inherited his father's talent as a hybridizer he may be an important factor in the development of the carnation during the century that has just dawned.

TWO SCARLET CARNATIONS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of Adonis, the scarlet carnation originated by Mr. R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the stock of which he recently sold for a consideration said to exceed $5,000.

New Scarlet Carnation Adonis.

We also publish an engraving of Estelle, a scarlet introduced by Mr. Witterstaetter last year, and which a Chicago grower says is with him by all odds the best scarlet he has ever had on the place. He adds that if Adonis beats Estelle it must be a wonder.

If there is anything more you want to know about the carnation tell us what it is and we will get the information for you if obtainable.

A SUCCESSION OF PLANTS TO KEEP GREENHOUSE BENCHES FULL.

By John Reardon.

[Read before the Chicago Florists' Club, Jan. 4.]

The gentleman that introduced this subject must have had in mind the days of thirty years ago, when it meant something to have a succession of plants to keep greenhouse benches full.

The practice of late years has been to plant permanently. I am glad to see some of the good old plants coming to the front again. In a paper of this kind it is impossible to name all the plants that are required by a florist to round out his year's work. Our trade papers cover the ground accurately and fully.

The up-to-date gardener must anticipate six months ahead what he will keep his benches full with and whether he will raise his plants from seed or cuttings. The first of October ought to find all available space occupied. The chrysanthemum house will be the first empty and what a wreck you quickly make here. I pity the florist that has not made provisions to fill this house. It may be that the florist who has the material to fill the empty benches is not always the one in most need of the money. This may sound funny but it's true. (Gentlemen, kindly pardon me if I don't hew closely to the lines of my subject.)

There is a difference of two months or more between the early and late chrysanthemums; it requires some knowledge of your varieties to plant the house right. On the south bench plant the early varieties and if possible commence cutting at the vast end of the other benches. By so doing you never have much of the benches empty at any time and your chrysanthemums don't throw any shade on the plants you fill up with. For a succession of plants I would suggest primroses, cinerarias, Roman hyacinths, paper white narcissus, azaleas of early varieties, stevia, heath, and if possible, bouvardia, cyclamen, begonias, and poinsettias. Wholesale growers fill up with Liliums longiflorum and Harrisii for their winter and especially for their Easter trade.

As you dispose of your stock have something always to take its place. Christmas trade has left us with some empty space. Bring in tulips and Dutch hyacinths and Von Sion narcissus. Keep a sharp lookout now for what you want for spring bedding plants. The propagating bench must be kept busy. Keep up the succession with lilies, azaleas, Aztilbe japonica, calceolarias, acacias, heaths, rhododendrons, genistas, hyacinths, tulips, hydrangeas, hybrid perpetual and Crimson Rambler roses and fuchsias. These are the plants you want for Easter trade.

The 1st of March is a very busy time for the gardener, sowing seed, propagating and repotting. Keep the greenhouse benches full with geraniums, cannas and the thousand other plants that go to make up a florist's stock for his spring and summer trade. Don't forget you may want to plant the chrysanthemum house again; have plenty of stock. Keep the houses looking as well as possible through the summer. This can be done with gloxinias, gesneras, achimines, Meyenia erecta, Rex begonias, and fancy caladiums.

I said I was glad to see the plant trade reviving again. When I see the heather brought down from the mountain after a sleep of twenty years can you wonder that the younger gardeners do not know how to treat Old Rip. I do believe there is a good business awaiting the man that will go into this feature of the plant trade near Chicago. What grower around here has made as much money at Christmas time as the Chicago retail florists sent east for their plant trade?

It may not be out of place for me to mention a few good old plants coming to the front again. Mahernia odorata, Euphorbia jacquiniaeflora, chorizema, Poinsettia pulcherrima. The epaeris and ericas, known as heath, are grand plants and are as easy to propagate as carnations and can be had in bloom from Christmas to Easter. Bouvardias, jasmines and camellias. The azalea always held its own but how maltreated it is in most florists' hands to-day. I have often thought and wished that the source of supply of this plant was cut off for a few years in order that florists would appreciate and take better care of this, the grandest of all our spring flowering plants.

In conclusion I may say if you don't grow chrysanthemums, grow the list of plants I herewith present to you, grow plenty of them and you will always have plenty of stock to keep your greenhouse benches full.

QUEEN LOUISE.

Mr. J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., has issued a 12-page pamphlet descriptive of his new white carnation, Queen Louise, and it is illustrated by twenty engravings from photographs of a bench of this variety taken every two weeks during the months of February, March, April, May, June, October, November and December.

The Idea is certainly a good one, as it is pretty nearly as useful in forming an opinion of the variety as would be frequent visits to his establishment during the season. We extend our congratulations to Mr. Dillon on his new departure.

It's a good thing.

ROSE NOTES.

Roses in Solid Beds.

The opinion is general among growers that roses will do the best and are most profitable on raised benches, yet it is a very expensive method when we consider the cost of refilling and replanting the benches each year, especially on a large place, and the money invested in benches and keeping them in repair. There is the work and expense connected with the growing of the young stock and the valuable room the plants occupy till planting time. Even then we have to wait another two or three months before we begin to receive any reward for our trouble and patience. Of course, all this is a necessity in our business and if we are successful in growing and selling there is still a profit.

Some growers have, however, tried to do away with the above named expense and have adopted the old solid bed. As the result of persistent effort and close study they claim to have adapted their culture to the requirements of the solid bed, that they get just as many flowers from it as from the raised bench, and the flowers of better average quality. They would not think of returning to the "old" raised bench method.

The beds are filled to a depth of 18 to 24 inches with good rich soil, such as we use on our benches. No drainage whatever is placed underneath. The boards along the sides would be 1½ or 2 inches thick and of good quality, held together by wires or small pipes across the beds, run through the side boards and fastened on the outside. This makes a substantial solid bed.

For planting, grafted roses are much preferred. They are planted from 20 to 24 inches in the row and 15 to 18 inches between rows. A basin is left around each plant for water and the amount of water is gradually increased as the plants grow. It is surprising the size the plants will have in two or three months. The watering will have to be watched very closely, always allowing the soil to get well on the dry side before watering again. Use a trowel to examine the soil, water well, and try to do it on a sunny day.

By careful pinching of the buds the cut can be so regulated that there will never be either an off crop or a full crop. One of the main requirements is to always keep the plants in a growing condition. This can be done with plants in solid beds as well as with those on benches. In May and June when the roses from plants on benches are getting pretty small, the solid bed still gives us good long stemmed flowers.

When the blooms are so plentiful that they cannot all be disposed of, then it is best to leave the wood on the plant and pinch out the bud. In this way the plants gain new strength and vigor. In July and August they are given a short rest to ripen the growth, after which some of the surplus wood is cut out, the bed given a good mulching, the roses tied down and the bed given a heavy watering. They will start about the same as dormant roses, but will come much faster. The first crop coming rather early in the season when flowers are not yet in much demand the blooms are not all allowed to develop, about half of the buds being pinched off. In this way the plants are kept in a growing condition and the cut of flowers is more evenly distributed.

The culture is the same as during the first year. As the plants get stronger the mulching is renewed oftener and the beds are given a little liquid manure in connection with the general watering. How long roses may, under good treatment, be left in this solid bed before renewing I am unable to say. I have seen beds that had been planted for six years and they were in splendid condition. Many growers may have objection to this way of growing, yet there are places where 50,000 to 75,000 feet of glass are devoted to roses and nothing but solid beds used. And the quality of flowers they send to market during the whole year show that they are not behind the times.

Beauties are not so well adapted for solid beds as they will grow too much, though they bring very large flowers.

OBITUARY.

Fred S. Walz.

Friedrich Sylvian Walz, the well-known florist of Cincinnati, O., died Jan. 4th of paralysis. He had a slight stroke Dec. 29th and on the 31st came a second one that left him unconscious, in which condition he remained till his death.

Mr. Walz was well known as a successful hybridizer as well as a skilled florist. Among chrysanthemums that originated with him were The Queen, white; Harry Sunderbruch, yellow; Mrs. Potter Palmer, pink; Bettie Fleischman, pink, and many others. He also raised quite a number of new carnations.

Mr. Walz was born on the Isle of Bourbon, Indian Ocean, where his father was manager of a large coffee plantation, in 1851, and was therefore 49 years of age at the time of his death. When he was 12 years old he went to Switzerland and two years later emigrated to America and started in the florists' business in Cincinnati with his father. The business prospered and eventually came into the sole possession of the subject of this sketch, who has conducted it successfully for many years. The business will be continued by the oldest son, Fred A. Walz, who is now foreman at the Eden Park greenhouses, but who until about a year ago was with his father. There were five children in all, two boys and three girls.

Mr. Walz has a brother (Lee Walz) in Chicago, a sister, also in that city, and another sister (Mrs. Aug. Shenkel) in Denver. He was a member of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, of the A. O. U. W. and the I. O. O. F.

The funeral was very largely attended, the number being estimated at 2,000. The florists were largely represented, many coming from towns and cities at a distance. One of the lodges of which he was a member attended in a body accompanied by a brass band that rendered an impressive funeral march. The floral emblems were numerous and elaborate and the great number of people who paid their last respects to the deceased showed the general esteem and respect in which he was held.

Richmond, Ind.—The firm of Beach & Chessman has been dissolved. F. W. Beach retiring. The interest of the latter has been purchased by L. H. Schepman and the new firm name will be Chessman & Schepman. The new firm has assumed all the liabilities of the old. Mr. Beach, in a characteristic card in which he bespeaks for the new firm all the patronage accorded the old, says that after a thirty days' rest he will be open to any old thing from president of a railroad to cashier of a bank.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Verbenas.

There are a few seeds that will soon want sowing. One of these is verbenas. Many are yet grown from cuttings, and time was when the seed saved and sold produced rubbish or at least they all came either a dirty white or a washed-out blue. But nowadays seed is sold by our reputable seed houses which will produce most pleasing varieties and as fine and distinct in color as the named kinds. I suppose there is scarcely a bed of verbenas planted in one variety of color anywhere now so the seedlings are just as good and as for harmony or blending of colors varieties of one species can be trusted to please the eye.

There is one great advantage in the plants raised from seed. They are sure to grow, and we all remember that too often the propagated plants did not grow. Sow thinly and after the seedlings are up keep in the full light, and after making a character leaf pot off into 2-inch pots or into a flat an inch apart and later into a 2-inch pot. If these young plants are kept growing in a temperature of 50 degrees at night you will be able to get one cutting from them. There is no place suits the verbenas after the middle of April so well as a mild hotbed. The only trouble is that they grow very freely and root through the pot into the plunging material, and when growing so freely flowering is retarded. So please to remember that during their time in the frame they want just lifting up sufficiently to break off any roots they have made into the soil of the bed.

Petunias.

The end of the month is time enough to sow petunias. Get the finest strain you can and buy only what is sold for double varieties. There will be 60 per cent come single. So many ask for double varieties that you never have enough, not that the double flowers make any finer bed, in fact I think the single flowers make the best display, but the double flowers look so much finer on the young plants and you get your orders for them.

Petunia seed is most minute but has lots of vitality. They want no covering, the seed pressed into the moist soil is enough. I have often said and believe that sowing the finer seeds and their care till they are large enough to handle requires the most skill and care of any of our garden operations. You can put most anybody to putting in cuttings after a few lessons, but you would hesitate very much to give anybody but the most careful and experienced hands the job of sowing the finer seeds. An hour of bright sunshine or allowing the soil to become dry may lose you all your labor and expense.

Centaureas.

We do not raise Centaurea candidissima any more, and you rarely see it anywhere, but we do yet grow C. gymnocarpa and when people ask us for "Dusty miller" that is generally what they mean. It is very easily raised from seed which should be sown at the end of this month. When once up and in pots it wants to be quite cool, for it is almost a hardy plant, and when grown cool and its roots slightly cramped for room it has a better color and the plants are more useful than those sown in a hotbed, where with rich soil they are likely to grow soft and wilt badly when put into a vase or flower bed.

Kentias.

Some kentia seed is arriving just now, and if you are receiving any remember that you should never open the package unless you are ready to put the seeds at once into the soil or material that you use for the purpose. To let them lay around the shed several days exposed to the air is fatal and doubtless many times the seedsman has been blamed for sending worthless palm seed when it was our own fault. You can sow quite thickly either in flats or 6 or 7-inch pots, or, as the large operators do, on the benches. Cover the seeds a quarter to half an inch and keep uniformly moist but not saturated. Some place the flats on the ground with the heat above the seeds, but we don't all have that convenience and if the flats are placed where they will get a little bottom heat so much the better.

Cannas.

It is a good plan about now to look over your canna roots and see that they are keeping all right. They are a most important item with all plant men nowadays and no risk of losing them should be run. If resting on the earth bottom of a house they will start to grow let the ground be apparently ever so dry, and here is where a move will much benefit them. If they are under a drip from a bench they will rot and must be moved away. Beneath a rose or carnation bench or boards just to keep them off the ground is a good place, for up till April 1st you don't water your benches heavy enough to cause much drip.

We don't usually start cannas till towards the end of March, but if you are short of any variety you might just as well be increasing them through the winter. If put on a bench and some soil placed around the clumps they will make a lot of growths every one of which can be taken off and put in the propagating bench or potted and given a good warm house till they make a start in the soil.

Gladiolus.

I don't know whether you ever found it pay to force gladiolus in your carnation houses, or perhaps rose houses. The latter is best, because the carnation house is rather cool; still in that they are in two months before you can get them from outside. They are rather slow to start and before they take up much room either with their top growths or roots the season is so advanced that they will do no harm.

I am sorry to say that we have had fine gladiolus flowers in the month of May from the carnation houses, and they did not sell here, but we saw them quoted at a good price in larger cities. They force easily and do not want to be buried in the soil of the benches, just pressed into the surface of the bed is sufficient. As they require no care beyond what the bed would ordinarily get, if they sell for a good price they must yield a profit.

PHILADELPHIA.

New Year's business in cut flowers was very brisk indeed. The retail stores were prepared and did an immense business under favorable conditions. Wholesale prices fell immediately after Christmas, except in a few isolated cases but retail prices were fairly well maintained until after New Year's. The result must have been very satisfactory to the retailers, the volume of business done on that day comparing favorably with Thanksgiving, with a much larger margin of profit.

The weather for the past two weeks has been extraordinarily fine, so fine that our florists can hardly pray for any better weather in the holidays to come. The day before Christmas was bright and warm, bringing quantities of buds into bloom just in time. Ever since we have had bright days and cold nights, keeping the stock in the pink of condition.

Judging by the trade reports Philadelphia has been more fortunate than either New York or Chicago in her cut flower market conditions. Here the stock was fresher and of as good or better quality than in the past; while in New York there was much poor, and in Chicago much pickled stock.

It is a joyful and rather surprising fact that there has been no lull in business either in the holidays or since New Year's. As the season is not a particularly long one, if we don't get dull pretty soon we won't get dull before Lent.

The midwinter ball season is well under way. Mr. Benedick's on Dec. 26th, Mr. Wood's on the 29th, Mr. Drexel's (a great affair) on Jan. 1st, and the Provost's on the 3d. This week we expect two more, Mrs. Wheeler's on the 8th and the First Assembly on the 11th. Now these balls don't matter much to most of us excepting that the more gayety the better. Of course there are some dinners preceding the dances and a few bouquets are sent, not many, flowers get crushed at a big ball.

Curiously enough, the balls themselves matter to just one florist, only one. All our retailers can decorate a parlor or a church, a few can do Houston Hall, the Natatorium or the Mercantile Club, but only one (Graham) can do the big affairs at Horticultural Hall or the Academy of Music. This may seem strange to the uninitiated, so a word of explanation may not be out of place. When a large ball is to be given the first object is to secure one person, a skilled decorator, who will take the entire contract, furnish all trees, plants, flowers, tapestries, greens, millinery, electric and other lights, everything.

This decorator is always expected to produce novel and striking effects and he generally has to put one or two extra conversation rooms in our own Horticultural Hall or put on a new ceiling or shorten the dancing floor. The result involves so much worry and requires such vast quantities of foreign material and outside skilled labor that it is little wonder our retailers do not care to compete with our great decorator.

For Graham this must be a very profitable field under existing conditions for our ball givers are certainly able to pay for what they want. PHIL.

BALTIMORE.

Various Items.

The Christmas season and trade were a success. The weather was superb, the air, clear, crisp and sparkling, just cool enough to give zest to shopping, and not too cold for the delivery of plants and flowers without danger of freezing. Both the storekeepers and the market people did well, and there has rarely been a season where stock was more completely exhausted or more general satisfaction expressed with the results secured.

A year ago popular taste seemed to incline to plants rather than cut flowers for presents and decorations. This year the pendulum swung back and cut flowers were most in favor. Of plants, the azalea had the call. Baskets of plants were not much in vogue, and the millinery displays of lace and ribbon were not so much in evidence as in former years.

The supply of flowers was about the average. Most varieties were abundant enough for all purposes. If there was any scarcity it was in Beauties and violets. The local production of the former was not sufficient for the requirements and retailers had to secure shipments from Philadelphia and New York, paying well for them, too! The retail price of violets, which ranged about $3, was prohibitive to many intending customers, and more than one would-be purchaser compromised on a $3 box of confectionery as making more show and giving more palpable sweetness than the flower.

No extraordinary efforts at window decoration were noticed, though all the stores were neatly and appropriately dressed. Holly was the predominating material. On Charles street John Cook's window was festooned in holly, with sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri in fruit, with pandanus and dracaenas, palms and ferns, orchids and primroses.

Next door, William J. Halliday's windows were brilliant, banked with fine poinsettias, graceful ferns and vines, the ever present holly, ericas, and many cypripediums. Mr. H. had a fine stock of Queen of Edgely.

Down the street, the lower store of S. Feast & Sons was adorned with great baskets of poinsettias, ferns, palms and many hanging vases with drooping sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri in abundant fruit. At their new store the handsome show window was full of seasonable plants and flowers, with festoons and wreathing of holly and a great vase of ericas.

Halliday Bros. on Charles street had one window filled with cypripediums and the other with notably fine dracaenas and pandanus, holly and white hyacinths being used as accessories. In their Baltimore street store the window was gracefully decorated with Boston ferns, Pandanus Veitchii, dracaenas of sorts, etc., etc.

James Pentland's window was given up to ferns, palms, etc. On Lexington street E. A. Seidewitz made an effective display of ferns, cyclamens, American Beauties, holly, etc.

We had on Dec. 31 a copious rain, coming down gently but continuously for several hours. It was much needed, as the springs and water courses were very low, so low, indeed, that some growers found it difficult to secure enough water for daily use.

Trade continues brisk. There are many festivities and gatherings tonight to usher in the new year and the new century and all day flowers have been in fair request. Good roses are scarce; of lower grades and of carnations there appears an ample supply.

The cultivation of the violet, commercially, in this locality, does not seem to be as successful as in former years. A short time ago our great triumvirate of growers was John G. Rider, Peter C. Erdman and Enoch Merritt. The first named, who was on the top round of the ladder in quantity and quality of his products, and who last year added several hundred sash to his equipment, sends to market, nevertheless, many less flowers than formerly; the Erdman Bros. have given up the culture absolutely, and Mr. Merritt says of his 350 sash many do not produce any flowers at all, and on New Year's eve he brought in 1,700, when, we suppose, he should have had something like 17,000. This culture, indeed, as most branches of commercial floriculture, is like the Christian walk—it is a perpetual warfare, with fears within and foes without. If it is not the spot it is the black fly, and if it is neither of these it is something else in the way of insect or mould or mildew, just as bad. It is possible there is a decline in the vigor of plants long in cultivation, and divided again and again in propagation, or perhaps less careful methods of culture prevail, but the fact stands up stern and apparent that the output and quality are greatly reduced now compared with the past.

The calla is another plant which seems destined to decline under the attack of disease, and we hear one of the largest growers near this city has practically lost his whole stock by rot.

Peter C. Erdman, long regarded as one of the most skillful of our carnation growers, voices the general sentiment when he says the great need of the trade is still a first-class market white. On his place old Lizzie McGowan still stands at the head of commercial sorts for productiveness, fine flowers and good health, but it has faults known of all men. White Cloud gives some magnificent blooms, but many flowers are distorted, the calyx bursts or the flower fails to open, and the variety will be discarded. Flora Hill does better, the flowers being large and the bloom continuous, whilst on his place Mary Wood is a perfect beauty in shape, pure white color and freedom of bloom.

One of the oldest gardeners here is Obadiah Kemp, now 86 years of age, but still able to discourse of flowers and plants and with interesting reminiscences of local affairs horticultural. He is an Englishman by birth, who came to this country about 1842, and bought land in the suburbs which is now selling at prices wonderfully multiplied over what it cost, thus securing him provision for comfort and ease in his declining years.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Carnations from a Store View-Point.

Well and fondly, too, do we remember the old days when long stemmed carnations were the exception in the market. We might say the grower practiced then what might be called dis-flowering as much as he does dis-budding to-day, and yet, say fifteen years ago, the carnation held a higher place in floral art than it does to-day. In those days a carnation luncheon, tea, or ball decoration was a common occurrence in the highest society; bouquets and baskets of carnations were considered the prettiest of all floral favors, now they are seldom seen. Of course, it was necessary to introduce outlets for short stemmed flowers in those times, and many of the creations have never been equaled. To-day the carnation is expected to sell itself. Art for the time has given way to science. In the old days the ingenuity and ability of the floral artist overshadowed the poverty of material; in the present days the rich gorgeousness of material smothers or dwarfs the ideas of the store men to a lamentable degree. Beauty of flower never diminishes in the hand of the artist. No matter how fine the grower may produce carnations, the retailer can add to their value and should be able to do so, though in justice to them we must admit his recompense may be small.

The prices of carnation flowers have steadily increased. Last Christmas and New Year's unprecedented and entirely unreasonable prices were asked and demanded by grower or agent. There may be some short-lived glory, some momentary exultant gulp of satisfaction enjoyed by grower and wholesaler in getting or exacting the highest possible price, but there is a vast amount of harm in the aftermath. 'Tis our place to talk upon the subject from behind the retail counter, which is after all the most important factor in the business.

We go out in the morning to buy our stock and get from the different sources as many carnations as the day's business justifies. It may be hundreds, it may be thousands. And for them we pay prices ranging from 3 to 10 cents. We have not had time to put them in water before the door opens and a millionaire's wife asks you: "What have you got that will keep and is inexpensive?" You recommend carnations, and your lowest prices are from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. Suppose she takes any of them, there is always the unthinking, imperative request for plenty of greens to accompany them. You pay 25 cents for a bunch of geranium, $1 per hundred for adiantum, an equivalent for smilax or asparagus; you cannot charge for the greens, and when you stop to figure out the expenses from putting the flowers in a box until they are delivered to her ladyship you might have made a few cents and you might have lost them; the matter is in doubt till your stock is all sold.

A poor man comes in, he wants to send some girl a few flowers, he naturally imagines carnations are cheaper and will last longer, your conscience smites you and you either sell at cost price or charge at a meager rate of profit, and if, as is usual, you put in lots of greens to make a big showing, you have sold at a loss. The "shopper," man or woman it may be, visits you, marks over your stock, sneers at it, tells you So and So sells the same kind and quality for almost half what you have asked, and if you really preserve your patience and make a sale, and after they have selected your finest blooms, broken off two or three others, and chewed down your price, make out a profit, you deserve to be known. There is the occasional telephone order, or selection made by some wealthy person when price is not considered because it is a charge order; these latter are the merciful elements which lighten the scales of your business despair.

Every retailer, every one who buys flowers for his store, will agree with us when we say carnations are too high-priced, and the endeavor to put them on the level of importance with the rose can only result in regrets. That wonderful strides have been made in their cultivation, that the carnations of to-day are beautiful evidences of the highest intelligence, that they are, at least some of them, magnificent, there is no denying; but very few of them are worth what is charged for them at wholesale. Most retailers will pay an exorbitant price for a bunch of this or that merely to put them in their windows to let their customers see they handle the best, it pays them to have them in their window, but it injures them to ask anything more than they paid for them; these investments should not be considered as an indication of the value of the flower.

We are not advocating cheapness in flowers when denouncing high prices, there is a medium, let live, honest, height upon which all may walk. A business, like a good character, can seldom be built up on an unthinking or unreasonable policy, and the flower business, which is perhaps the most changeable, the most unreasonable of all, injures itself by its severe attitude towards that upon which it lives. It may be true, as some growers assert, that the cost of production of some varieties demand high prices, if so, those varieties have no long future before them.

At present we see three great grades of carnations on the market—the very poor, which nobody wants; the medium, which all use; the finest quality, which all admire, but few can pay for. The man who cultivates the first ekes out a wretched life; he who grows the second may be happier at the year's end than he who labors incessantly to produce the last. There is to-day, there has been for the past year or two an unsatisfied demand for reasonable sized carnations at a fair price, and the man who succeeds in producing and disseminating a variety that will accomplish as much as Grace Wilder or William Scott will do more for floriculture than he who brings forth the largest and fanciest of all!

In considering carnations from the retailers' counter, we must judge them as we see and have experience with them. In the first place, a long name is but a millstone upon any flower; the sure abbreviation of that name in many cases entirely obliterates the object of the introducer. Not one customer in fifty will ask the name of any carnation you offer, and if told very few remember. The shorter and more attractive the name the better for the flower's future. There are some poor varieties of carnations on the market today. Perhaps the carnation that "goes to sleep," as the shriveling up habit is generally termed, is the greatest enemy to the future of carnation popularity. When a customer, good or bad, comes into your store and buys carnations and pays a high price for them on the supposition that they are even then cheap because of their expected lasting quality, there is a sad disappointment on the morrow, and the truth is too often too vividly plain in your own ice-box that both you and your customer are victims.

There are three or four possible causes for the early closing of carnations. Lack of knowledge or consideration for what is required to produce long keeping stock, improper or too long a storage before shipping. It is true that a few varieties are particularly addicted to this weakness, but we have often found a vast difference in the keeping quality of the same variety from different growers. There is much to be discovered about the best method of keeping carnations. In the majority of stores it is impossible to keep them for a reasonable length of time and consequently much loss is a sure result of any special display. It appears to us that the carnation society would do well to offer premiums for the best lasters in each color; this might be conducive to more consideration for that very important matter. The bursting calyx or weak stem are very little use on the retailer's counter; the rubber band and the wire are adjuncts of the past.

We see many beautiful kinds on the market today which have a tendency to hang their heads, and whilst this weakness disqualifies them for particular vase work, yet the hand of a good "maker-up" can easily remedy the fault. This brings us into the artist's department, where we can see how carnations can be put up to show to best advantage and more of them sold in exclusive designs, giving much more satisfaction to all concerned. In the first place, let us state that the ideal salesman of today is the best bluffer, and the best artist the most retiring of individuals; both may be essential to a business success. The percentage of each largely depends on the quality of your trade. Artists in the florists' stores of today are sadly in the minority, as compared to the clerks or salesmen, and yet there is no distinction, no just recognition; 'tis only the few who dream of the beauty that is possible and endeavor against overwhelming odds to raise the florists' business a little higher than that of general merchandise. The most successful florists have not built their reputations upon the rock of cheapness; the rock was rather artistic ability, the cement used might have been reasonable price, but quality of flower and make up are the great pillars he depends on for the material superstructures. Any one may sell the material for a boutonniere or corsage bouquet, but not every one can arrange them properly.

That's why we must claim a better recognition for the artistic element in our business and separate the artist's counter far away from the "cheap John" cut flower bargain stand. The possibilities in decorative art with carnations as the sole or principal material are unlimited; they are fit for almost every occasion, and we hope to see the day when they will be used more generally and exclusively in design work. A wreath of white carnations could be made to equal if not exceed in beauty a wreath of any other flower, and what is grander than a handsome basket of carnations? The garland on the wall, the curtain on the window, the loose panel cluster, the hanging shower basket, the parlor vase, the dining table, the debutante's bunch, the ball bouquet, the dude's boutonniere —yes, the hundred and one forms recognized and unknown to decorators.

The praises of the debutantes of fifteen years ago come back to us as we write of the dainty round bunches of Grace Wilders with cluster of yellow Marguerites at the bow side; they were made not to damage glove nor dress, and during the dance were hung on the arm by a loop of ribbon.

But the artist brings us back to his workbench again to tell us that there are several tones of color still wanting and others lacking strength. He sighs for the old Buttercups and wants to know about the yellows; he expatiates over the lighter self colors and doubts the wisdom of deviating into stripes; he loves the stiff stem for the tall vase but he also is charmed by many a beauty that modestly hangs its head. A few buds, a cluster of their own foliage, is of more value to him than all the dull black green asparagus or trembling adiantum in your greenhouse; he stops to ask why don't carnationists grade their flowers the same as rosarians? Why, oh, why, are they stripped of every bud or leaf of their own? The future will cast an occasional glimmer back on the shadow of the past, and the present derive its best from the two. Hail to the carnation! May it always grow in beauty; may it always be where needed.

IVERA.

NEW YORK.

We have heard of no complaints in this section in regards to Christmas trade except from the wholesalers. It appears that the growers have a way of haunting the wholesale district at Christmas time, comparing notes and issuing fully loaded insinuations. The man who produces a little extra fine stock knows how to extract blood from a stone, the poor or medium grower suffers to feed the rapacity of the tip top. Our advice is, get on top with cabbage if you cannot with roses or violets, etc., etc.

It is pleasing to record that the volume of trade is yearly increasing. Prices were high, very high, and when the grumbling is simmered down money was made, and plenty of it, by almost every one in every branch of the trade. The plantsmen, at least some of them, will know better next time and have more and better stock to supply the enormous demand. Records were broken in plant sales, and all the good grades of cut flowers were sold at the same old Christmas price.

Men dealing in greens report splendid trade, and as we have said before, all are satisfied except the element which is unconsciously doing its best to kill the cut flower trade. Bulbous flowers are late, because, as one of the largest growers informs us, the grower's experiences with early forced bulbs have made him grow sensible. Last year valley went a-begging at any price; this year it brought the unprecedented price of 4, 6, yes, even 8 cents, and it will maintain a good price for the next two weeks. Trumpets have appeared, but there will be no good tulips for a few weeks. Lilac, white and lavender, pink sweet peas, quince and Forsythia blossoms and many other tit-bits are on the market. The general run of cut flowers are very averagy, and the demand, barring the usual lull after Christmas and New Year's, promises to be fairly good.

Some very fine specimens of the new pink rose Robert Scott were recently seen among other novelties at the store of Thomas Young, Jr. This rose shows up finely; we would like to see it on the market. Talking of roses, the great rose show of the American Rose Society will be held in the finest rooms in this city, the ball and banquet rooms of the Waldorf-Astoria, in March. Schedules can be had from Leonard Barron, 136 Liberty street. Get ready, all of you, with your pets and gems for this great event and let us have an ideal show. Exhibit one bloom if you cannot a hundred; do something for your country and the rose.

We regret to record the sudden and untimely death of Miss Mildred Morris, daughter of the late J. M. Hodgson and wife of one of New York's popular florists. She had been ill for some time and passed away on New Year's Day. The funeral took place on Thursday from the home on Park avenue, many of the craft attending. The sympathies of all are given to Dick and his three little sons.

The bowling fraternity started well for the first game in the new year.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The new year was ushered in with the best trade for some years. Stock of all kinds was scarce and the prices remained about the same as last reported. The market, too, has been very favorable for the growers and retailers.

The West End florists expect a large trade for January, as this is the month for all kinds of festivities. A number of them have booked large orders for weddings, balls and receptions.

The downtown florists report good counter trade since the holidays, also orders for funeral designs.

The North and South End florists claim that business has kept up nicely since the great rush of the holidays. The plant trade has also been better than for some years.

The most noticeable feature in the recent holiday trade was the marked increase in the demand for the best quality of carnations, and there is no question as to this flower gaining in public favor every day. The local carnation growers fully realize this question and the meeting of our club this week will, no doubt, show the improvement they have made. The essay by Dr. Halstedt on "New Carnations" will be of great importance to the growers.

Stock for the past week not overplentiful, and yet not scarce, and prices not so high. In roses, American Beauties are fine. Those from Ammann, Herzog and Heinl were among the best, and from $3 to $9 per dozen is obtained for the first grade. Meteors are coming better and a fine lot from J. F. Wilcox sold well. Fine Maids and Brides are also coming in from Vesey, Kuhl, Heinl and Wilcox, prices on these ranging from $4 to $6. Poorer stock sold much cheaper.

Carnations are selling well and stock is very fine and the supply equal to the demand. Kloekenkemper, Dunford, Fillmore and the Udes are sending in some very fine blooms every day. Prices the past week ranged from $2 to $5 per 100.

The supply of violets is not equal to the demand. The best Californias bring $1 per 100. Romans and narcissus remain the same as always, $2 and $3 per 100. Smilax is very fine but the demand slow at $12.50.

Various Items.

R. W. Englert, of Chicago, is now in the employ of the Plant Seed Co. Mr. Englert called on the trade in company with Mr. Reese, also late of Chicago and now with the Plant Seed Co.

John M. Hudson, who opened a store at 1212 Olive street a month ago, has closed up. John is dangerously sick at his home, 720 Carpenter place.

C. A. Kuehn has been very busy of late with wire work, and night work has been going on regularly. His shipping trade of florists' supplies has been great of late.

Frank M. Ellis is now located in his new quarters at 1316 Pine street. Frank reports business good since the holidays.

Henry Berning reports an excellent trade in cut flowers and supplies.

The stock and fixtures of The Vale of Cashmere were sold at auction Monday, Jan. 7th, at 2 p. m. Quite a number of florists were in attendance during the sale, which took place at the Odron building.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply has considerably increased during the past week, and though the demand has kept up very well, it has not been strong enough to absorb the larger supply without a weakening in prices. There has, however, been but little decline in the price of really first-class roses, sales of the best being still occasionally made at $8, though a good deal of lower grade stock has suffered. This applies with especial force to carnations, and the fancy sorts have shown weakness, too. White and light colors have been in brisk demand lately, and this has been made sharper by the funeral of Philip D. Armour, which took place Wednesday, and at which an immense quantity of flowers were used.

Shipping grades of tea roses are quoted at $6 to $8 and good seconds at $3 to $4. In carnations, fancies are held at $3 to $5 and commons at $1.50 to $2.50, while some poor stock is sold at as low as 50 to 75 cents. Paper white narcissus and Romans are very abundant and move slowly at $2 to $3 for the best. The call for funeral flowers helped early this week to clean up an accumulation of these, though at low figures, and even then some were unsalable. There seems to be a lot of poor violets in the market that fail to get action and prices on them rule very low, though strictly first-class violets go all right at satisfactory figures. Harrisii are beginning to come in and they sell at $2.50 a dozen.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club Mr. John Reardon read an instructive paper on "A Succession of Plants to Keep the Greenhouse Benches Full," which appears elsewhere in this issue. A paper on "The Trials and Tribulations of Retailers," by Walter Kreitling (at least, his name was attached to it), was read by the secretary. In it the faklr, the "red violet" workers and the crape chaser were pilloried, but in a style somewhat sedate and ponderous for Walter. It sounded a good deal as though Walter's thoughts had been filtered through some substance that eliminated all the effervescence. And Walter is nothing if not effervescent. Try it again, Walter, and don't let anybody blow the foam off.

The officers of the club were made a committee to arrange the details of the annual carnation meeting which will be held Friday, January 18. Introducers of new varieties are requested to send to this meeting blooms of varieties they wish to bring to the attention of growers in this vicinity. These carnation meetings have increased annually in magnitude and importance and are now visited by many florists from other cities.

Mr. James Hartshorne extended an invitation to the club members and the trade in general to visit the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Company at Joliet the same day as the carnation meeting of the club, Friday, January 18. Free tickets will be supplied by the company's representative at the station in Chicago for the Rock Island train leaving the city at 11:45 a. m. that day. The train will arrive at Joliet at 1 p. m. and will leave there on the return trip at 2:30 p. m., reaching Chicago again at 3:45 p. m.

Meeting of Horticultural Society.

At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago held last Tuesday afternoon four applicants were elected to membership and the reports of the secretary-treasurer were read and referred to the auditing committee. Edgar Sanders was appointed a committee of one to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of Nathan M. Freer and that of Philip D. Armour, both having been liberal supporters of the society, as well as strong friends of horticulture in general.

The following officers were re-elected: W. H. Chadwick, Pres.; E. G. Gihlein, 1st Vice-Pres.; H. G. Selfridge, 2d Vice-Pres.; E. Wienhoeber, 3d Vice-Pres.; J. C. Vaughan, O. P. Bassett and G. L. Grant, members of the exeeutive committee for three years. The election of a secretary and treasurer and a board of directors was laid over till next meeting.

Various Items.

Flint Kennicott is laid up with an attack of bronchitis and la grippe.

McClellan & Winterson are now handling rooted carnation cuttings in addition to their other stock. Their new green and red catalogue is mentioned elsewhere.

The bowling team will play a series of games at Anson's alleys next Monday evening.

Anton Then, Frank Felke and C. M. Dickinson will start Thursday on a four day's trip through the carnation district in Indiana.

W. W. Barnard & Co. have just received a car load of tuberose bulbs. Their new florists' seed list has just been issued. Mr. R. R. McGill, of this firm, is around again after a three weeks' tussle with the prevailing la grippe.

We wish to call your attention to the value in our Florists' Manual as recognized by many readers. See their letters that have appeared from time to time in the Review.

THE NATURAL IN LANDSCAPE ART.

The incentive to introduce active, realistic life into landscape effects received its initiation at the time of the laying out of the World's Fair grounds—at least as far as we in the uncouth west are concerned—and the goose and the swan sported with infinite grace on the placid bosom of the lagoons.

Their presence added greatly to the pleasures of all concerned, save to those in charge of the Wooded Island. The geese would persist in scratching up the flower beds and mixing up their fresh-laid eggs with the fruit of Thorpe's Solanum Melongena, thus hybridizing them in a manner heretofore unknown.

But art must not suffer on account of such little idiosyncrasies as these, and in the future active life must go hand in hand with still life. Inventive genius will not stop short at swan and geese, and other animated subjects will be added to the list. In fact, we have a charming example before us in the reproduction here given of "The Natural in Landscape Art." What a charming example it is! Still, with the thermometer hugging the zero mark and coal at $8 a ton, we feel sorry for the kid and think him a goose for being so far away from home without his mittens. Of course, it was summer when the picture was taken, the foliage shows it, and the fact is demonstrated by his manner of scratching a musquito bite on his back.

The artist who introduced him into this sylvan scene as an improved form of animation may have had more in his mind than a hasty glance would disclose. The boy may be intended to represent in his different parts, various denizens of the forest and thus bring to mind that exquisite poem by the Brooklyn Bridge Bard, of which we give a few stanzas:

Two sportive calves
In sweet repose,
Bereft of covering
And of clothes;
A lot of hairs
(Not Belgian bred)
That love to nest
Upon a head.
Two lips to grace
The scenic art,
And for the view
A charm impart;
And as a whole
This image here
Suggests the mild
And timid deer.
Thus simple art,
Unclothed—not hid—
Is well shown here
By this naked kid.

JANE'S BROTHER JOHN.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Meeting of Tarrytown Hort. Society.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Dec. 27, with President Turner in the chair and a large attendance of members. The chief business of the evening was the election of officers and the second annual supper. The following candidates were appointed for the ensuing year: James W. Smith, president; William Scott, vice-president; E. W. Neubrand, treasurer; Thomas Cockburn, secretary; L. A. Martin, press secretary. The executive committee is as follows: M. J. Connellon, Francis Gibson, William Turner, A. A. Taaffe, William F. McCord, D. MacFarlane, A. Fallon and John Eagan. The treasurer's reports were very satisfactory, members of good standing numbering 95, and still gaining every month. The balance at the bank proves that affairs have been well managed, so the prospects of the society are very encouraging for the future. Two new members were elected, Mr. H. H. Waite, Greystone, Yonkers, N. Y., and Mr. John Elliott, Scarborough, N. Y.

A vote of thanks was given to the retiring officers and then the members and guests, numbering 65 in all, adjourned to the Florence Hotel, where the supper committee, Messrs. Neubrand, Smith and Gibson, had an excellent repast prepared. The dining room was beautifully decorated, cut flowers and other material having been donated by several members, and flags of all colors with the initials T. H. S., made for the occasion by Mrs. J. Hennessey, of the Florence Hotel, and donated to the society. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Hennessey for same. As soon as cigars were reached the president asked for a few words from the newly elected officers, who gladly responded. Mr. William Scott was appointed toastmaster for the evening and filled the position in a very able manner. Speeches were asked of the following gentlemen, and many good remarks were heard: J. W. Withers, of American Gardening; Thomas Withers, of Hartford, Conn.; J. I. Donlon, of the FLORISTS' REVIEW; Mr. Butterfield, of the Florists' Exchange; Messrs. Lynch, Gomersall and Saltford, of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society. Messrs. Shore, Grierson and Williamson, representatives of the Westchester County Horticultural Society, had to leave us early to make connection with trains, so we greatly missed the good advice usually given by Mr. John Shore. Some good remarks were also heard from F. R. Pierson, the judges of our last show and the local press. Music and songs were rendered. Mr. John Taaffe, cornet and violin, with songs from Messrs. Whyte, MacFarlane, A. A. Taaffe, Butterfield, Mooney and Martin. A most pleasant and sociable evening was enjoyed by all present.

L. A. MARTIN.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

It was a mixed-up week. Dates, weather, business, prices, ideas—all got mixed except drinks, which florists have heard are too dangerous. The week opened fairly well, from a business point of view, slowed up a bit for the first three days of the new month, year and century, then went out with renewed vigor. However, a departing slap was made at carnations, reducing prices materially upon Saturday upon that commodity alone, but allowing a general clear-up on all lines. But it is an unsettled condition, and while prices are reasonable just now, a general quotation could hardly prove of value. There is a murmur of complaint about collections being a little hard, not only in our business, but in all lines of traffic, and many are inclined to fear a near recurrence of a stringency in the money market.

Various Notes.

Wax Brothers are having a magnificent ice chest made to occupy the site now occupied by the candy counter in their store.

At a recent meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, Warren Ewell was elected president; J. A. Pettigrew, vice-president; Wm. E. Fischer, secretary, and Edward Hatch, treasurer.

Mr. Nicholson started Monday, Jan. 7, on a tour of inspection to extend to Chicago. He is accompanied by Mr. Eugene Dailledouze. J. S. MANTER.

THE pointers on some one page of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, will save you the price of it.

OMAHA.

Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade in Omaha was the same as reported by other western cities—the best in years.

Quality of stock varied considerably. One grower reports a better quality, the next reports stock not so good as last year. Roses and carnations averaged better than usual.

Only a few of the retailers were fortunate in having a stock of flowering plants, the quality of which did not seem to be up to that of last year.

Mr. August Peterson, of Peterson Bros., reports a good trade, although no better than last year, with an increased call for pot plants.

With L. Henderson and A. Donaghue trade was about the same as last year.

S. B. Stewart reports a greatly increased plant sale, and Miss Arnold a slight increase in general trade. B.

LANCASTER, PA.

Christmas Notes.

Christmas trade was such that it should always be a pleasure to give it one thought in the future. One always feels eager to write of prosperity; and yet our business and the people in it are so paradoxical, either from habit or experience, that they are always ready to deny or dispute even the unexpected. There are many ways to look at the business done this Christmas, but those best able to judge admit that it was a record breaker for quantity of plants and flowers sold.

The weather was a friend to the florist. Monday was a gloriously beautiful day. Everyone made fine displays, and the quantity of stock sold must have exceeded any former year by at least 30 per cent.

There seemed to be plenty of all kinds of stock except violets, which were very scarce, which meant high prices; and on that account plants were preferred, or roses, which were very plentiful owing to the bright, clear weather. Carnations were in very good demand with just about enough to go around.

It would be very difficult to say just what plants had the preference, but I would say that Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, arranged in either pans or baskets with ferns, created more attraction than anything else. It sold well, even at the high prices asked for it, and from all accounts it gave favorable satisfaction.

Azaleas sold well; not nearly enough to go around. Rubbers and all kinds of palms ranging from 75 cents to $2 were in good demand.

The supply of primroses, Romans, narcissus, etc., was not overplentiful, but I think there was about enough to go around.

Business has kept up well and the first few days in the new century was far better than expected, making the outlook a very good one for the entire season.

B. Frank Barr.

Wellsville, Ohio.—W. A. Herbert reports trade good and not enough cut flowers to supply the Christmas demand.

Lyons, Kan.—Mrs. H. B. Smith reports a good trade since locating here and that Christmas sales were very satisfactory. Some of her mail is still being addressed to Maroa, Ill., and reforwarded to her. She would like to have her address changed on all mailing lists.

Beardstown, Ill.—Business was not as good up to Christmas as last year, but Christmas day trade was as good as last year—that is, in cut flowers; pot plants not so good. Roses brought from $1 to $1.25 and carnations 40 to 50 cents per doz. F. B.

Galesburg, Ill.—I. L. Pillsbury says: "Christmas trade was larger than last year, the demand being mostly for cut flowers. There was a shortage of carnations, these being in greatest demand, with just about enough roses and chrysanthemums."

Various Notes.

Christmas trade was better than ever this year with prices a little better. Demand for flowering plants is increasing from year to year. Everything was sold out clean except bulbous stuff such as Romans and narcissus. Violets were in great demand, but the supply was very short.

New Year's trade was good, but not what it used to be.

John Monson, manager of the Minneapolis Floral Company, has broken ground for a large addition to an already good sized establishment. He will build six new rose houses, 25 x 160 feet each, one large palm house, 35 x 185, and two violet houses, 11 x 100, which when completed will give him in all about 80,000 feet of glass. Although he did not commence his first range of houses until last August, he soon will have one of the most modern plants in the northwest.

William Donaldson & Co., successors to C. A. Smith Floral Company, are preparing to build two large greenhouses in the spring. L.

NEPHROLEPIS WITTBOLDII.

This new fern is keeping up its record in fine style and is steadily exceeding its early promises of usefulness. It not only makes a superb decorative plant in a very short time and possesses the other desirable characteristics of the Boston fern, but the larger fronds when mature are most excellent to use in funeral bunches in the same way that the cycas leaves are used and the effect is much better as there is far more grace and beauty in the fern fronds than in the cycas leaves.

Wittboldii is certainly a grand thing and we are inclined to agree with Mr. Baldwin that it is "The great fern of the future." We have watched it steadily since it was first discovered and every inspection has increased our good opinion of it.

A PRETTY CALENDAR.

We have received from the Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., a copy of their 1901 calendar, which is a real work of art. It is in several colors and in the picture is seen a twentieth century young lady in a conservatory gathering roses. In the background are decorative plants and the outlines of the curvilinear roof of the conservatory are seen overhead. At the right, but separated from the main picture, appears a sectional view of their well known hot water heater. It is a really artistic creation and we extend our congratulations.

MEDINA, N. Y.—Harry M. Kearney, the florist, committed suicide Dec. 29th during a fit of despondency over the death of his mother last fall. He was 37 years of age and unmarried.

WE AGAIN hear reports that florists have been victimized by "customers" who paid for goods with bogus checks and received the "change" in cash.

THE BOOK that saves money for you like the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, is the book for you to have handy.

PETOSKEY, MICH.

Christmas trade was fine. Sold out slick and clean. Besides ordering from Grand Rapids, bought all the local flowers at hand; sold them and still calls for more. The people of this vicinity are getting a little used to holiday prices. Seven years ago, when I launched out in business it was up hill work to make the people comprehend that flowers cost more at the holiday season. When coming to purchase they would remark: "Why, I bought only two weeks ago carnations for 30 cents a dozen, now you ask 60 cents." But they are fast becoming educated to it.

Cut flowers sold more readily than plants. Holly and holly wreaths went like hot cakes. The leading calls were for carnations, roses, late mums and stevia; bulbous stock went slow and carnations took the lead. Happy new year to the trade. M. A. LONG.

UNIONTOWN, PA.—Barton Bros. say their Christmas trade was much larger than in any previous year. They sold all they had and could have sold a good deal more.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars as to color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

New Hardy Giant Primrose PRIMULA VERIS SUPERBA.

This is one of the good things that occasionally turn up by chance. The plant originated a few years since in a batch of seedling Polyanthus, and apparently is a hybrid Primrose, having somewhat the growth of a Polyanthus combined with the yellow color and fragrance of the English Primrose. In size of flower, it is fully three times as large as any hardy Primrose known to us, the average size of the flower being over one inch, and we have seen them frequently measuring over two inches, with individual trusses of bloom six inches in diameter. It is perfectly hardy, grows from 10 to 12 inches high, and begins to flower earlier and continues in bloom longer than any other plant of the same family known to us. This alone is sufficient to insure its popularity as a plant for the garden, but its greatest merit consists in the fact that it is not only one of the easiest plants we know of to force, but a plant that will sell on sight when brought into flower during the winter and early spring months, and especially so when grown as an Easter plant. The plants can be stored in cold frames, successive batches being brought into a cool greenhouse to flower as required, allowing about four to five weeks' time to bring them into full bloom.

The plants we offer are good young plants which will give sufficient flowers this season to show its value and will grow on into fine specimen plants for next winter's forcing. $1.25 per doz., $10.00 per 100.

CARE OF BOILERS.

Reading I. M.'s inquiry in the Review of Dec. 13th, I would like to give my experience in the care of boilers when not in use, especially cast iron ones, in summer.

I have charge of a number of boilers, both cast iron and wrought iron. In setting the former, if they are portable ones I find it pays to give them a good coat of paint on the bottom and set them on a sheet of ½-inch rubber packing. In the summer, if they be left full of water, and it is advisable to do, I disconnect the smoke pipe, and, after having cleaned out all the soot and ashes, put in a bushel, more or less, of lime, according to size of ashpit, furnace and flues, and close up tight.

If the water is to be drained off, before closing so I introduce a quantity of crude oil, according to size of boiler, while the water is hot, and as it lowers the interior is protected with a coating of oil that prevents oxidization. I have boilers in use now over five years that are as perfect as the day they were installed and that will last a good many years. I believe it is good economy to give them this annual care. It is certainly cheaper than repairs, and precludes the danger of their giving out when in service. The sheet rubber packing is reasonable and protects the bottom that cannot be painted except by disconnecting and upsetting.

Craig R. Arnold.

Sharon Hill, Pa.

Tiffin, Ohio.—Lewis Ulrich reports Christmas trade as better than any previous year; sold out everything he had in cut flowers. Sold quite a few pot plants and had an unusually good trade in holly, wreathing and Christmas trees. He last week picked 100,000 Asparagus plumosus seeds and has about 50,000 yet to pick. The most of these will be sown at once.

Various Items.

Xmas trade seems to have been very satisfactory with everybody around here. Prices ruled about the same as last year.

At the meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists, held on Jan. 3d, the following officers were elected: President, William Mann; vice-president, C. F. Wood; secretary, Henry Lichtefeld; financial secretary, Jos. Coenen; treasurer, C. H. Kunzman; sergeant-at-arms, Jacob Schulz. The newly elected president made a beautiful speech and wished the society a happy new year.

Fire destroyed Geo. Thompson & Son's greenhouses on the night of Jan. 1st and caused the loss of their entire stock of plants and buildings. The estimate of their loss is in the neighborhood of $6,000, partly insured. They have the sympathy of the other florists in their misfortune.

Jos. Coenen & Co. report a very large trade in palms and ferns for Xmas.

J. E. Mauret reports a very large trade during the holidays. E. G. Reiners also reports very good Christmas trade.

Jacob Schulz never gets left when the time comes around. His stock for Christmas was first-class.

Wm. Mann, the carnation king, was at his best again. He cut some 800 blooms for Xmas.

C. H. Kunzman is cutting some very fine carnations.

Lichtefeld & Son had all they could attend to during Xmas and New Year's.

We all wish the Florists' Review a happy year.

HY LICHTEFELD.

GREEN AND RED CATS.

Several thousand green and red cats are to be seen at McKellar & Winterson's store in Chicago this week. Each cat is provided with a brown collarette before it is sent out, and as the result of this precaution none have had a chill up to date. And on the coat of each is placed a poinsettia and a jardiniere. They are business cats though, and judging from an inspection of their contents, they rank most decidedly as omniverous. From cut flowers and wheat sheaves to water tanks and fire extinguishers is a wide range, and the items that these cats can be made to disgorge by a dose of the "long green" type of physic is phenomenal. And the tremendous list of different items is closed by an intimation that if they have accidentally omitted anything that a florist can use in any walk of life they will get it in on the gallop.

Seriously it is a remarkable catalogue and well illustrates the continually widening needs of the trade through the rapid extension of the business. If you haven't received a copy you can undoubtedly acquire one by addressing a request to McKellar & Winterson, 45, 47, 49 Wabash avenue, Chicago.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.

The florist trade in Santa Cruz has been good the last month.

Mr. T. Thompson, the carnation expert, had more orders for Christmas week than he could fill.

Mr. T. Thrift, an old, all-around gardener, has returned from a six months' trip through Oregon and Washington.

The weather this winter has been so mild that dahlias, not taken up, have started to grow again, thinking it was spring. But this morning gave them a lesson. The thermometer was at 27, which is the coldest for three years, and everybody was pleased with the bright, clear, frosty morning. I had some fuchsias in flower outside that did not seem to mind 5 degrees of frost. Callas looked bad for an hour or two, but the foliage came out all right, though the flowers were spoiled. Paper white narcissus are past their best. Double Romans are at their best. Campernellus, jonquils, and Trumpet daffodils in the open field, are showing the first flowers.

Santa Cruz.

PRUNING MARECHAL NIEL.

I would like to know how to prune Marechal Niel. I have twelve big plants about fifteen feet high (in my rose house), but they bloom very sparingly.

Southerner.

Allow the wood to ripen thoroughly before pruning. Cut out any surplus wood so as to admit air and light. The plants or branches in general should not be cut back much, say not over one-third of their length. M. Stauch.

Newark, N. J.—The New Jersey Floricultural Society at its monthly meeting Jan. 2 installed these officers: President, John Hayes; vice-president, Diederick Kindsgrab; secretary, George Smith; treasurer, Malcolm MacRorie; standing committees were appointed.

Madison, Wis.—Victor Wayman reports an excellent Christmas trade, especially in flowering plants.

Hygrometer or Moisture Gauge.

THIS Moisture Gauge tells you the difference between dryness and dampness in your greenhouses. We have been testing two of these moisture gauges several months and find they are more indispensible than the thermometer. If you keep this moisture gauge at 70 degrees you will have neither mildew nor red spider in your rose houses. If you keep it at 80 degrees you will not have rust nor red spider in your carnation houses. If you keep it at 85 degrees you will never have fungus in your rooted cutting houses. If you keep it at 75 degrees you will not have decayed leaves in your geranium houses; and if you have a moisture gauge in every house 100 feet long and keep it at above figures you will make at least $100 more per year from each house. Who wants to buy mildewed roses or rusty carnations?

To operate this moisture gauge it is essential to wet the walks in order to get the proper dampness. If your houses are too damp in winter, fire up a little and in the summer time open your ventilators. This has been obtained only by years of experience. Now you can tell your greenhouse hands to keep it at 70 or 80 degrees as you want it, just the same as you tell your fireman to keep the temperature in such a house at 60 degrees. We never had any intention to sell moisture gauges, but they are doing us so much good we have obtained some we can sell at $2.50 each, but we think you will want more. These moisture gauges are made in Germany and France. The French machines come at $10.00 each; they are quite an ornament and no cheap truck. We will give one of the $2 50 machines FREE for a $20.00 order for plants, or rooted cuttings, or unrooted cuttings, from our 1901 catalogue, or from our ads. in the trade papers; or we will send you one for $2.50, and after 10 days' trial if you do not like it you may return it and get your money back.

DENVER, COLO.

Various Notes.

Trade since Christmas has been very good, the week between Xmas and New Year's being very lively. Trade on the latter occasion was better than expected and stuff ran a little short. Violets and Beauties were much in demand. Not so good prices were realized as at Xmas, the prices being dropped 25 per cent.

A sudden change of temperature hindered some, and for three days it showed from zero to 20 below. Not so bad for stock, perhaps, but it raised—well, the clerks didn't like it, any way.

Several of the stores have been busy with funeral work lately. Pneumonia is very prevalent.

The greenhouses around town show up rather slim after their Xmas clean up, but already good Easter stock is in evidence.

The bowling club has not been doing much lately, but a few of the "steadies" may be seen around the alleys on Tuesday nights. Did I hear somebody say something about the "mighty" and the "great"? Now, my left-handed friend, a few words will quiet you. We are not doing much in the way of scores, as we find the alleys difficult. A few of us, though, are doing first rate, but not as florists. Several of us are entered on the City League, in which the great John Berry stands third with an average of 165 for twenty-four games and Manff is fifth with 163 for the same number of games. Scott has won a turkey and a hat for high scores in a week, but is now saving his strength to roll against the All Stars when they visit Denver the latter part of this month. Now, J. B., we have several more cracks (?) just like these three, and to prove that we can do a St. Louis five, I hereby challenge you on behalf of the Denver team to roll a match game in Denver during Easter week, April 6th preferred. Haldie or spiel. ROCKY.

THE GALVESTON FLORISTS.

Treasurer Edgar Sanders, of the Chicago Florists' Club, reports the receipt of $15.00 for the Galveston fund from the Kentucky Society of Florists, Louisville. This, in addition to the $558.10 previously reported, makes a total up to date of $573.10, that has passed through his hands for the benefit of the trade sufferers from the Galveston flood.

WHEN you don't know what to do, look through the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, for helpful suggestions.

"Hoosier Maid."

New Pure White Carnation. This is not a variety that will bring $6.00 a doz. in New York or any other market, but it will give you more and better flowers than any other white now in commerce. With us it averages in size with Flora Hill, but the stems are extra strong and calyx non-bursting, it is decidedly a mid-winter bloomer, although it blooms continually the season through. It is an extra strong grower of the Daybreak type and has never shown a trace of disease. It should be grown cool.

Price $1.50 a dozen; $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000.

NORWAY.

The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A business, money-making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size (3½-in. diam.), length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous, growth free, uninterrupted, continuous profusion of blooms. Flowers open very quickly; no waiting three or four days for them to develop. Like Genevieve Lord it blooms early and keeps it up. We unhesitatingly recommend it to every grower as the best white. If you grow Norway you will not be compelled to grow several varieties in order to keep up a succession. Its sterling worth must at once be apparent.

EGYPT.

Scarlet crimson. The first really good dark carnation which can boast of first-class commercial stems (2½ to 3 feet) and a rich, spicy odor. It is regal in appearance; possesses all of the attributes of a first-class commercial carnation; it is decidedly the best keeper of all dark varieties. Does not bloom as early as some varieties, but can be had in good flower by November 1st to 15th. Its rich color, about same shade as Jacque Rose, makes it a ready seller. The stiff stem gives it that substantial appearance which always insures a good price. It is so distinct that every grower should have it.

Price of the above two varieties $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, $75 per 1000.

READY FEBRUARY 15th.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to the proud prestige of having superseded the hitherto invincible William Scott. It is not only as good as Scott was in its palmiest days, but is actually superior to that variety in every way. Certainly a large claim, but one which is fully borne out by facts. In addition to this, Genevieve Lord commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. A carnation like this is only produced once in a great while. Our stock is in extra fine shape, free from all disease. Ready now. Order at once. It is having a great second year run.

Price $6 per 100, $50 per 1000.

The above three varieties are a great trio.

F. DORNER & SONS CO., LaFayette, Ind.

NORWAY. The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A money-making, money making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size, length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous growth and is a free and continuous bloomer.

EGYPT. Scarlet-crimson and the first really good dark carnation that can boast of first-class commercial stems and a rich, spicy odor. The best keeper of all dark varieties.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1,000. Ready Feb. 15.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to having superseded Scott, and it commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. It is having a great second-year run. Ready now. Price: $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

Prosperity, Roosevelt, Irene, Queen Louise, Dorothy, Lorna, Mermaid and other new varieties at introducers' prices.

A LATE PINK MUM.

Mr. M. A. Barick, Seymour, Ind., has a very late pink chrysanthemum of which he does not know the name and that he suspects may be new. He finds that it makes an ideal pot plant for Christmas sales and, as he has cut flowers as late as Dec. 26, he has nicknamed it "Happy New Year" as a companion name to "Merry Christmas."

THE MOST MONEY.

To get the most money out of your business you must produce the best stock at the lowest possible expense. Are you sure there is no waste in your business? Are you sure every one of your methods is the cheapest as well as the most effective?

The best stock isn't always the most costly to produce. It's more often in doing the right thing at the right time. And that's what The Florists's Manual, by Wm. Scott, keeps you posted on. It is the best investment you can possibly make, no matter how large or how small your business.

A FLORAL ENCOUNTER.

One of the daily papers recently wrote up an encounter between a florist and a business acquaintance in a rather sprightly way. Here is an extract:

As the florist rushed at him Jones assumed a pugilistic attitude, and when Robinson got within range dealt him a mighty blow on the left eye.

"There's a chrysanthemum for you," he shouted gleefully, as the florist measured his length on the floor, "and I have plenty more." Robinson quickly regained his feet and swung a blow at Jones. It fell short and Jones struck him a resounding whack on the mouth.

"There's a bunch of violets," he shouted, dancing about in a sprightly manner on the floor. "I'll give you every variety of flower if you will stand up and receive them," he added.

MERRILL, WIS.—N. Greivelding has completed his buildings and now has everything in first class shape. The dwelling house, greenhouses, office, barn and potting shed are all new and heated by steam. The arrangement is such that he can go from one building to another without going outdoors. A new courthouse is being built on the lot where his old houses stood.

A DWARF form of Iresine Lindenii has originated with a German gardener and has been named Iresine Lindenii microphyla nana. It will no doubt be useful in carpet bedding, as the height is only about that of an alternanthera.

"IF IN DOUBT," consult the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. It covers the whole field of commercial floriculture and you can quickly find in it the experience of a practical man bearing upon the doubtful point.

HOW $40.00... will make you $80 the first year and $120 a year for the following 30 years.

You can do it by using the GARLAND IRON GUTTER and iron posts in your next new houses. In connected houses, 20x100 each, the GARLAND IRON GUTTER and iron post construction will cost $40.00 per house more than a wooden gutter and wooden posts. And by means of the gutter you can arrange your benches so as to get 300 square feet more available bench surface than in the old way. This space is worth at least 40 cents a square foot and therefore a total of $120.00. Deducting the $40.00 extra cost of the iron gutters and posts you have a net profit of $80.00 the first year, and the full $120.00 a year for following years.

Garland's Iron Gutter and Drip Conductor.

Not only vastly better but cheaper to use than wooden gutters.

On a large range of new glass this gutter saved $6,400 in cost of construction.

This, to say nothing of the fact that wooden construction would have to be rebuilt at the end of 15 years, while the iron construction will stand for from 30 to 50 years or indefinitely.

One large grower saved $6,400.00 in his construction by using GARLAND'S IRON GUTTER and iron posts. The iron gutters cost $1,600.00 more than wooden gutters would have cost. But he gained 15,000 square feet of space. To cover this space with ordinary construction would cost at least $8,000.00. So deducting the $1,600.00 of extra cost for the iron construction he was $6,400.00 in pocket, to say nothing of having houses that would last twice or three times as long as with wooden construction.

You Can't Afford to Miss This Great Saving.

Several of the largest growers in the West have taken advantage of this. They are satisfied that the GARLAND IRON GUTTER and iron post construction is not only the cheapest in the long run but the cheapest the first year too. Write any of them about it.

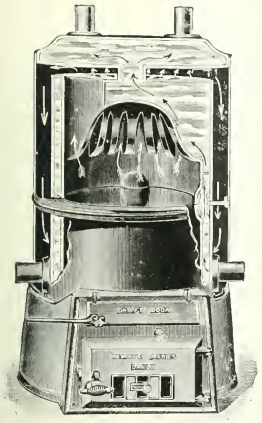
YOU CAN'T TELL



how much money is lost by using a poor boiler until you compare its work with a good one. A poor boiler wastes fuel and time, and is the cause of a large decrease in the profits of a florists' business.

POOR BOILERS

are innumerable, while good ones are scarce. That our boilers are good is proved by the testimony of those who have used them and compared them with others. They are modern, up-to-date, and with little fuel produce great heat. They are made in all sizes and many styles, but they are

ALL GOOD.

We favor florists to this extent, that we know one boiler set in a town where none are in use will sell many others, and to introduce this first boiler we will make a special allowance of

25 PER CENT. on the net price. The

FLORISTS PROFIT by this,

but we profit also by using no more advertising in that town. The boiler advertises itself and we sell many others.

Our catalogue "B" explains everything and tells by original letters what purchasers have found our boilers capable of doing. The amount saved will pay for more than one year's fuel.

NEW CARNATIONS.

The varieties of carnations now claiming attention, each one with some superlative quality and all superior to those of very recent introduction, are getting very numerous. So plentiful are they advertised that one hardly knows what one shall buy. I use this rather stilted phraseology because it occurs to me at the moment and is borrowed from a little bit of real experience. I met a young lady of our vicinity at some fraternal society. She was presiding at the organ, while the brothers and sisters sang a few verses of the Golden Rule. It was some fraternal insurance society, since defunct, but I forget its title. I met the organist on the street several times during the next two years, but she never varied her dress, poor girl. It was drab, or gray, but had a broad green vertical stripe, and that is the only reason I remember it. If it had not had that conspicuous stripe I should never have recognized the same old dress. One day in May I met her, and the brief dialogue was this: "How do you do, Mr. S.?" "How do you do, Miss ———." She says: "Very changeable weather," "Very," says I. "It is so changeable," says she, "that one hardly knows what one shall wear," and I pass along to see how many geraniums and coleus will be wanted in Mrs. Delaware's flower garden, but quite happy because I bagged a gem. Now with carnations it is the same, but for a different reason.

As Mr. Herr says in his article published in your splendid number last week, it is not necessary to buy all the high-priced novelties by the thousand. Yet every wide-awake man likes to keep to the front, and even if his place is limited he does spend a good deal of money in trying the wonderful new varieties. There are two ways of looking at this matter of buying a new variety. I have reason to be very thankful that I bought 500 of some novelties, and I am many dollars in pocket because I had bought that quantity instead of twenty-five or fifty, and, again, I have bought 500 of other novelties several times that proved, with me, worthless. If you believed from good reason that you could grow some new variety well, then you would be much in pocket by investing in it largely. Perhaps on the whole for those who have not the chance to see the novelties growing or even the flowers at an exhibition it is perhaps wisest to invest in small quantities.

We owe much to the careful and painstaking hybridist, who, even if he does get a seemingly large return for a good thing, has to spend time and money on thousands of seedlings that are worthless, and I hope these specialists will continue their good work. Yet the number of seedlings now offered has given me the thought that before long we shall be all raising our own new varieties. There is a good deal to be said in its favor and all are warranted in devoting a small space of their bench to this purpose. There is only one danger. Don't get stuck on your own offspring. Judge it impartially. Why it is well to raise your own seedlings is this: You can begin almost where the successful raiser has left off. I am aware that one or two experts in that line will say: "Oh, no. Not by any means. We are at least three years ahead of you." They mean that a flower showing great excellence will be used by them for seed raising three years before it is sent out. That may be so, but the evolution of the carnation is not so fast that that will make a great difference or be a bar to your raising a variety equal to any.

Then again the expert will say that he has studied pedigree for many generations and the novice goes at it haphazard, a mere chance with every possibility of failure. I don't attach much importance to pedigree. Where you have such splendid varieties to start with, phenomenal qualities in flowers and excellent traits in the lower animal and genius in man is liable to break out from very ordinary pedigree. I don't know that Cromwell, or Shakespeare, or Napoleon could brag about their pedigree and yet they were all wonders. There is yet another and better reason why it is worth trying to raise varieties for our own use. If you were to sow 200 seeds and ten of them had very fine flowers you would take care of them the second year. Three or four may show vigor and growth with a fine habit and give you lots of bloom. The others were less desirable all round. Now those two or three or four that ranked so high just suited the soil or rather the soil suited them and undoubtedly they or their divisions, which cuttings merely are, will always do well in the same soil.

I think this is simple to see and nothing new but not always considered. If the plant does well with you for two years you have got a variety that is suited to your soil and you could even go farther than that and say that it suited not only your soil but your locality or climate and treatment. I don't want to encourage anyone to be occupying valuable space for too much experimenting but I feel sure that the day is coming when the great majority of growers will raise their own seedlings and when they get a good one grow it for the flowers which will be of more consequence than sending out the plants. It is late now but not too late to make some crosses and have a few hundred seedlings for planting out next summer.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.

Syringing.

During the past week the weather has been just the opposite of what it was the week before, except that it remained moderately cold, making it necessary to keep up steady firing. There is not so much danger of soft growth as there is when the weather is warm and cloudy, providing you keep the atmosphere cool and dry. A good demand to oblige to make us fire up a little more in order to keep the cut of blooms near to what it is during bright weather, and if this happened only a day or two each week and the rest of the week were bright it would not be so harmful, but to keep it up a week at a time would be one of the worst things you could do. If you have orders for more blooms than you can cut you can always procure all you need from some of the large wholesale establishments, or from the commission houses. Better spend a dollar now and then and save the health of your stock. We hear of several firms who were cutting fine blooms just prior to and during the holidays, but who forced their plants unreasonably hard and long and made them very soft and the blooms poor. They are losing now what they gained then, and very likely a good deal more.

Common sense will tell you not to syringe during such weather as we have been having even if it kept up for several weeks unless you have a bad case of red spider on hand. Carnations like a moderately dry atmosphere, and during these long, dark and rainy spells we need to keep out dampness rather than add to it by syringing. When you water do not spray overhead, but turn the water on only part way, so it will have no force, and run the end of the hose between the rows just above the soil. Try to do as much of your watering on bright days as you can, but there will be a spot here and there that must be watered. The beds can be allowed to become much dryer during cloudy weather without suffering than you would dare have them if the weather were bright; but avoid extremes either way, especially as long as you cannot tell from one day to the next what the weather will be like.

Last week's REVIEW contained a protest from an eastern grower against syringing carnations at all. The writer says he can keep off red spider better without syringing than he can with it, but in the same breath he goes on to say that when he does get a dose of spider he rids his plants of it by syringing twice each week for two or three weeks at 4 p. m. His argument is that syringing makes the growth soft and that the dampness resulting therefrom starts the carnation rust, which is true. He admits that a certain amount of syringing is necessary to keep the plants free from spider, but at the same time the foliage must not be kept damp too much or the rust will make its appearance. That is exactly what we have always preached and practiced. We pick out a bright day, and if possible, the second one of two successive bright days, and syringe our plants between 9 and 11 a. m., thus giving several hours of sunshine to dry them off again before night. We find that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure and that by repeating this about once each week we are able to keep our plants free from spider and at the same time we never have our plants wet for more than a few hours at a time, and never over night, so it is not likely that rust will start from dampness. Now suppose you refrain from syringing until you see a dose of red spider and then syringe heavily, wetting the plants all over about 4 p. m. There is no chance for them to dry off before night and in fact not before the next day, and if it happens to be cloudy it will take more than that day to dry them off thoroughly.

Suppose that day was bright and you repeat the operation a few days later and you have the cloudy weather then. The result will be that you will have the plants wet from thirty-six to forty-eight hours when it is cloudy instead of about eight and while the warm sun is shining. Which of the two methods do you think is more likely to start the rust? Then suppose you happened not to notice the presence of the spider until just before the beginning of a two weeks' cloudy spell, during which time the syringing would certainly be harmful. What condition would your plants be in by the time it cleared up again?

Daybreak is not the only variety that red spider likes, Jubilee, W. Cloud and Armazindy are just as subject; and it soon spreads over the other varieties as well. We have heard many growers talk about keeping off spider by ventilating freely, etc.; but we have tried it more than one season and we have seen others try it, and we have never seen a house of carnations that was kept free from the pest without being syringed between Dec. 1 and March 1. You will have to do just about so much syringing and it is only a question as to whether you do it all within a few weeks or whether you will distribute it over several months. We find that we can keep down red spider and rust and have the growth more solid by adopting the latter method.

Shading the Propagating Bench.

The most important part after you have your cuttings in the sand is to keep them from wilting. How often you will need to water the sand will depend on the coarseness of it and the temperature, both top and bottom; but it must never be allowed to become dry. Many propagators use paper for shading, but we do not like it for several reasons. When the sun shines on the paper it gets quite warm and if it lays directly on the cuttings it will cause them to wilt according to the strength of the sun, and if you are using the north bench of a carnation house after you remove the paper the dry atmosphere of the house will soon take away all the dampness from them. We have a curtain in front (and later, one overhead) which shuts them off to themselves, and we find that one or perhaps two sprayings on bright days will keep them in good shape, while on cloudy days enough dampness comes from the sand to keep them fresh. We always try to have them tolerably dry before night comes, as too much moisture at night will cause fungus, etc., and rust will start as quickly in the sand as or the growing bench.

Last week I said something that I want to take back, and that is, that The Marquis has a better color than E. Crocker and G. Lord. I had never compared them except by daylight and The Marquis certainly had the best of it, but last Tuesday night I saw both by electric and gaslight and I was surprised to see how E. Crocker loomed up, while The Marquis did not show up nearly so well as by daylight. I wonder if it would not be well (when judging commercial varieties at least) to judge them both by daylight and artificial light and then strike an average. There are no doubt more flowers used in decorations for evening parties, etc., than for any other time, and to be a truly valuable commercial variety it should show up well both by daylight and artificial light. After noticing the above two varieties we compared a vase of America with a vase of Jubilee and we were surprised to find that America looked by far the brighter at night just because it was not so dark, which makes it perhaps more valuable for night decorations than Jubilee.

THE NEWER CARNATIONS.

From a Commercial Standpoint.

[Extracts from a paper by Dr A. S. Halstedt, Belleville, Ill., read before the St. Louis Florists' Club, January 10.]

Ethel Crocker seems to be one of the pink carnations that has come to stay. It was originated by J. H. Sievers & Co. As grown in the soil of my vicinity, it makes a fine, large plant in a short time, with a profusion of large pink flowers on long stems, good, strong calyx, blooming continuously. It can stand good, sharp stimulant, such as wood ashes or pulverized cow manure, which can either be put on as a top dressing or in liquid form. I think "Ethel Crocker" the bread winner for 1901. Next comes the famous "Mrs. Thomas Lawson," which has gained considerable fame, especially on account of the price paid for it—$30,000. Peter Fisher is certainly a very lucky man. He might originate thousands more, and not find another Lawson. This variety has a large pink flower, "coarse," something like the "Adelaide Kresken," which only lasted one season. "Marquis," a rich pink, perfect calyx, sturdy plant, grass like "Jubilee." I think this variety can be grown for profit. It will need no tying, as it has a strong, stiff stem, and can stand a great deal of stimulant. It is grown by our president. He seems to think it a cracker-jack, but the longest pole knocks the persimmons, and I think "Genevieve Lord" has the pole. When it is well grown "Daybreak" can be discarded forever. I expect to plant at least 1,000 plants next season. This pink variety fairly thrills you with its exquisite beauty. Old man Weber, as well as his sons, can be highly complimented on their product.

Now for a few of the older ones. In white "McGowan" has been grown for the past seven years on my place, and I have a soft spot in my heart for "Lizzie." She will always find bench room in my greenhouse. The poorer the soil the better the flower. This is one of those that needs no stimulant, and can be grown at a temperature of 55 degrees with good results.

"Flora Hill," the next best white on my place, is continually infested with rust and bacteria. The combination of the two diseases produces what I call marassmus. Marassmus is the using up of the vitality. When vitality is once lost it means death. I administer in these diseases arsenic and carbolic acid, which proves a great factor.

Bradt is one of the best variegated I grow; makes a fine large flower, stiff stem, rarely ever bursting the calyx if grown at a temperature of 55. I have a small house of that variety and it has paid well, not on account of its productiveness, but on account of large flowers and prices I get for them. Red Bradt is worthless. I had about fifty plants all propagated from the Red Bradt. When they bloomed all but six were the original Bradt.

Chrysanthemum Midge as a pot plant.

Gold Nugget, yellow variegated, does well at my place, and I expect to cultivate it until some one brings out something in yellow that will bloom as well as Scott. One of the newer varieties grown in this vicinity I forgot to mention for the reason of its unworthiness is Olympia. Armazindy is ten to one better and is not worth growing, although it may be grown well elsewhere.

The great Scott, no doubt, is justly entitled to the name; good flowers any and all time. The only rival to Scott is Joost. If Joost holds out I will give her a chance for another year alongside of Scott. So far Scott produces two flowers to Joost's one.

The last, but not least, is Crane. This is truly an ideal red. If it possessed the sweetness of Jubilee it would be hard to beat. Neighbor Guy thinks America the real thing. I do not doubt his opinion, but it can not touch Crane with a forty-foot pole. I could write in this same way from now until the cows come home without ever impressing any one but myself, so closing point is near at hand.

Carnations have the sway,
There is money in them I say.
No fortune can be made so well
In growing large blooms that will sell.
Oh, Ethel Crocker, you delightful pink,
I will grow you next year, I think;
But Olympia, you poor thing,
Not blooming for profit until spring.
Genevieve Lord, bright, sweet, prolific, I say,
One of the pinks that has come to stay.
Mrs. Thomas Lawson cost thirty thousand dollars,
For cuttings next year you will have but few callers.
Next comes the Crane,
A good thing in red I've been saying.
There is Gold Nugget, hated by some,
For a good yellow I think you're a plum.
Scott, the bread winner,
The man who discards you is surely a sinner.
You can't lose me, says Mrs. Bradt,
I beat all variegated and colors like that Dazzle, New York and Daybreak,
If you drop them you'll make no mistake.
Portia, Evelina, Eldorado, Melba,
Della Fox, Albertini,
Have lost all their fame,
But were good ones in their day just the same.
Frances Joost has friends by the host, I should say—
Take a place next to Scott without delay.
You may tire of my rhyme on the carnation,
No flower in the world can sniff at your station.
I will wind up by saying to you, one and all,
Grow carnations that are perfect or grow none at all.

NEW CARNATIONS.

Registered with The American Carnation Society.

By Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.:

"Governor Wolcott." Color pure white, blooms of fine form, averaging three inches and over in diameter, borne on stems two to three feet in length. Plant very free and healthy, of wiry growth and ideal habit.

"Eastern Starr." Color pure white, flowers deeply fringed, of perfect form with high center, full but does not burst, average size of bloom two and one-half to three inches, borne on a stiff wiry stem. Plant resembles McGowan in growth, is of splendid habit and very productive.

ABOUT SLUGS.

S. W. says: "I am troubled with slugs. They eat everything. Radishes are beefsteaks to them. Is there any way to get rid of them?"

S. W. is of course speaking figuratively when he says that radishes are beefsteaks to the humble slugs. He means that they are the greatest delicacy to these vegetarians as a beefsteak is considered a most relishable meal to we bipeds who show by our teeth that we are meant to be both herbivorous and carnivorous.

Slugs are very troublesome in hosts of crops. Perhaps by no means seldom to the young undeveloped fronds of young ferns. Young plants of cucumber and many young seedlings are devoured if slugs are around. Many can be caught by laying lettuce and cabbage leaves on the benches, or slices of turnip or cutting potatoes in halves and scooping them out hollow. The slugs do most of their feeding at night and seek some secluded spot to lay up in during the day. So in the hollows of the potatoes or under these leaves you can catch a good many, but it is slow work and you are apt to get tired of the performance before all the slugs are.

The most effectual way to get rid of them that I know of is to dust the soil or benches with air slaked quick lime. In the case of ferns a very light dusting of lime on the fronds and crowns of the plants will do no harm and will effectually stop the work of the slugs.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MIDGE AS A POT PLANT.

Some time since you published an engraving from a photograph of chrysanthemum Midge as a pot plant. I enclose a photograph of a pot plant of the same variety which speaks for itself after doing service twice at church decorations.

[This chrysanthemum certainly seems to be an excellent variety to grow as a pot plant, and we present herewith an engraving from the photograph sent by T. L. W.]

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

To the Officers and Members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. Greeting.

Gentlemen: The society of which you are honored members fittingly closed the nineteenth century with the grandest and most comprehensive exhibition and convention, in New York, last August, ever held in this country; an exhibition which in the opinion of many competent judges was equal to, if it did not actually surpass anything ever shown in any country. We enter the twentieth century stronger as a society than ever before in our history. We have accomplished much, but there is yet much to be achieved. A national charter is one of the objects aimed at; closer relations between the parent society and special trade societies is desired; the development of our natural resources for the production of much which we now import is essential; the collection and dissemination of facts which bear on a higher development of our products is necessary: a more active aid from national and state experiment stations is needed. These and many other valuable advantages may be secured; but united, active support of officers and committees is necessary.

A large increase in membership was obtained the past year but there are hundreds, yes, thousands, outside the fold who should be in and can be brought in by earnest individual effort. Solicit your friends and neighbors to join the society; impress upon them the advantages of co-operation. The society has obtained cheaper postage, cheaper expressage, cheaper freight; has obtained valuable legislation. It has created a trade press which disseminates valuable information and provides a medium whereby they can buy and sell at an advantage unknown before its establishment. They cannot afford to stand by, idle; they may lose, we all may lose, some of the advantages gained unless we present a solid and gradually extending front. With a growth in membership our powers will increase, our influence widen.

Don't forget your state vice presidents; send them reports of what is being done in horticulture in your neighborhood. If your state legislature is considering measures bearing on your business, get your state vice-president to take the matter up and then support him in his efforts. If existing state laws can be amended for your benefit, do likewise. Send suggestions for the improvement of the society to the secretary, who will bring them before the executive committee in due season. Take a lively interest in the society's affairs at all times; it will pay you to do so. Become life members; in this prosperous year, celebrate the opening of the new century in that way. It is saving time and money and establishing the society on a firmer basis.

Last but not least prepare to attend the convention in Buffalo next August. The horticultural department of the Pan-American Exhibition will surpass anything of the kind ever seen. Show by your presence that you appreciate the effort.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year and soliciting your hearty co-operation, we remain for success,

Fraternally yours,
Patrick O'Mara, Pres.
Wm. J. Stewart, Sec.

ROSE NOTES.

Grafting.

Manetti stocks arrived in much better condition this year than last and were also of better quality and more uniform in size. As soon as the root action has commenced the stocks are ready for grafting. Use only good, well ripened wood for scions. It is not essential that the graft and stock be of even thickness, but the bark must be fitted exactly together at one side. For tying we use raffia. We potted 25,000 Manetti about Dec. 22, and now have most of them grafted.

For the grafted plants we build a frame on a bench, put one to one and one-half inches of moss on the bottom and cover this with sand. This is watered well and the plants set upon it. We aim to keep a temperature of about 70 degrees. The frame is covered with sash and kept close for about ten days or two weeks, by which time the scion will have taken hold. A little air is now given and the plants gradually hardened off, which will take another two weeks. If the stocks were watered before grafting there will be no need of further watering for the first two or three weeks, but if through some contingency it should be necessary it must be very carefully done. If any water settles between the stock and scion the latter will die off. It is best to have partitions in the frame for each batch, so they can be aired separately.

When the plants are hardened they should be taken out of the frame and placed on a light bench, but care must be taken to avoid too much sun or draughts, for a few days. As soon as the plants are of a sufficient height they should be tied to a small stake to prevent the graft from breaking off.

Pruning.

I do not believe in cutting out much blind wood during the first part of the rose season, but about the middle of January, when the days begin to lengthen, and the sun favors us more, I think time is well spent in cutting out some of the old blind wood. It gives the plant more air and light and makes room for the strong shoots which we now expect to start.

Watering.

During cold nights and bright days our rose beds dry out from both top and bottom and watering must be regulated accordingly. It is well to take a stick and examine the soil clear through. The appearance of the surface is often deceiving and our fingers cannot always penetrate deep enough to assure us of its condition. Always water the bed thoroughly if it needs watering. Otherwise you may have the upper half of the soil wet while it may be as dry as powder at the bottom, and this condition is serious for the plants.

M. Stauch.

RAISING THE TEMPERATURE.

In the Review of Dec. 13 M. Stauch says: "In case of necessity (the temperature can be raised) to 65 degrees on the last few days." In the Review of Dec. 20 he says: "Do not try to cook out a few extra flowers for Christmas by giving the plants all the heat you can. It may mean an extra dollar for you now but by the middle of January you will wish you had not done so."

Will Mr. Stauch please explain what he means? Clarence Upton.

The word "cooking" is commonly used by growers to signify an excessive amount of heat. Mr. Upton may regard 65 degrees as "cooking" and so would I should it be kept up for any length of time. What I had in mind was what I know to be practiced by many of the smaller growers or florists who conduct a general retail establishment and have only a few rose houses. They are very apt to keep the temperature too high as Christmas approaches. The orders start to come in two weeks before Christmas and they keep piling up. The florist does not wish to buy any roses if he can possibly avoid it and so the temperature of the houses is raised in accordance with the pile of orders.

He knows well enough that it will harm his plants but Christmas and high prices are right in front of him and the possible harm is some distance off in the future and he guesses after all the damage won't be so very serious, the dollars in sight rather dulling his usual good judgment. So he runs the houses up to 65 and 70 and the ventilators kept closed tight. In the daytime the houses are syringed overhead, the boilers are kept going in spite of the sun which would in itself keep the houses warmer than they should be, and ventilation is given at perhaps 80 or 85 degrees.

Such treatment is what I call "cooking," and a rose cannot endure it long. New Year's follows close behind and a little more "cooking" is indulged in to help out on extra orders for that occasion. And by the middle of January the plants, even though they may look healthy, are so exhausted they simply can't move. They will start to break and then stand still, and not till spring can they be got into good shape again.

Such mistreatment of roses may be new to Mr. Upton, but it is unfortunately not at all rare as I can testify to from personal observation. M. Stauch.

HOW TO GROW PERLE ROSES SUCCESSFULLY.

By J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.

[Read before the St. Louis Florists' Club, Jan. 10.]

I begin to propagate as soon after New Year's as possible, and not later than Feb. 1, as I think that high time to propagate stock wanted for planting on benches by June 1, which is my time for planting.

In the selection of wood for cuttings I usually take strong blind wood from healthy plants, or when the market is overstocked with blooms I sometimes use blooming wood. The wood should be well ripened, but not hard; if blooming wood is used I prefer it before the flower is fully developed. Still I have used some where the flower was fully developed with very good success. As to the difference between blooming and blind wood, I find none. Any good, healthy wood will do. I usually cut two to three eye cuttings, according to length of joints.

The propagating bed is prepared as follows: The bench is made of wood, six-inch fencing preferred, with a quarter-inch crack between boards for drainage. The boards are thoroughly whitewashed with fresh lime and about three-fourths inch of screened cinders put in the bottom for drainage. Then put in clean fresh sand, which, after well beaten down with a brick, will be about two or two and one-half inches deep.

The bench is then ready for the cuttings, which are put in the sand to the depth of about one inch, placed one inch apart in the row, and two and one-half inches between rows. The cuttings are then thoroughly watered and shaded, for the latter purpose we use muslin stretched along the sash bars. An occasional sprinkling during the day, and when needed a thorough watering is given. After they have formed a callous the shading is removed. The temperature is kept as near as possible to 58 degrees above, with 10 degrees higher under the bench. When the weather is clear a crack of air is constantly left on the house, but all drafts are avoided.

In potting, I usually pot from sand into two and one-half inch pots. I prefer this size to the two-inch. I shade them a few days with newspapers and soak well after planting. From two and one-half inch pots I plant into three and one-half inch, and from the latter size to the bench. I much prefer this size for bench planting to four-inch. I do not believe in forcing young stock as soon as they are well started in two and one-half inch pots. I reduce the temperature a few degrees and keep them on the dry side as much as possible, being very careful never to get them overwatered, as that materially weakens them. You can get a strong, sturdy plant only by keeping it somewhat on the dry side. For potting I use the same soil used for the benches, which is run through a coarse screen and about one-fifth of screened, well-rotted cow manure added for small pots. Very little sand is used, as our soil is a sandy loam.

In preparing for the bench planting, we give rafters and gutters a coat of paint every two years, and thoroughly clean under the benches and give all the walls, etc., a whitewash of fresh lime every season. The benches are constructed of wood, six-inch cypress fencing preferred, and a space of one-half inch is left between boards for drainage. Same is used for side, leaving the bench about four and one-half inches deep in the clear. The bench is given a heavy coat of fresh lime and filled level full of soil, which after being packed and watered will leave about three and one-half to four inches of soil. New soil is used each year, which is hauled from an old pasture or some other place that I know has not been cultivated for years. This is usually piled up a year previous. The mixing is done as the soil is put in with about one-fourth of well-rotted cow manure and a sprinkling of bone meal. Planting is then done from three and one-half inch pots and as near June 1 as possible. I believe in some shading, but I am satisfied good roses can be grown without it.

Supports are put in and tying is done as soon after planting as needed. About Aug. 15 a light mulch of well-rotted cow manure is given, which is repeated the latter part of September, if required. As soon as cool weather sets in liquid manure is applied in light form about once every two weeks, which is increased later on to once every week, depending a great deal on the growth the plants are making, and also the weather.

There is one thing you must bear in mind, that the Perle rose is a good feeder and enjoys an occasional mulch or liquid watering about as well as the writer does one of those old time florists' smokers. All buds are cut off with from one to two eyes, up to about Aug. 15, when the strongest shoots are allowed to come to flower and which produce first-class flowers. The weak growth should be disbudded continually through the whole season, and only good, strong wood allowed to flower. You must remember that if you want quality you can't always expect quantity.

The temperature I prefer for Perle roses is 60 degrees at night, with 10 to 15 degrees higher in the daytime. In conclusion, I wish to state that my soil is a light, sandy loam, which readily drains itself and can therefore stand more water than ordinary soil. To this I attribute to some extent my success in Perle roses, but the principal thing to success is careful attention and [illegible] energy, the same as is required to grow any other plant under glass successfully. I thank you for your kind notice then and I hope these few words will be of as much benefit to some of you, at least, as other essays have been to me in the past.

A GIANT CALADIUM.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a Caladium esculentum, a single plant from one bulb, that was seen last summer on the grounds of Mrs. R. L. Higginbotham, Delphi, Ind. The plant was eight feet high and had a spread of fifteen feet. The longest leaf measured 48 inches. Replying to an inquiry as to how the plant was treated Mrs. Higginbotham writes: "The hole was 3½ feet in diameter and 2 feet deep. It was filled with 6 inches of half rotted cow manure, 6 inches of rich compost, 6 inches of half rotted cow manure, finishing off with 6 inches of well rotted compost into which the bulb was placed. We watered sparingly until the plant was well started, as otherwise there is danger of rotting the bulb. After the plant was well started the amount of water was gradually increased as the growth advanced, adding about twice a week one to two gallons of liquid from half rotted cow manure with a small quantity of bone meal added. When the plant has attained full size you can scarcely give it too much water."

The Market.

A decided and unmistakable lull set in by the middle of last week. By Wednesday the bright hopes that this season there would be no let up in business before Lent had vanished. It seems likely that the dark, rainy weather of the next two days really helped more than it hurt the cut flower market. Transient trade fell off, but the supply was decreased probably in much greater proportion. Prices fell. The best Beauties, a scarce commodity, bring $6, $7.50 and $9 a dozen. Brides and Maids, $8 to $12 per 100. Some Meteors brought a little more. Carnations, $1.50 to $3 per 100, a few fancies being held at $5. Single violets, 50 to 75 cents per 100, doubles, $1, to $1.50. Romans are not popular just now; very few white flowers are in midwinter. Possibly the next two weeks may prove a further exception to this general rule, as we are promised an unusually large number of January weddings.

French daffodils are in and bring $4 a 100; the blooms appear unripe. Tulips and Von Sion are expected shortly.

Various Items.

The club meeting was held on Tuesday night. Ernest Hemming, of Thos. Meehan & Sons, read a paper on herbaceous plants for cut flowers.

Tuesday of this week will be devoted to the Farmers' Institute meeting for Philadelphia county, which will be held in Horticultural Hall. A very interesting program has been arranged for the occasion.

Ladies' night at the Florists' Club will be held on Wednesday evening of next week, Jan. 23. A varied program full of attractions has been arranged. It is earnestly hoped that every member will feel a personal interest in making the affair a triumphant success.

The state board of agriculture has invited Edwin Lonsdale to write a paper instructing the farmers how to build and manage greenhouses with a view to aiding them in rendering their farms profitable. This is gratifying and the paper, which is progressing, should prove very instructive. As a further mark of confidence the state board asked Mr. Lonsdale to name the fee which he considered fair compensation for the work.

The many friends of Charles E. Meehan will be interested in learning that he has completed a new greenhouse, the tenth, I think, on his place, also a stylish office. If all signs fail not, this progressive florist is preparing to put the words "wholesale and retail" before the "Florist" on his wagon.

Now that the holiday rush is over every grower ought to do a little figuring to determine what pays and what does not pay. You can't tell by guessing. Thomas Cartledge said, in speaking of a grower's success: "He never fooled with things that didn't pay him." A very successful florist, in speaking to some of his less fortunate brethren, said: "You will be small growers always if you don't grow what pays you."

NEW YORK.

Banquet to President Patrick O'Mara.

The banquet tendered to Patrick O'Mara by his numerous floricultural and horticultural friends at the St. Denis Hotel, New York City, Jan. 10, was a remarkable show of appreciation for the services rendered by that gentleman to the New York Florists' Club, the Society of American Florists, and to the trade in general. Any man might well feel proud of the splendid testimonial, for it was an event that will for aye impress itself upon the memories of those who were present and marks an epoch at the birth of the new century. The affair was held in the large banquet hall of the hotel and seventy-seven sat down to enjoy the good things enumerated in the catalogue.

Chas. B. Weathered acted as toastmaster and started the fun by his giving an account of how he got that position at the civil service examination held by the dinner committee; he was awarded 95 points on exemplary elementary elements, and was in consequence awarded the contract for mixing seriousness and emotion with irresponsible hilarity. Mr. Weathered, referring to the object of that assemblage, said: "They had come to do honor to one who by his indefatigable and well placed labor in the last decade, had done more for horticulture than any one man," and called upon William J. Stewart, of Boston, to respond to the toast, "Our Honored Guest." Mr. Stewart feelingly referred to the many qualities of the hero of the night, that they had come from north, east, south and west around that festal board to honor and say "Well done, good and faithful servant." At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. Stewart, on behalf of those assembled, handed Mr. O'Mara a beautiful emerald and diamond pin as "a token of the evergreen and never-dying esteem in which he was held by the horticulturists of America." Letters were then read from many of the most prominent men in the country who regretted their inability to attend. All the letters were testimonials to Mr. O'Mara's worth and many of them were remarkable for humor and feeling; they were presented to the guest of the evening.

On rising to respond Mr. O'Mara received an ovation; he was visibly affected, as well he might be, and his comparison of the emerald pin he had received that night to the green isle far away was one of the best things he ever said. His story of how, when a boy, he followed the 4th New Jersey regiment, and felt honored in being allowed to hold one of the guns, was a pathetic description of Milesian ambition; he said the motto of the 4th New Jersey was "Always Ready"; he tried to be always ready, but he confessed he was not ready for such a demonstration as was given him that night! There was a burning seriousness in his voice when he declared "God knows each man should do, when the time comes, what his fellow man calls upon him to do. It is only his duty, it is only his right, it is only what he owes to the age in which he lives, what he owes to the spirit of progress, what he owes to the time in which he is making his pilgrimage on this earth, to put forth his best effort, to forget for the moment himself and his little selfish surroundings and to do as God has given him strength, all in his power to aid his fellow man, to aid his nation and whatever movement may be going along."

After referring to the vast good accomplished by the S. A. F. O. H., he urged all to make the Buffalo exhibition and convention worthy of the times and of themselves. In speaking of the New York Florists' Club, he said the eyes of horticultural America were always turned to New York; he hoped that every member of the club would do his best to make the coming Madison Square Garden show a grand success.

Mr. W. C. Barry, of Rochester, responded to the toast "Our Country," speaking of the works of American horticulturists which he said ranked second to none in the world, and which would still reach a higher standard through the earnest co-operation of those interested. He ended by an eloquent tribute to his country, which he said other nations of the world were beginning to know and respect—it took a few battles to convince them of our power but it was done.

"Our Profession" was responded to by Mr. John N. May, whose description of the struggles of the florists in bygone days reminded many of those present of their own experiences; he predicted that as tremendous strides had been made every few years in our profession the next decade or two would see still greater ones, that the standards now considered high would be improved upon, even more than those of the past were. Pointing to the immense vases of "Prosperity" and "Roosevelt" carnations which stood on each side of him, he said they represented the acme of perfection as we knew it today. He paid high tribute to the work of the landscape artists of the day.

"Our Societies," was spoken to by Ex-President Wm. F. Gude, of Washington, who enumerated the good accomplished by all the national and local floricultural and horticultural bodies; he was in favor of all making their working ways broader, that the new century would see an increasing usefulness, every year mark greater attainments by all the societies.

J. W. Withers in the unavoidable absence through illness of Mr. Robert Craig, replied to the toast of "Our Literature." Mr. Withers paid a glowing tribute to American horticultural literature which he said led the world and in ending referred to the contributions to it of many who were present.

In the much lamented absence of Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, Alexander Burns was called upon to answer to "Our Pastimes," and he was equal to his embarrassing position, eliciting much laughter by his happy references. The "Lord of Wood-side" did better than he sometimes does on the alleys.

"The Ladies"—ah, the girls; and who else but the polished chevalier Edmund M. Wood, Bostonwards, could be called upon to speak of them? Samuel Henshaw responded to "Old Times," and surprised the uninformed present when he stated that in the early days of the Florists' Club Mr. O'Mara's candidature was rejected several times because he was an Irishman. Great changes had come since that time, but he begged to assure his hearers that "old times" were not devoid of pleasant memories. He paid a well deserved tribute to the veteran florist, Chas. Zeller, who was present; they were the oldest florists there, but he was sure they were the youngest at heart that night.

Vice-President William Kasting, of Buffalo, made a few remarks on the pleasantries of the evening and urged all present to root for and "get off" at Buffalo next August. Alex. Wallace was called upon to speak for the "Trade Press," and sang a song instead. Walter F. Sheridan, president of the New York Florists' Club, was loudly called for, and in answer said he was proud of the committee's work and felt it a great honor to succeed Mr. O'Mara as president of the club.

After all present had given vent to their feelings in Auld Lang Syne some gradually stole away and others were loth to part. The tables were prettily decorated by Lawrence Hafner. Contributions of flowers were kindly sent by Traendly & Schenck, J. I. Raynor, Young, J. H. Taylor, John N. May, Rudolph Asmus, C. W. Ward, J. K. Allen, W. F. Sheridan, H. A. Siebrecht, D. Gindra and Dailledouze Bros. There were many gems on the table and the committee wishes to thank the donors for the generous response to their request.

To give a list of those present would only be writing out the names of those active in the workings of the club. Many were prevented from being present by fear of feeling Rubeish alongside dress suits and the glitter of diamonds. In justice to many friends of Mr. O'Mara, and to quote many of them, there would have been at least three times as many present were there not so much style about the affair, but the committee were determined to outshine all other affairs given by the club and they succeeded in doing so with credit to themselves.

Among those from a distance were John Burton, Wm. P. Craig, Robert Berry and Geo. D. Clark, of Philadelphia; Wm. C. Barry, of Rochester; E. M. Wood, of Boston; and Wm. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C.; Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo; W. C. Bussell and I. L. Powell, of Millbrook, and J. F. Huss, of Lenox.

Club Meeting.

The installation of officers for the year 1901 took place at the meeting of the Florists' Club on Monday night last and the usual forms were gone through. The attendance was not very large, but it was alive. Mr. O'Mara introduced the new officers and expressed the hope that every member would give them the same support as they had given him. He assured them that in returning to the rank and file once more he would continue to devote his best efforts to advance the club's interests.

Walter F. Sheridan, in assuming the duties of chairman, said in part that he fully appreciated the high honor and responsibilities that were attached to the office and was desirous of doing his utmost to maintain the high standard reached by the club. He paid high compliments to the retiring president and reviewed the progress of the club during the past year. He sincerely hoped the good work would continue. The most important event before them was the grand show to be given in Madison Square Garden next October, the success of which depended on every individual member. A successful exhibition this year meant its establishment as an annual feature, assuring a brilliant future for the New York Florists' Club. He recommended the appointment of local committees to distribute literature and further the interests of the club among horticulturists.

He suggested that a summer outing be arranged for, where members and their families could meet and enjoy acquaintances. (This suggestion was immediately adopted and a committee will be appointed to carry out details.) He urged upon the standing committee of awards the necessity of securing exhibits during the year and recommended that the rules and regulations governing such be revised and made more liberal. He dwelt at length upon the importance of having novelties brought before the club and hoped the rules would be so revised as to encourage such exhibits. (This matter was discussed by many present and the committee was empowered to change the rules on exhibits.)

Continuing, he said he hoped to see the by-laws revised on the matter of nomination and election of officers. He was of opinion that a nominating committee should be appointed and that the election should occur the same night the nominees are put before the club. The question box was a matter he hoped would be taken up and used and that members "get on their feet" and talk on matters of interest.

Considerable discussion followed on the topics touched on and Mr. Sheridan's first night in the chair resulted in accomplishing much good. Chas. B. Weathered, on being introduced as the new treasurer with an old face, said he had only to say what he had said every year for the past twelve. His report showed the club to be in a very prosperous condition. Vice-President Wallace offered his best efforts to the club's welfare.

The club's annual dinner was discussed and it was decided to limit it to $3 a ticket. The following were named to arrange for same: J. Young, J. Lang, W. Burnham, L. Hafner and C. Weathered. A letter was read from Wm. Plumb, in England, thanking the club for its testimonial. The sum of $150 was set aside for the essay and entertainment committee, with many requests that good results would shortly be shown.

Mr. Withers, on behalf of the exhibition committee, said that the preliminary schedule for the Madison Square Garden show was almost complete, and asked for information on some points. The schedule will be put before the next meeting of the club.

Mr. Wallace moved that a carnation show be held in the club's rooms at next meeting; it was so ordered and the awards committee, Messrs. Birnie, Woerner, Schweinfurth, Duckham and Dailledouze, are requested to arrange for same. The house committee, Messrs. Burnham, Butterfield and Herrington, promise all facilities. A. C. Zvolanek, Grand View, Somerset Co., N. J., exhibited some beautiful new sweet peas, showing remarkable growth. One white named "Florence E. Denzer" gave evidence of considerable value. A pink variety called Improved Christmas was very fine, and another white labeled No. 6 showed much promise. The varieties were awarded honorable mention.

Mr. Birnie suggested that instead of a standing awards committee the chair should appoint specialists on the exhibits offered at each meeting; the matter will be taken up later.

The testimonial to John H. Starin for his kindness during the convention outing was read to those present and was ordered suitably framed.

Mr. Vincent, of White Marsh, Md., was introduced and gave some account of things in his district. He erred, however, when he blamed W. R. Smith, of Washington, for the evils of government seeds, etc. Mr. Smith stands for all that is pure in American horticulture. Several important committees were named and the meeting adjourned.

On Saturday, 19th, Arthur Herrington leaves on the S. S. Umbria for a short visit to Europe.

Business continues fairly good. Rose crops seem to be off and prices are in consequence high. Bulb stock is becoming plentiful. Azaleas are good and constitute the principal flowering plant at present. Many of the craft are ill.

BUFFALO.

There has been a considerable drop in business this week past. It could not keep up at the gait it went during the holidays. There was one very large wedding on Delaware avenue last week at which Mr. S. A. Anderson presided and used many Bermuda lilies and roses. Violets are now coming in very abundantly, but with good roses and carnations there is not yet any too many.

It is usual for every florist to grumble about dark days. They will do it whether we have reason or not. Now, since New Year's we have had a few sunny days, or rather a few hours' sun on some days, but during November we had just one clear day, and in December but one day called clear by the weather man. How can you expect roses and carnations to flower freely under such conditions, and yet we do get more flowers than might be expected. We hear with envy of the clear skies of Denver and many other cities nearer home that are more blessed with sunshine than we are at the foot of these fresh water seas, yet we can console ourselves with the knowledge that when they are blistering with torrid heat or parched with hot winds, sand, grasshoppers and general discomfort, we will have cool, enjoyable, balmy ideal summer weather. A specialty choice assortment has been prepared for the summer of 1901 and will be delivered on time.

I did myself the pleasure a few days ago to visit the large growing establishment of W. J. Palmer & Son. The growing end of the business was the delight of the old gentleman, as we always called him up to the time of his death, but he is there no longer to guide it. Nevertheless we look rather for an expansion of this big place, for W. J., Jr., is not only possessed of excellent business talent, but lots of enterprise as well, and it will be only the best structures, best methods and most advanced ideas that will find a resting place in this establishment.

It is only justice to say that a lad has grown up on this place—was never on any other—and they are often the most valuable of men—an enthusiast, a worker, a lover of his charge, and consequently a great success. This modest but efficient young man is Mr. Barney Myers. I don't know whether he has a wife and bairns, but not likely, as he would not have time to attend to them. I congratulate Mr. Palmer on having such a man to take charge of that important end of the work. The place looks fine. Cutting lots of roses out of three or four long houses. Barney shakes his head at Liberty and says it has to act better yet before it is profitable.

I was most interested in carnations. Lawson was looking just as a small batch of 200 at Corfu looks, and that's wonderful. Whatever difference of opinion there may be about its color, it is certainly the grandest habit of all the large flowered varieties. He likes Marquis as a flower, but up to date it is not free enough. White Cloud was fine enough to please any one, yet they don't like its habit of cropping. Flora Hill when at its best is preferred. Bradt is here grown magnificently and surely it must be most profitable. Suffice to say, they know little or nothing of stem rot in all their houses except among the fine variety Crane, and they are about all gone. With two years' experience with Crane I have not lost a plant from any cause. Now this establishment, either from the yellow clay soil they use for everything or from some other cause, grow old Daybreak to perfection. They would as soon think of discarding Daybreak as they would Bridesmaid rose, and from Daybreak they have three sports which they have whole houses of. One is a pure white, one much like Victor and the other a trifle lighter, with a faint stripe. The average grower would say and with reason, "They are good enough for me."

Pan-American.

Winter has arrested almost all work in the Horticulture Department. All shrubs, roses, herbaceous plants and bulbs have been amply protected. The lily ponds were allowed to form four or five inches of ice, which they quickly did during the cold spell in December. They were then covered with six inches of leaves and on that were spread hemlock boughs. The protection given to everything in the Horticulture Department as well as that of the Department of Works insures the best results in the spring. The Horticulture Building is complete and decorating the interior will soon begin. This is the most handsome of the many magnificent buildings on the grounds. The conservatories are also complete and steam heating is being installed and by the early part of February the conservatories will be ready for occupancy.

Two very large heated sheds have been erected with ample light and heat for the wintering of many large plants destined for the adornment of the grounds. In the greenhouses a great amount of propagating is going on and hundreds of thousands of bedding plants will be needed, for no space where flowers or color can enbance the beauty of the grounds will they be omitted.

Horticulture is perhaps considered a small part of this wonderful exposition, at least by those who take a special interest in electricity, ethnology, manufactures, etc., yet to all visitors the beauty and adornment of the grounds must appeal greatly and add to their enjoyment of the whole.

The Electric Tower has reached its full height and the woodwork and staff covering is nearing completion. It stands now 375 feet high and there is yet a noble statue to crown its summit. I would not pretend to tell you how much electricity will gleam from this great structure, but I do know that there are 300,000 incandescent electric lights on the buildings and grounds, exclusive of the Electric Tower.

The buildings are all roofed in and the interiors are fast nearing completion. The machinery building, the first large one erected, is ready to receive exhibits. The electric current from Niagara Falls was turned on a few nights ago and those who had the good fortune to see this magnificent building illuminated could form some idea of what the whole scene will be when completed.

The midway features are quite distinct from horticulture, yet all members of the profession, from the professor down, like to be amused, and in good, clean, novel and striking features this midway will eclipse all that has ever gone before. The picturesque and costly structures erected by concessionaires constitute a city in itself. While mud has been more a hindrance to work than frost, the winter on the whole has so far been most favorable. Work on the buildings has gone right along and ground work and road making has continued with little interruption.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply has shortened considerably since last report, and there is a scarcity all along the line except in bulbous stock and violets. First-class tea roses are up to $8 and even culls will bring $3 and $4. American Beauties are very scarce and quality poor. Good carnations bring $2 to $3, and fancies as high as $4, while the poorer grades go at $1 to $1.50. The demand is good for the season and the market could take considerable more good stock were it to be had. The principal shortage is in good roses and light colored carnations.

This Wednesday we are being favored with some sunshine again, and if it continues the supply will no doubt quickly improve.

Violets seem to have lost some of their hold on popular favor, as they have averaged rather poor sale this season compared with last, at least in ordinary grades. Those that were extra good seem to have moved all right at good figures, but unless they were markedly superior sales were unsatisfactory.

Business in general has held up fully equal to preceding years since the holidays. The shipping demand is very heavy now.

Carnation Meeting.

Tomorrow (Friday) the annual carnation exhibition and meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in room 517 of the Atlas block, corner Randolph street and Wabash avenue. The exhibition will be ready for inspection by 2 p. m. and the meeting will be held in the same room at 8 p. m.

On the same day there will be an excursion to the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co. at Joliet. The train will leave the Rock Island station at 11:45 a. m. and the party will reach the city again at 3:45 p. m. A special car will be provided by the Carnation Co.

Various Items.

Messrs. Eugene Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y., and William Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., have been visiting the growers in this vicinity.

John Zech is testifying to the fact that misfortunes never come singly. He recently lost one child from scarlet fever, and now another, his 7-year-old daughter, is down with it. And he has himself been laid up off and on with grip.

John Schneider, of Kansas City, arrived recently for a 4-weeks' stay. He is one of the oldest florists of Kansas City, having been there thirty years.

McKellar & Winterson are issuing a weekly bulletin and price-list in which a great variety of supplies are listed in addition to cut flowers.

C. M. Dickinson, Anton Then, Edgar Sanders and Frank Felke have returned from their 4-days' trip through the Indiana carnation belt. They visited Lafayette, Indianapolis, Richmond, Kokomo, Peru and Logansport. At Dorner's Mr. Dickinson was very favorably impressed with Lorna, which he says is a decided improvement on White Cloud. Dorothy, seen at Richmond, was a notably improved Scott. Peru, at Peru, he thought was extra good. At Kokomo he was much impressed with Mr. Coles' "three-decker" Golden Gates.

At E. H. Hunt's the partition that divided the store from the space formerly occupied by A. G. Prince & Co. is being removed and the available room is thereby very much enlarged.

Bowling.

At the series of league games played last Monday night the boys got the bad end of it for three straight games. Following are their scores:

G. Stollery	125	147	192
F. Stollery	166	157	132
J. Degnan	166	152	157
P. Hauswirth	131	135	173
C. Balluff	151	198	141

A series of games to take in all members of the club is now being planned. These are to last till convention time next August, and those with the highest averages to form the convention team.

Some types of Japanese dwarfed trees.

DWARFED JAPANESE PLANTS.

So much has been printed during the last few years regarding the dwarfed plants sent to this country by the Japanese that the accompanying engraving showing various types of these plants will be of interest. Though not beautiful, they are certainly very curious and well illustrate the skill and patience of the Japanese gardener in bending nature to his will. Some of the dwarfed trees seen in the engraving are said to be hundreds of years old and are still grown in pots. The branched cycas in the center of the group is particularly interesting and it and the retinospora just above and to the left possess some beauty. The cherry trees in pots must be very dainty when in bloom. In regard to these products of the art of the Japanese gardener one who has lived and traveled extensively in Japan, now head of the importing firm of H. H. Berger & Co., New York, writes:

"The Japanese gardeners excel in all arts pertaining to horticulture, but stand unrivaled in the dwarfing of various plants. The methods they employ are to this day kept a secret, and in many families certain dwarf specimens are handed down from one generation to the next. It requires infinite patience and care and the stoicism of the Oriental to achieve these wonders of plant life.

"The Japan conifers form the greatest part of the dwarfed trees, the retinospora, pines, larches, etc., though beautiful specimens are seen of fruit trees, maples, bamboos, etc. It requires years to train these plants and their value increases until some very perfect specimens are held at exorbitant figures by their owners, while others are priceless heirlooms.

"These small trees imitate to full perfection all the various characteristics of their large prototypes—the thickness of stem, the spreading branches, the gnarled roots oftentimes protruding from the soil.

"Large quantities of these dwarf trees have of late years been brought to the United States and some have been sold at enormous figures. But it is to be regretted that these dainty exiles do not seem to take kindly to their new home, as most of them lose their leaves and do not thrive well in the close air of rooms, being used to the free and peculiarly soft air of their native climate."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

During the past week trade has been good; in fact ever since the new year began there has been but little if any complaint about business being dull.

Roses are getting to be plentiful and the price on Beauties is from 30 to 50 cents each. On Brides and Maids, $4 to $6, Meteors, $5 to $8, Perles and Wootons, $2 to $4 per 100. These prices are for first class stock. Carnations are plentiful and fine with the demand good. Scotts, Daybreak, reds and whites go at 2 cents; fancy kinds at 3 and 4 cents.

Romans are overplentiful and sell from $1.50 to $2 per 100; paper whites $2 and $3, but not so plentiful; callas $10 and $15; no Harrisii in the market yet. Violets have been quite plentiful and sold as low as 50 cents per 100 for the best. Smilax is very fine, two strings for 25 cents.

Notes.

Mr. E. W. Guy is reported very sick with the grip at his home in Belleville.

R. J. Mohr, of the Botanical Garden, has returned from his visit to his old home in Omaha. Mr. Mohr reports that our old friends, Hess, Swoboda, Henderson, Wilcox and others are doing nicely.

The last issue of the REVIEW was spoken of in St. Louis, by storemen and growers alike, as the best issue ever gotten out among the trade papers.

I am glad that we have, at last, heard from "Rocky" in regard to bowling. We are very glad that Berry, Mauff and Scott are doing so well in the city league. We have a few in our city league with good averages as Kuehn with 210, Ellison 198, and so on. In regard to the challenge during Easter week we will accept on one condition; that is, that the match is rolled in Chicago and the losing team pay all expenses. Now Rocky send on your challenge in writing and you will hear from us by return mail.

Club Meeting.

The January meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was a big one and well attended, thirty members being present. Mr. Ammann, owing to the illness of President Guy, occupied the chair.

The show committee was given one more month in which to settle up the affairs of the last show. The Galveston relief committee made their final report and were discharged.

The next meeting of the club will be the annual rose show and $10 ($5, $3, $2) was donated for prizes.

The carnations on exhibition were fine. W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., exhibited Crane, Lawson, Bradt, White Cloud, Crocker, Wood and Marquis which were of fine quality and were well grown. They were given special mention.

J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., sent a vase of Queen Louise, a fine white, which was given special mention.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., showed Lorna, a fine white which was awarded a certificate of merit, and Morning Glory, which received special mention.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., staged one of the finest lots of carnation blooms ever exhibited at our show. Among them were No. 78, on the order of Bradt; Nydia, good variegated; the famous Lawson; Chicot, variegated; Mrs. J. J. Shedd, a good red; Mrs. Higinbotham, light pink; Sunbeam, shell pink; Prolifica, a good red and Bon Homme Richard, a fine white.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., exhibited Egypt, a dark red, and Norway, a very fine white.

Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., sent Irene, a good pink.

C. Besold, Mineola, N. Y., sent Admiral Cervera and Goethe.

All the above were not entered in competition for the prizes offered by the club.

The following local growers entered for the prizes:

John Stridel staged a fine vase of 50 mixed blooms and captured first prize; J. F. Ammann, second, with a vase of 50 blooms composed of White Cloud, Lord, Crane, Daybreak and Joost; Henry Emundt, third, with 50 White Cloud which were fine; Dr. Halstedt a vase of 50 mixed; J. W. Dunford a vase of fine Melbas and White Clouds and Frank Fillmore a vase of his finest Flora Hills.

The judges for the exhibition blooms were Dr. Halstedt, F. Fillmore and J. W. Dunford; on prize blooms, James Hartshorne, F. M. Ellis and Max Herzog.

After the prizes had been awarded we were favored by Mr. Hartshorne with a few remarks on growing good carnations.

The visitors were H. Johanu, Collinsville, Ill.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Dr. Halstedt, H. Emundt, Adolf Fehr and G. Groshart, Belleville, Ill.; F. W. Ude, Jr., H. G. Ude, W. Winter, Theo. Richter, Kirkwood, Mo.; J. W. Dunford, J. Stridel, Central, Mo., and James Hartshorne, Joliet, Ill.

At the next meeting essays will be read by H. G. Berning, F. C. Weber and J. J. Beneke.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled four games Monday night and some fair scores were made. A. Y. Ellison was not able to be present, owing to his team in the city league rolling the same night. The scores were as follows:

	1	2	3	4	Tot.	Av
J. J. Beneke	174	206	142	522	174
C. A. Kuehn	154	175	147	154	635	159

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Various Items.

Trade has settled down again to its normal conditions and prices are about the same as before the holidays. New Year's day here, like in other cities, has ceased to cause any great activity among the florists. Thanksgiving day seems to have taken its place and how much better it is for all of us who are continually combating floral gluts and famines. Thanksgiving day comes in mighty handy just at that time to clean up the market, which is usually pretty well crowded. After Xmas, trade is rather brisk any way and we can get along nicely without a special rush at New Year's. What we need now is another big day about the middle of February and we hope that the increasing demand for flowers on St. Valentine's day will double and treble until it will rival Xmas in the amount of flowers it will call for.

On Jan. 16 a party of 150 lumbermen started from here on a trip through ten of the southern states and Cuba. They will be gone fifteen days, with five days in Cuba. Mr. A. Wiegand is one of the party and no doubt he will see a good deal of interest on the way.

Meeting of the State Florists' Ass'n.

The State Florists' Association met on the 8th in the horticultural rooms at the state house. This was the annual meeting and many florists from in and out of the city were present. All the old officers were re-elected with the exception of the first vice-president, Mr. Wm. Langstaff, who is succeeded by Mr. Frank Alley. The president in his address suggested that we not only try to make money out of our business, but that we try to save what we do make. He suggested that we build more lasting and substantial houses instead of houses that will rot down in about ten years, like most of them do now. We should save fuel by covering our boilers and large steam pipes with asbestos and many other methods he spoke of in a very interesting and instructive manner. The secretary's and treasurer's reports show the society to be in good condition financially.

A lively discussion was precipitated by a proposition made by Mr. J. Bertermann for holding a fall show. Four florists and four city merchants are to guarantee the payment of all premiums and all other expenses and to take full charge of the show except making out the premium list, which is to be made out by a committee selected from the society. This was afterward amended so that the number of persons taking charge of the show is not to be limited to eight if it is necessary to have more in order to secure a sufficient fund. Further report is to be made at the next monthly meeting.

It was decided to send a pressing invitation to the National Carnation Society to hold its annual convention in this city in 1902.

A fine exhibition was held in connection and some very select stock was displayed. More seedling carnations were expected, but those that were here were fine.

Certificates were awarded to The E. G. Hill Co. for a new rose named White Lady. This seems like a greatly improved Pres. Carnot, and Mr. Hill says it blooms fine all winter. The same firm was also awarded a certificate for a vase of carnation Avondale, which is a pink sport from Armazindy. This firm also showed a light pink of Daybreak shade named Elma, which, unfortunately, were badly crushed in the box. In stem and size it is grand and we are in need of an improved Daybreak. A vase of Marquis was fair, as also was a vase of roses, Liberty and Sunrise.

Stuart & Haugh of Anderson showed a vase of carnation Avondale.

W. W. Coles of Kokomo showed vases of carnations America, E. Crocker and Mrs. Bradt.

Baur & Smith of this city showed vases of fine Jubilee, America and Mrs. F. Joost.

South Park Floral Co. of New Castle showed a fine vase of Bridesmaid roses.

Bertermann Bros. filled a table with foliage plants, orchids and other choice flowers and plants. A tall vase filled with poinsettias showed up grand; also a large vase of mixed carnations. This firm also showed a pan of excelsior brand valley which was fine.

H. W. Rieman also filled a table with plants and flowers, among which were some fine cyclamen and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine plants and some vases of carnation seedlings of his own.

John Hartje showed a vase of a yellow chrysanthemum, which is certainly fine for so late. E. G. Hill is to introduce it this spring.

The Young & Smith Co. of this city showed some excellent Marie Louise violets.

At five o'clock the members as a body were shown through the new Columbia Club building, which is said to be the finest of its kind west of the Alleghenies. Very few of us had ever seen anything like it and all envied those who are fortunate enough to be members of the Columbia Club.

Mr. Herbert Heller of the South Park Floral Co. invited the society to visit their place on Feb. 15, which invitation was accepted.

Mr. E. A. Nelson invited the society to hold its February meeting at his place, which also was accepted.

Visitors from out of town were: E. G. Hill, of Richmond; W. W. Coles, of Kokomo; H. Heller, of New Castle; J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson. A. B.

BENDIGO, AUSTRALIA.—In the Bendigo Advertiser, of Nov. 23, 1900, appears an interview with Peter Barr, in which he says he had never seen any daffodils so beautiful as those in the exhibits at Melbourne.

BEARDSTOWN, ILL.—Frank Bros. have purchased the greenhouse and business of Frank Burtenshaw and will combine same with their own. Mr. Burtenshaw will remove with his family to Detroit.

WORCESTER, MASS. — The Worcester County Horticultural Society has issued its program for 1901. Copies may be had by those interested by addressing A. A. Hixon, secretary, this city.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

Neither supply nor demand is of any weight at present. An exception must be made in the case of violets, because the demand is not very heavy and the supply is plentiful enough so that prices have been falling for a week or more and have now got down to about 35 cents per 100 on poorer grades, and best ones go hard at 75 cents. A cent and a half has been buying a pretty fair pink, but figures struggled up a little at the end of the week, while small roses were very scarce during the last two or three days of it, with a corresponding advance in price upon them. Larger grades were plentiful enough to fill all orders at about $2 per dozen for best, this price being beaten for but few. Bulb goods and lilies continue in plenty; small white flowers getting a little scarce.

Various Items.

The world-famous firm of Lawson, Galvin & Fisher is dissolved. Mr. Peter Fisher carries on the Lawson carnation business at the old stand. He has named his best new white one the "Governor Wolcott." If he can make the plant exist as long as that name will endure in Boston a future is assured. And did you notice that the frontispiece in the Carnation Number of THE REVIEW consisted of a picture of Mr. Fisher's boy with a bunch of his favorite carnations?

Edward S., the 18-year-old son of George Cartwright, has gone to Shasta county, California, to accept a fine position in the Trinidad, Thomas W. Lawson's best copper mine. J. S. MANTER.

A CENTURY CATALOGUE.

We have received a copy of the one hundredth annual catalogue of the firm of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, and it is a fitting one with which to round out a completed century of a successful business. On the cover appears in colors the flower spike of a "Century plant" and a flyleaf inside carries a fine portrait of Grant Thorburn, the founder of the house. There are 116 pages of descriptive matter and interspersed are numerous fine half-tone engravings on enameled paper. We are pleased to see these half-tone engravings from photographs taking the place of the old time catalogue wood cut. They are truthful and satisfying. They cannot be improved upon as a means of giving an accurate impression of the subjects. The catalogue is one that all interested in seeds and plants should have. It is one of those catalogues that you naturally preserve for reference on account of the intrinsic value of its contents.

ALGONA, IA.—J. P. Fohlin is preparing to enter the business here and will erect a greenhouse in the spring.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Claude C. Warburton will build a greenhouse in the spring and will conduct a commercial business.

WE HAVE received from Walter Retzer & Co., Chicago, a copy of their "American Beauty" calendar, which is very dainty and beautiful.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

CHESTNUT HILL, PA.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society was held at Joslin Hall on Tuesday evening, the 8th inst., Vice-President Alexander Stewart presiding. The committees for the year were announced and four new members admitted.

The following premiums were awarded:

For the best plant of Jerusalem cherry and for the best ornamental-leaved begonia—first in both cases, to H. Reuter, gardener to Mr. Chas. W. Henry.

Wm. Kleinheintz took first in each of the carnation classes, with Flora Hill, white; Ethel Crocker, pink; G. H. Crane, red. These vases of 25 blooms each were especially fine, the flowers being unusually large and substantial and carried on good stems.

For the best twelve radishes—first to John Hobson, first assistant gardener with Robert N. Carson.

For the best six mushrooms, best six turnips, fit for table use—first to John Little, gardener to John Lowber Welsh.

For the best six tomatoes, best six ears of field corn—first to Geo. W. Brown, gardener to R. N. Carson.

Mr. John Marsden, who succeeds Mr. Robt. G. Carey as secretary, took care of his new position. It was with considerable regret that the society parted with Mr. Carey's services, as during the past year he had proved himself an able and conscientious worker, but his numerous duties made it impossible for him to continue with the increasing work of the position. H.

DETROIT.

Mr. C. W. Ward, the well-known florist of Queens, N. Y., who is one of the sons of the late David Ward, of Pontiac, Mich, is here and has secured from Judge Geo. W. Smith a temporary injunction restraining the executors of the estate from extending several railways belonging to the estate and investing a large sum in a new lumber mill. The Ward estate is estimated at from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000, and C. W. Ward is one of the six children of David Ward. A hearing has been set for next Saturday, at which a motion to enlarge the injunction so as to further restrain the executors will be heard.

BOSTON, MASS.—Andrew H. Ward, the agricultural chemist, died Jan. 5.

HYGROMETER OR MOISTURE GAUGE.

This Moisture Gauge tells you the difference between dryness and dampness in your greenhouses. We have been testing two of these moisture gauges several months and find they are more indispensible than the thermometer. If you keep this moisture gauge at 70 degrees you will have neither mildew nor red spider in your rose houses. If you keep it at 80 degrees you will not have rust nor red spider in your carnation houses. If you keep it at 85 degrees you will never have fungus in your rooted cutting houses. If you keep it at 75 degrees you will not have decayed leaves in your geranium houses; and if you have a moisture gauge in every house 100 feet long and keep it at above figures you will make at least $100 more per year from each house. Who wants to buy mildewed roses or rusty carnations?

To operate this moisture gauge it is essential to wet the walks in order to get the proper dampness. If your houses are too damp in winter, fire up a little and in the summer time open your ventilators. This has been obtained only by years of experience. Now you can tell your greenhouse hands to keep it at 70 or 80 degrees as you want it, just the same as you tell your fireman to keep the temperature in such a house at 60 degrees. We never had any intention to sell moisture gauges, but they are doing us so much good we have obtained some we can sell at $2.50 each but we think you will want more. These moisture gauges are made in Germany and France. The French machines come at $10.00 each; they are quite an ornament and no cheap truck. We will give one of the $2.50 machines FREE for a $20.00 order for plants, or rooted cuttings, or unrooted cuttings, from our 1901 catalogue, or from our ads. in the trade papers; or we will send you one for $2.50, and after 10 days' trial if you do not like it you may return it and get your money back.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

New Year's day trade was in keeping with that of the previous week, there being a brisk demand for all good stock with no reduction in prices.

The new century was ushered in with a grand ball given at Convention hall. Everything was carried out on a most elaborate scale, it being the intention to make this ball the grandest affair of the kind ever held in Kansas City. The immensity of the decoration may be judged from the fact that twelve car loads of southern smilax, holly and other green material were used, all of which were purchased from the south, and put up under the direction of the committee in charge, consequently the florists' services were dispensed with. The spacious corridor surrounding the hall was turned into a regular forest, all the wood and stone work being completely covered with hemlock and needle pine. This feature of the decoration was much admired. Settees were placed among groves of trees and refreshments served after the style of a summer garden party.

The boxes in the main hall were trimmed with magnolia sprays and artificial flowers used in the absence of real blooms. From the sides and corners of the great hall, massive festoons of evergreens two hundred feet in length extended to a false ceiling or panel formed beneath the steel rafters, which were closely covered with smilax; from the center of the panel depended a huge bell of evergreen fifteen feet in diameter. At every glance whole holly trees could be seen heavily laden with berries. The entree decoration was interspersed with beautiful colored electric lights. Gorgeous indeed were the costumes worn there by the 400 on the night of Dec. 31st; and every lady was either carrying or wearing a bouquet of the best flowers obtainable.

Business remains active, with a scarcity of all kinds of stock. Weather is mild with plenty of sunshine, which ought to make the growers feel happy.

Springfield, Ill.—The W. T. Buckley Plant Co. has succeeded to the business of the South Side Floral Co. H. P. Buckley retires from the business on account of ill health and it will be carried on by his son under the above mentioned title.

The Lehman wagon heater has grown very rapidly in popularity with florists and is now considered indispensable for all deliveries of plants and flowers in cold weather. Its extreme simplicity and inexpensiveness are its great advantages.

NORWAY.

The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A business, money-making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size (3½-in. diam.), length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous, growth free, uninterrupted, continuous profusion of blooms. Flowers open very quickly; no waiting three or four days for them to develop. Like Genevieve Lord it blooms early and keeps it up. We unhesitatingly recommend it to every grower as the best white. If you grow Norway you will not be compelled to grow several varieties in order to keep up a succession. Its sterling worth must it once be apparent.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, $75 per 1000.

READY FEBRUARY 15th.

EGYPT.

Scarlet crimson. The most really good dark carnation which can boast of first-class commercial stems (2½ to 3 feet and a rich spicy odor. It is regal in appearance; possesses all the attributes of a first-class commercial carnation; it is decidedly the best keeper of all dark varieties. Does not bloom as early as some varieties but can be had in good flower by November 1st to 15th. Its rich color, about same shade as Jacqui or Rose, makes it a good seller. The stiff stem gives it that substantial appearance which always insures a good price. It is so distinct that every grower should have it.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to the proud prestige of having superseded the hitherto invincible William Scott. It is not only as good as Scott was in its palmiest days but is actually superior to that variety in every way. Certainly a large claim, but one which is fully borne out by facts. In addition to this, Genevieve Lord commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. A carnation like this is only produced once in a great while. Our stock is in extra fine shape, free from all disease. Ready now. Order at once. It is having a great second year run.

Price $6 per hundred, $50 per thousand.

The above three varieties are a great trio. There is wisdom in placing your order early.

PROSPERITY, ROOSEVELT, IRENE, QUEEN LOUISE, DOROTHY, LORNA, MERMAID and other new varieties at introducers' prices.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TIMOTHY EATON and all other good new varieties; also the best standard sorts.

JOSEPH LABO, Joliet, Ill.

NORWAY. The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A business-making, money-making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size, length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous growth and is a free and continuous bloomer.

EGYPT. Scarlet-crimson and the first really good dark carnation that can boast of first-class commercial stems and a rich, spicy odor. The best keeper of all dark varieties.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1,000. Ready Feb. 15.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to having superseded Scott, and it commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. It is having a great second-year run. Ready now. Price: $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1,000.

Prosperity, Roosevelt, Irene, Queen Louise, Dorothy, Lorna, Mermaid and other new varieties at introducers' prices.

H. WEBER & SONS, Oakland, Md.

BASSETT & WASHBURN, Hinsdale, Ill.

RUSSELL. Again this has proved the most prolific and profitable carnation, giving us so far fully 75 per cent more blooms than Crocker and eight other varieties under same conditions. It never splits its calyx, which Crocker and some others do so badly. After five years' trial, under ordinary culture, it has proved the most profitable and best all-around carnation we ever grew. As large as Scott and of a bright shade of light rose-pink. Strong, well-rooted cuttings now ready at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Ethel Crocker, $3.00 per 100. McGowen Sport, $1.50 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

CHAS. BLACK, Hightstown, N. J.

MADISON, N. J.

The annual "smoker and general good time" of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held in the Masonic Hall, Madison, on Jan. 9th. About 70 members and friends attended and can attest to the great jollity of the occasion.

A short business meeting was held previous to the lighting of the fumagators, and the reports of the secretary and treasurer were most gratifying and encouraging. No man, be he boss or worker, in that section of New Jersey can afford to ignore the value possible in being a member of such a live society.

At the opening of the entertainment Arthur Herrington, on behalf of the members of the society, commenced to puzzle the president and amuse the initiated by a very grave speech on the difficulties of maintaining order and instilling into the minds of the members a proper regard for the dignity of the chair. The genial president was about to rule Mr. Herrington out of order when that gentleman, in a few humorous words, presented Mr. Duckham with a beautiful silver mounted gavel, expressing the hope of every member of the society that he, the president, would always be able to wield it and that it would remind him of the esteem they all had for him. Mr. Duckham was completely taken by surprise and thanked the members for the gift, and more still for their promise of support during the year.

A vote of thanks was given the members who had helped to make the society head the list of winners at the convention exhibition, held in New York last August. Then the committee set to work to distribute the good things. The coffee and "Morristown punch" made by the members were remarkable for quality. I heard many experts say no better celery could be found anywhere, and the many other good things provided were thoroughly enjoyed. The entertainment program consisted of several selections by Mr. Lester, impersonator; Mr. Home, Irish comedian; Stryker and Jackson, plantation songs; Mr. Berry, recitations; Mr. Pile, comic songs; Mr. Foote, ditto; C. Cuilla, mandolinist; Messrs. Hopkins and Klein, soloists; and Mr. Wright, phonograph selections. Mr. P. O'Mara spoke for the Society of American Florists, and J. I. Donlan for the Horticultural Press.

Among the visitors were John P. Cleary, J. W. Withers, P. O'Mara, S. Butterfield and J. I. Donlan, of New York; Malcolm McRorie, John Hayes and George Smith, representing the New Jersey Floricultural Society, of Orange, N. J.; John N. May, of Summit; Messrs. Caparn and Jones, of Short Hills, and several others.

Such nights come too seldom, such societies are too few; it is perhaps unfair to single out any one or a few where so many deserve praise, but we cannot help mentioning the work of the genial secretary, C. H. Atkins, and we wish to thank the society for its kind invitation.

J. I. DONLAN.

SEEDS.

New York exported 1,360 bags of clover seed during the week ending Jan. 5.

A. A. Mather has succeeded T. C. Parkhurst, seed dealer at Canandaigua, N. Y.

Chicago received 414,000 pounds of timothy seed during the week ending Jan. 5; compared with 390,000 pounds a year ago. The shipments were 264,000 pounds; compared with 764,000 pounds.

Clover seed receipts at Chicago for the week ending Jan. 5 were 138,000 pounds; compared with 253,000 pounds a year ago. The shipments were 212,000 pounds; compared with 128,000 pounds.

S. F. Leonard, seedsman, Chicago, who suffered heavy loss by fire a few years ago, has effected a settlement with two-thirds of the insurance companies. The question was as to the cause of loss, fire or explosion.

Receipts of grass seed other than timothy and clover at Chicago for the week ending Jan. 5 were 304,000 pounds; compared with 124,000 pounds a year ago. The shipments were 258,000 pounds; compared with 197,000 pounds.

Clover seed receipts at Toledo, O., for the week ending Jan. 5 were 554 bags; against 1,862 a year ago. For the season to Jan. 5 the receipts have been 48,885 bags; against 103,686 bags for the corresponding period last year. Shipments were 3,793 for the week and 39,500 for the season to date; against 5,800 for the week a year ago and 78,144 bags for the corresponding portion of the preceding season.

J. F. Zahm & Co. write: The receipts of clover seed at Toledo continue very light, and we see no indication of any increase in the near future. Shipments out of here show an increase, most of the seed, however, having been sold several weeks ago. Some dealers say they have been unable to sell any cash seed since the market advanced, but that is only natural. The Eastern buyers are always slow in following the advance when they are in no hurry for the seed.

C. A. King & Co. report that: December receipts of clover seed at Toledo were the smallest for that month in many years. They have been 5,000 bags, against 10,300 last year; 10,200 two years ago; 17,000 in 1897, and 7,300 in 1896. January receipts are generally smaller than the December and may be a little this season. February shows no material change, while March generally shows a large increase, dealers sending in their surplus, which this year is expected to be very small. December shipments were also very small. They were only 3,700 bags, against 12,000 year ago, 4,000 in 1898, 12,800 in 1897, and 1,800 in 1896. —Grain Dealers' Journal, Chicago.

BRADFORD, PA.—W. C. Rockwell, the florist, has a broken shoulder as the result of a bad fall Jan. 10. The fracture is a serious one and Mr. Rockwell's many friends in the trade will learn with much regret of his misfortune.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

This new device seems to be a really useful addition to the list of supports and possesses several advantages over any other we have seen. The "Tendrils" are readily attached to a wire or cane stake and can be easily moved up or down on same afterward, which must be a decided advantage. The price seems reasonable and we are inclined to think they will be largely used when better known. A sample sent to us impressed us very favorably. They are made by H. Thaden, Atlanta, Ga.

CRIPPLE CREEK, COLO.

Trade for the holidays was far ahead of former years. On account of the high price of cut flowers, especially carnations, there were more potted plants sold than ever before.

The Webster Floral Co. report a fine trade in potted plants and cut flowers, especially Beauties.

Hartman & Mason report trade good. They had some very fine carnations and violets.

J. M. Burns, who recently bought the store of Mrs. L. A. Hayes, had a splendid Christmas trade and potted plants sold well. He also reports a number of weddings and large decorations.

Considerable green was used here notwithstanding the high price. Holly was good and sold well.

There are four stores in the district now. Cripple Creek has three (and two greenhouses) and Victor one. As the camp is not ten years old yet this speaks well for the people here. J.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.
GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.
Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.
Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same. M. S. WORDEN.
North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run pretty low before you can go on to sleep or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.
Hartford, Conn. GEO. S. OSBORN.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.
BOBBINK & ATKINS.
Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.
Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time. N. ZWEIFEL.
Milwaukee, Wis.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.
BENJAMIN HAMMOND.
Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all the florists. Its useful and instructive contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.
C. C. POLLWORTH CO.
Milwaukee, Wis.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.
JOHN WELSH YOUNG.
Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.
Columbus, O. B. BUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point. W. A. KENNEDY.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.
Macomb, Ill. F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.
Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.
Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.
Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
Madison, N. J. A. J. BAUR.

If everyone has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.
Flushing, N. Y. H. D. DARLINGTON.

I am more than pleased with the Florists' Manual. OTT BROWN.
Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.
Joliet, Ill. JAS. HARTSHORNE.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progressive age of the florists' business. J. T. TEMPLE.
Davenport, Ia.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books among which is your "The Florists' Manual."

After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,
COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS. R. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Supt.
Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his appreciating friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Publishers, Florists' Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.

From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial culture in America, have appeared, but, so far as we know, have not been up to the mark; but the teachings within have certainly been in the years rolled by since the first appeared, to a less extent only, of the growing mutability in methods of the Manual containing, as it does, the most thoroughly up-to-date practice, as it should, should meet with a hearty welcome from all engaged in the florists' trade in America. Not only will it be found a valuable work of reference, in matters both general and detailed, by the trade in general, but the amateur gardener, the handy man, and the young beginner, will find in it a mine of information, and a handy guide to the best methods to adopt. Nearly 200 illustrations of the most prominent and useful plants and flowers in commercial value, the graphic and the true conveying greatest attention.—Florists' Exchange.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists, a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. As will be seen in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it must not be confined to circulation among the florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect it of a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e. "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a consideration which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

PINK AMERICAN BEAUTY.

"We are convinced that this variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect, except color, the exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good, even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as fine as that of Beauty, and the exhibited blooms showed remarkable vigor."

A CARNATION MEETING.

The annual carnation meeting and exhibition of the Chicago Florists' Club was held Jan. 18.

The exhibition was, as usual, a most attractive feature, and many promising new varieties were displayed. We present herewith engravings from photographs taken specially for the REVIEW that will, we believe, give an idea of what the display was like. The committee on awards reported as follows:

Seedlings Scored.

Mme. Chapman, 72 points.

White Daybreak (W. P. Harvey), 79 points.

Queen Louise (The committee regrets the variety showed signs of suffering from shipment), 81 points.

Irene, 82 points.

Lorna, 90 points.

Egypt, 82 points.

Norway, 92 points.

Elinora, 82 points.

Guardian Angel (Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum), 85 points.

Mrs. Higinbotham, 80 points.

No. 78 of Chicago Carnation Co., 82 points.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, 77 points.

No. 101 of Chicago Carnation Co. (white), 90 points.

Pink Armazindy (Wietor Bros.), 78 points.

Guardian Angel (P. Reinberg), 85 points.

Pink Armazindy (M. Weiland), 75 points.

Daybreak sport shown by H. Luedke, Lake Geneva, Wis., no improvement over a well grown Daybreak; no award.

General Display.

Well grown blooms of standard sorts were exhibited as follows:

Peter Reinberg: Crane, Marquis, Genevieve Lord, Peru, White Cloud, Melba, America, Lawson and Frances Joost. Also Golden Gate and Liberty roses.

W. P. Harvey: Evanston.

Bassett & Washburn: Red Bradt (extra fine), Marquis, Maceo, Lawson.

Nathan Smith & Son: White Cloud, Melba.

F. Dorner & Sons Co.: Morning Glory.

H. Weber & Sons: Genevieve Lord (extra fine),

R. Witterstaetter: Enquirer (extra fine).

Wm. Kurtz: Scott, Armazindy.

Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum: Lawson, Armazindy, White Cloud.

Wietor Bros: White Cloud, Marquis, Triumph, Flora Hill, America, Crane (extra fine), and pink Armazindy.

Anton Then: Lawson (the best Lawson in the house), Hill, Mrs. Dean, Bradt, Argyle, Triumph, Crane, Chicago, Joost and Daybreak.

M. Weiland: Chicago, Pink Armazindy, Gov. Griggs, Gomez, Lord, Argyle, America, White Cloud, Crane, Evanston, Marquis (extra fine), Bradt, Estelle, Melba, Daybreak, White Daybreak. Also vase of cyclamen flowers.

John Hoeft: Hill, Triumph and Jubilee

Eli Cross: A fine collection of violets.

In considering the awards it should be borne in mind that some flowers were staged several hours before others, which was hardly fair to those first in position.

The committee is informed that exhibits of Prosperity and Gov. Roosevelt are on the way, but have been delayed; the flowers have not arrived in time to be judged.

W. N. RUDD,
CHAS. KNOPF,
E. R. GESLER.

Of the seedlings shown by the Chicago Carnation Co., Mrs. Potter Palmer is a red; No. 101, white; No. 78, a variegated in the way of Olympia; Mrs. Higinbotham, a light pink.

The vase of Enquirer, shown by R. Witterstaetter, was magnificent, the blooms being considerably superior to those shown here at previous exhibitions. It is seen in one of the pictures.

A vase of Genevieve Lord, shown by H. Weber & Sons, was also worthy of special note. The blooms were superb and better than we have ever seen before. Their Norway is certainly a very promising white, and Egypt is an attractive light crimson.

Lorna, as shown by F. Dorner & Sons Co., also showed marked progress in whites, and their vase of Morning Glory further emphasized the value of this variety as a light pink.

J. L. Dillon's vase of Queen Louise attracted much attention and was favorably commented upon as a commercial white, though the flowers unfortunately showed the stains of travel.

Crabb & Hunter had on display two great bunches of Irene and they made a grand display. It is certainly very effective.

Bassett & Washburn's flowers were all extra and the blooms of Red Bradt were the finest we have ever seen. What's the matter with this variety as a strictly first class red? Is there yet anything to beat it in either size or color?

Mme. Chapman, pink, was shown by Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich. It's a pretty flower.

The displays by Wietor Bros. and Anton Then were very comprehensive and the quality was strictly first class without exception.

M. Wieland's display also included many varieties, all well done. But a vase of Estelle seemed especially good. It was better than when shown here some time ago by the originator. Mr. Peter Wieland, who has entire charge of his father's big range of glass at Evanston, is only 23 years of age, and the blooms shown certainly reflect the greatest credit upon so young a grower.

The quality of blooms in the display by Peter Reinberg was uniformly extra, and we were much pleased to see the Liberty rose in form about as good as when grown by the originators. It is evident that the needs of this rose have been met at this establishment and all will agree that such blooms will have a place near the top in the market. The Golden Gates were also superb and must have been a revelation to many as to the possibilities in this rose.

The violets shown by Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids, Mich., were Imperial, Campbell and Swanley White. The dark color and size of the Imperial should make it very popular if productiveness is up to the mark.

It is much to be regretted that Prosperity and Roosevelt, the stars in anticipation, did not arrive in time to be shown. Everyone was asking for them. They did arrive the next morning and the vase of Roosevelt was on display Saturday at McKellar & Winterson's, while Prosperity was to be seen in the window at Vaughan's.

Roosevelt is certainly ideal in form and stem, and the color is a beautiful shade of crimson. In size the flowers measured a good plump two and one-half inches in diameter and they arrived in such perfect condition it was difficult to believe they had traveled clear from the Atlantic coast.

Prosperity showed the stains of travel, but the blooms nevertheless told what they were like when fresh. It certainly is a huge flower, some of those in this lot measuring three and one-half inches in diameter. Were the petals a little more numerous it would probably have carried a little better. The color is white with a suffusion of pink on each petal, and the size is such that the attention of the average passer-by is instantly attracted.

The management of the exhibition fell almost wholly upon Ed Winterson, who put in his time hustling while the rest of us were enjoying ourselves on the excursion to Joliet. Mr. Winterson isn't much on dress suits and things of that sort, but he is long on hustle and muscle. The photographer managed to include him in one of his groups and he will be discovered in one of the pictures.

At the meeting of the club in the evening the final report of the Galveston fund committee was accepted and the committee discharged with the thanks of the club for the service rendered.

Messrs. John P. Risch, Evanston, and Thos. Archer, St. Joseph, Mich., were elected to membership.

President McAdams in introducing Mr. Hartshorne, the essayist of the evening, spoke of the great advancement made in the new carnations as noted at the exhibitions from year to year. Mr. Hartshorne's paper follows:

SOME CARNATION QUESTIONS.

BY JAMES HARTSHORNE.

Mr. President and Gentlemen: You have asked me three quite important questions. First, Is the bottomless pot a success? Second, What new varieties of the season give the most promise? Third, Is early lifting in summer preferable? I can only state my own experience, and should it not coincide with your views there will be all the more chance for discussion of the subjects herein mentioned.

To begin with I can say very little for or against bottomless pot culture of carnations, as I have not tried the method myself, but I have seen it in use where the variety Mrs. F. Joost was used. At planting time the thriftiest plants were selected for the pots, the next best were planted out on the same bench in the ordinary way. The same treatment has been given both lots, and at the present time both batches look alike, so that would lead most of us to believe that there was no special advantage in the bottomless pot for carnation culture. But the way it appeals to me, it should be a good thing, as it keeps the plants and foliage from resting on the beds, affording a better circulation of air through and underneath the plants, causing less stem rot and keeping them in a healthier and stronger condition, thus enabling them to take up more stimulants.

I do not for a moment believe there is enough in its favor to ever warrant a large grower to adopt its use entirely, but if I had a small place I think it would be worth a fair trial, for if I could grow only a trifle better grade with it, it would be quite a feature in enabling me to hold my own with the growers who have a large amount of glass. I was informed a day or two ago that Dorner is using it very successfully and is well pleased with his experiment so far.

What new varieties of the season give the most promise? The question as I understand it refers to introductions of 1900. I am not in as good a position to answer this as one would be who had speculated in all the novelties in equal proportion. I settled the question in my own mind last spring, as every grower should aim to do. I place Lawson at the head of the list, Marquis next, and a toss up between the others. We are growing those two by the thousands, while we have the others by the hundreds only, in quantity perhaps hardly large enough for us to say much in regard to them. I believe Morning Glory to be a very good commercial sort in its color, a very pale pink. As I have seen it, it is a very free bloomer and those are the ones that make the money when grown by the average florist.

The Lawson I always thought, and am now thoroughly convinced, is the best carnation ever offered to the trade, and when other growers have mastered its peculiarities as we have, there is not the least doubt in my mind but that they will agree with me. I predict for it a great future and a longer standing than any other now in commerce. Marquis, too, is a most beautiful color, large, well formed flowers, and is a money maker, I believe, as we grow it. It is perhaps too early for anyone to pick the positive winner of the others, though I must say Genevieve Lord is the best warm weather carnation I ever grew.

Is early lifting in summer preferable? There is no doubt of it. Most every one is planting earlier than formerly. Even growers who never planted before September are now planting in July or first part of August. Why? Because they saw their competitors too far ahead of them. Since they have adopted the new method they are right in it for high prices. There are certain hard wooded varieties, Lawson for instance, and any variety that is slow to establish roots in the greenhouse, must be planted early to insure success. It has been generally understood and I think conceded by indoor growers that a larger amount of blooms can be produced from late planted stock, but I'm inclined to think that even that point will not be conceded when we become more accustomed to indoor growing or early planting. We have a large quantity of stock that was planted late last fall that will not give anywhere near the number of blooms as stock of the same varieties planted in July; even should it do so the first crop was short stemmed and sold for just a verse of a ragtime song. The second was cut in time for the holidays, and if we get the third it will be so late in the season that we can not expect fancy prices, whereas we can always demand a fair price for blooms of stock planted early, and can depend upon a more even supply throughout the year.

I don't think it is absolutely necessary to plant in before August first, but as soon after as possible, and if they are all housed by that date so much the better. If we have unfavorable carnation weather outdoors, to better advantage will the indoor stock show up; if favorable, then the difference will not be so marked.

Display by Peter Reinberg at the Carnation Meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

Mr. Hartshorne then read some verses he had written for the occasion as follows:

Carnations new, I've raised a few,
Though none, perhaps, to beat old Jube.
Other growers have done the same,
But they'll have to try again.

We hear it said we want a red;
The other fellow shakes his head.
We've reds enough; no more bluff—
Of red carnations we've enough.

We need a white. It beats my life
The number that have come to light
Only to stay a year, or, say—
We've dropped them 'cause they wouldn't pay.

White Cloud is good; so is Hill,
But many swear by McGowan still.
If you're all the same as me
You'll try Norway, Lorna or Bon Homme.

At a casual glance we've pinks galore,
But nothing wonderful; and what's more,
If we had, they wouldn't suit
Every blithering big galoot.

Should I call Marquis "all right"
Some one sure would want to fight.
A year ago we all had
One to beat the Lawson had.

But it's ne'er materialized,
Though you may laud it to the skies.
Should you think so any more,
Ship it down to Baltimore.

That's the place to try the test,
For the judges there do their best.
As far as exhibitions go—
You'll surely get what credit's due.

The trouble with us all is that
We want a bloom as big as a hat—
A plant to give a hundred at least.
Where will it come from, West or East?

And so it goes. From year to year
Some one sends out another peer.
The one supposed to beat them all
Generally takes the heaviest fall.

In the discussion that followed, Thos. Dale, Brampton, Ont., said that while Canada was ready to admit that it couldn't produce carnations equal to those on exhibition it held firmly to a front position in rose growing. He told of growing roses in beds made of clay brick and tile with 4½ inches of soil on top, and said that plants bedded as late as the middle of August were now five to six feet tall and with foliage to the ground. He described the construction of the 800-foot rose houses erected recently on the Dale estate. They grow some violets and Farquhar does well with them. They think a good deal of Princess of Wales and find they can get 50 cents a hundred more for the singles than for the doubles.

W. L. Kring, Fairbury, Ill., said he liked Lawson best among the novelties. He uses much more water than is usually recommended for carnations and has success. His soil is a very black loam and he maintains a temperature of from 48 to 52.

Chas. Knopf, grower for E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., noted that fancy carnations have not averaged as high in price as last year and wondered whether the fancy carnation was being overdone. The soil he uses is a yellow clay with a little sand. He mulches but never feeds liquid. He runs the plants very cool, often down to 40, and 46 is considered high. He gives but little water and an abundance of air.

He follows what has been called the "Groove" system. After the plants are benched no shade is given and the amount of water given is small. A groove is drawn in the soil between the rows and water is given in this groove only, the idea being to keep water away from the soil around the plant that it may keep loose and not be packed down. The dry loose soil acts as a mulch and it is better for the plant. The latter part of September a mulch is applied and the plants are then watered once in one or two weeks. This mulch is now full of young feeders. In response to a question he said he had seen the new pink carnation Dorothy and was free to admit that it was a good one, even if it did originate at the establishment where he is grower.

Fr ller. H. Weber & Sons.

Flowers at the Carnation Meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

E. R. Gesler, Galesburg, Ill., still grows Jubilee and likes it. He propagates early and gets as many flowers as from Crane. He considers Ethel Crocker a good one for a grower who retails his flowers, but fears it will not prove a good shipper. He will increase the space devoted to it at his place. He likes the Marquis. He believes that no variety should be condemned upon but one season's trial, and that not until the second season can it be definitely determined whether a variety is suited to your soil and conditions.

E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., was interested to learn that one grower grew White Cloud very wet and another very dry, both reporting success. He thanked the Chicagoans for courtesies received.

Anton Then said he never kept himself on the dry side and treated his carnations just as he did himself, only the carnations were restricted to water alone. He told of a recent trip of a party of which he was a member through the Indiana carnation belt and from his description the trail must have been a warm one.

Peter Weiland told of how he had been stimulated to try for higher quality by the fine blooms shown at previous exhibitions, and how he had this year dared to bring in some blooms to compare with the best work of others.

J. T. Anthony said if he could have suitable weather for planting carnations inside in July he would plant in at that time, but if the weather was hot then he would wait until the temperature fell to 70 degrees if he had to wait till October. He had found that plants put under glass when the temperature was high always did poorly and were often beaten by plants benched during a cool spell at a much later date.

Votes of thanks were passed to those who had sent flowers for exhibition and to the Chicago Carnation Co. for the enjoyable excursion to their establishment at Joliet.

CARNATION NOTES.

Treatment of Cuttings.

Those Mrs. Bradt cuttings and perhaps a few other varieties you put in sand last December will be about ready to be taken out and potted now. Use 2 or 2½-inch pots for the first potting as they will need a shift in March into 3 or 4-inch pots to keep them growing nicely until planting time. From 2 to 3-inch makes a nice shift, but if potted into 2½-inch they will need a 4-inch when shifted. Use the same soil as you do for planting on the benches, but run through a screen of ½-inch mesh for first potting and add a little sand, say one-sixth.

If you grow only a few hundred Mrs. Bradt it will pay you to plant from 4-inch pots if you can spare the room when they need shifting. With all those varieties that make very little grass it pays to grow as strong a plant as possible before planting out time. Keep them pinched and get as many shoots started as possible; they will break more readily early in the spring inside than they will outside in summer and if you can have about ten or twelve shoots started before planting out they will need no more pinching but they can spread out into a compact plant and be ready to house by Aug. 1.

If you grow Mrs. Bradt inside all summer, and I think it is the best way to grow it, it will pay you to plant on the bench from 2½-inch pots in April instead of shifting them. They will take hold better while the weather is cool and will make a stronger growth on the bench than in pots. Nearly every place has a bench, or part of one, that is not doing any good and it will pay well to clear it off and replant with young stock of Mrs. Bradt or some other variety that needs indoor culture.

Last spring we fired a house of poor roses the first week in May and planted with Mrs. Bradt, Jubilee and America and we are being well repaid for the extra month and the early start we gave them on the benches. It is a mistake to plant inside in June, or later, the same sized plants as you plant outside in April. By the time hot weather sets in they should be nice bushy plants so that when rapid growth recommences in the fall they can be allowed to come right into bloom. The same applies to those in the field if they are to be housed in August. Many growers do not pot their carnation cuttings at all, but plant them on benches in two to three inches of soil and two to three inches apart each way between the plants according to the variety and the length of time they are to remain there. This method produces stronger plants than do those in pots as the growth is more rank on account of the roots having more freedom. There is not the danger of stunted growth from being pot bound and there is a large saving of room. Plants that are grown this way if planted out under favorable conditions will take hold and start off just as well as those grown in pots, but the latter will stand a dry spell right after planting much better because there is not so much disturbance of the roots when they are transferred to the field. On some places they are planted in flats made of light material and of a convenient size and these are raised up on shelves near the glass. This is a good idea (if care is exercised in watering as they are apt to dry out quickly) as it keeps them near the glass which is important in producing good young stock and they can be moved around when necessary. We are apt to set the young potted plants just wherever we happen to find room, which is a great mistake. They should be near the glass and have the full sun except during the first week after the first potting, when they should be shaded on bright days. Remember that these young plants are to be your blooming stock next winter and the very best of care is none too good for them. Surely a plant can be expected to do better when well taken care of from the beginning than when it is neglected one-half of its real growing season and then overfed and pushed along the other half. The growth will be more steady and sturdy and the plant will be in better shape to produce high grade blooms. The temperature should be the same as the blooming plants are kept in, about 50 degrees.

Buying Rooted Cuttings.

If you expect to buy rooted cuttings of any varieties of carnations you should make up your mind and place your order at once. Have your cuttings delivered in February so you can get them growing in good shape before planting time, the same as your own propagating. You will get much better stock if you place your order early and say "ship when well rooted," than you will if you wait until the last minute and then insist on having them at once. If you give the shipper plenty of time and allow him to use his own judgment in regard to the time of delivery you can insist on receiving good stock and you are likely to get it, too.

Of course you will want to try a few of each of the novelties that are to come out this spring and you should get in your orders at once. There will not be enough of some of them to go around and you may get poor stock, or none at all, if you wait too long before ordering. You do not need a thousand of each variety, nor even a hundred, unless you have reason to think that it is a good one and that it will do well with you. Twenty-five or fifty plants will enable you to judge pretty well what a variety will do for you and will give you a good start with any variety that does show up well. Get at least a few of as many varieties as you can afford even if you get several of the same color, because they may differ in every other respect save color. By doing this each year you can keep yourself posted on all the new varieties as they come out and that done is worth a good deal.

Of course a large percentage will not show up even with some of the older ones but it may not be the fault of the varieties. Unless a variety does extra fine with others or unless the originator showed extra fine blooms of it, it will not pay you to bother with a variety that does not like your treatment. You can get others that will do well unless you are badly off. If you do buy a large quantity of a variety try to find out as much as possible about its habits and requirements, so you will not be working in the dark. The originator will have about three years' experience and ought to be willing and able to help you grow it right.

CARNATIONS IN CANADA.

A very pleasant and social meeting was held at the establishment of the Dale estate, Brampton, on Tuesday, the 15th inst., at which about fifteen of the trade were present, coming from Toronto, London, Galt, Stratford and Berlin, each one bringing an exhibit, large or small as he was able. The morning was spent in going over the vast area covered with glass, discussing the various varieties of carnations, roses, violets, etc., etc., their likes and dislikes, their good and bad habits, their usefulness and money-making qualities, Mr. Edw. Dale, the manager, acting as guide. This took up the whole morning and part of the afternoon and it was not until 3:30 p. m., after the party had partaken of much needed refreshments (generously supplied by the estate), that the secretary was able to call the meeting proper, in the packing room.

Each one set his own flowers out in vases, Mr. J. H. Dunlop took the chair, and the merits and demerits of each variety were discussed, each one present giving his experience. The result was most interesting and instructive and it is to be hoped that this informal meeting will be an annual affair and not allowed to drop like so many other good things. Mr. Fred Dicks, of London, had thirteen varieties, amongst which was of course Eldorado, which Mr. D. always grows to perfection; Improved McGowan, Marquis, Van Horne, E. Crocker, Mrs. Bradt, etc. Mr. J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, had Morning Glory in fine condition, Estelle (a lovely red but slow of propagation), Elinora, E. Crocker, G. Lord, Mrs. B. Lippincott, etc. Mr. Wm. Gammage had some very good Mary Wood, of which he says 90 per cent came "selects," Marquis, G. Lord, Lippincott, etc.

Mr. Dale picked some magnificent Crane, Cerise Queen (which he always grows well), Glacier, Melba, Morning Glory, etc.

On a vote being put to the meeting for the best pink carnation shown, Morning Glory took the cake, Melba and E. Crocker were tied for second place. G. H. Crane was the unanimous choice as the best scarlet, and Mrs. Bradt as the best fancy. Glacier came in ahead as the best white; White Cloud, second. It was the general opinion, though, that another white is wanted to take the place of McGowan, which, though not quite dead yet, has one foot in the grave. Scott also appears to be degenerating, but will be grown by many for some time yet.

Those present were Messrs. Common and Wells, of Galt; Dunlop, Manton, and Muston, from Toronto; Gammage and Dicks of London; Neal, of Stratford; Ewing, of Berlin; Fendley, Jennings and Dale of Brampton.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The exhibition to be held in Baltimore, Feb. 21st and 22nd, will be the greatest ever held by the society. About 200 of Baltimore's best ladies will act as patronesses of the show. The hall, which is a handsome one, for the occasion will be appropriately decorated and the abundant space at our disposal will enable us to display any and all of the carnations that may be sent or brought.

The liberal premiums offered should bring out a good display of the standard sorts and every grower who has a new one of merit will make the mistake of his life if he does not bring it to this show.

Carnation men will please make a mental note of this and any one desiring a premium list can secure one by applying to the secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

CARNATION RECORDS.

I have three new carnation houses, each with two center benches 6½x124 ft., a walk in the center of the house and one on each side. Short span house, ridge and furrow style, heated by hot water. Place is up to date in all respects. I wish to plant these houses to carnations of the best standard sorts, not the extra fancy, but stock that will produce good, fair-sized blooms and a profitable number per plant or square foot of bench. What sorts will pay the best? Will the experienced readers of the Review please tell me? I would like to hear from as many as possible and believe that the replies will greatly interest many others besides myself.

I would like especially to know the number of blooms each variety has produced the season through. How much should I expect to receive per hundred square feet of bench surface (gross)?

I have talked with large growers who could not tell exactly which variety produced the most flowers or paid the best. They could only say that they thought this sort or that was the best to grow. It seems to me that we ought to have no difficulty in knowing with absolute accuracy. Certainly some growers must have something beside guesswork. May it makes the price of roses or carnations seem to be higher than they other wise would be—or if they do not, they are getting nothing for the labor expended in growing or the money expended in buying the vexatious greens. A civil explanation should make this plain to reasonable patrons, and if the cinths and Von Sions were flowering out of doors, that is, those that have been protected with boards or a sash up till the first of the month.

It is so near the flowering time for both of these bulbs that I would say for any season two weeks in the greenhouse is ample time. Tulips require a little we readers of the REVIEW not be favored with some cold facts by them?

My market is a wholesale commission house in a city of 400,000. Prices range from $1.00 to $3.00 per 100 during the winter months for good, long, clean stock of Daybreak, Scott and Hill; Crane and that sort of fancies, from $2.00 to $6.00.

Can we not all help one another by a free and open discussion of the value of varieties, by publishing in the REVIEW our records of actual results; guesswork to be barred? I shall gladly contribute my results when I have any. Just now I want to save any useless expense in demonstrating to myself what other growers already know and can tell me off hand—at least those who keep actual records and don't depend on their "guesser." Hoping to hear from a number of such, I am, yours for PROSPERITY.

ABOUT GREENS.

Your always entertaining and usually instructive correspondent "Ivera" in a recent article refers to the above subject in a despairing way, and his moan is no doubt echoed by many florists in different localities. Those who have got into the habit of giving something valuable to those who are not entitled to it and getting nothing valuable in return, have themselves to blame for such an unbusinesslike proceeding, notwithstanding the fact that the bad habit has been established so long that its correction would be difficult and lead to hard feelings on the part of the recipients of their bounty.

When these complainants buy a pound of tea, they do not expect the grocer to throw in enough sugar to sweeten it, and if any of them will give a reasonable explanation of why they throw in enough garnishing to properly set off the flowers they sell I for one will listen.

It costs as much or more to grow adiantum and asparagus as it does to grow roses and carnations; and if they give it away they must either charge enough more for the flowers to pay for the greenery—which would be unwise, as unreasonable ones could not get their foliage for nothing they would either do without or pay for it, as they should.

In our own practice we charge a fair price for what we sell, whether it be plants, flowers or leafage; and our customers understand this, and are satisfied. If flowers are plentiful, we put in a rosebud or two, or two or three carnations extra to the dozen, and these being unexpected are a pleasant surprise and appreciated, and let the buyer know that we do not withhold the green on account of meanness, but for simple business reasons.

Ivera also asks why carnations "are stripped of every bud or leaf of their own." He could probably answer as to the buds as well as any one. It is to obtain the large flowers that the buyers demand. If he means that the growers should cut buds and send with the open flowers, I think any of them would be willing to do this if they were paid for as flowers; for to the grower they are just as valuable. Those who strip the leaves off the stems of their carnations have mistaken their vocation. They should be in a butcher shop.

BULBS FOR EASTER.

When should Dutch hyacinths and Von Sions be brought in from cold-frames to be in flower for Easter? Also tulips? When should lilies be brought in to be in time for Memorial Day? T. D. B.

The above has been many times ventilated through the columns of the REVIEW. Circumstances alter cases. By that I mean there can be no definite number of days set aside to bring out these Dutch bulbs for Easter, as it depends so much on the weather we have had previously and still more on the date when Easter arrives. Easter is fairly early this year and we may have very cold freezing weather up to that time. We have seen Easter as late as the 25th of April and I remember that then the Dutch hyamore but that also depends very much on the weather. To be safe I would give the early single tulips about 20 days and the double tulips a few days more. Allowing these times is supposing that we are giving the bulbs just an ordinary greenhouse temperature and that is all they should want at any time.

T. D. B. does not say what lilies, but presumably he means the Japanese longiflorums as they are much the best for Memorial Day. Two years ago we had 2,000 of these Japans and brought them out just exactly right for Memorial Day and they were a great acquisition. We kept them during winter in a cool greenhouse, about 45 at night, and let them come along without any forcing of any kind. With the increased heat from the sun during the month of April and May they came in just right. I would say that if you have them now two or three inches high they would be in good order. Keep them about 45. Remember that after the first of April we have so much sun that they come along very rapidly and they are more likely to be too early than too late.

If they are the Bermuda strain of bulbs that you are trying to keep for this late date then I would say they should be kept in a well protected coldframe or a house where the thermometer is below 40 at night or they will be too early. WM. SCOTT.

A VIOLET EXPERIENCE.

Experience is a costly teacher in growing violets as well as in any other business, yet you sometimes try and find out things that you already knew, or ought to have known, before trying the experiment. Now for a case in point:

Last season we added a small house for violets, about 20x45, planted it out in good season and had as nice looking a house as you could wish to see, healthy and clean, and we flattered ourselves that we would have a nice cut from that house. But, like all other violet growers, we have to fight the brown aphis, and along in the early part of November we found that we had got to give them a "smoker."

Now, from the situation of the house and our very strong dislike of using hydrocyanic acid gas when it can be avoided, we said we will give it a very heavy dose of aphis punk and see if we cannot "do them." This was on Friday night, and we proceeded, using 16 rolls. The next morning we aired up, looked things over and thought that we had done pretty well, but I wish that every grower that is tempted to go and do likewise could have followed us into that house early Sunday morning. Alas! alas!! One needed a whole bottleful of cologne under his nose and he would wish that he were blind, for such a sight I never saw before and never want to see again.

The plants had gone flat with the "spot" in one night as the result of our "smoker." Do I hear you ask if we have used tobocco for violets since? Well, my word for it, our other houses do not and have not looked like that.

Now for the rest of the experience (which was started so quickly and expensively) to date with that house. We had nothing to fill it with and wanted to learn all we could. We therefore picked off all the spot and burned it, following this up for several days until we had the plants in the state of the undressed kid in your carnation number. We were in hopes that they would throw out new leaves and recover, as they were very strong and had not been disturbed by moving, having been grown in the house all summer. They have gradually improved until now you would not think that they had had such a siege. But we have picked practically no flowers from the house until last week, when we got about 500, and this week will get about 1,000. They are full of buds, with a fair showing for the balance of the season, too late, of course, for a profitable violet house.

This is not the kind of experience one cares to tell about, and yet I tell it in hopes that someone may be deterred from trying the same thing, whether they know better or not. R.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Crimson Ramblers.

I tried some Crimson Rambler roses this winter; lifted from the ground end of November and shipped from the nursery by express without delay and at once potted and stood in a cool house and kept syringed. They are not yet showing any sign of breaking or even swelling the eyes and I have no faith in them, and after this fair and, I believe, competent trial, I would never again bother or attempt to produce good Ramblers for Easter by this method.

The plants that we purchased last spring and cut down and started in pots made good canes during summer, and now, after a rest during October and November and a little frost in December, they are, after being mulched and brought into a house at New Year's at about 50 degrees at night, breaking vigorously at every eye; and so I believe in this plan and know that we shall have fine plants of Ramblers for Easter. Not thirty plants out of 100 lifted from the ground, but 100 good plants for every hundred you started last spring. I merely mention this now because the difference in the two methods is evident today.

Don't force any of the roses at present. Let them come along slowly at a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. When they are out in the leaf they endure a higher temperature much better if necessary. Last year we found 55 degrees at night finished off the Ramblers in good style, but they will stand higher than that if you must hurry them the last three weeks.

Asters.

Asters have of late become very important flowers with the retail florist and our customers are glad to buy them because they are a change. In early February some seed of the early kinds can be sown and will well repay the labor given them. There is sometimes a violet bench in which they can be planted out for the few weeks before putting them into the open ground, or if that is not available they will pay to give them a 2-inch pot. I cannot give you any advice about varieties. I would only say, don't hesitate to pay a good price for the best strain you can get. I would just mention here that although it is yet very early to sow Semple's strain of asters, you should never sow these asters late. They are very late with us and if planted too late they are caught by the frost in many localities.

Mignonette.

Mignonette that is growing in pots intended for Easter should have the fullest possible light and on all possible occasions the fullest ventilation. A night temperature of 40 degrees is enough. The object is to get them short and bushy. Last year we had them in 7 and 8-inch pots and they were 18 to 20 inches in diameter. This we found was larger than desirable. This year we have them in 5-inch pots and can afford to sell them for 75 cents to a dollar.

Moderate Priced Plants for Easter.

I have often had occasion to remark that at Easter we need a plant for the moderate sized purse. We never found this more to be the case than last year. We have lilies and azaleas and Rambler roses and other plants that cost from a dollar up, and we also have. I am aware, the hyacinth for 25 cents; but the little boy or girl wants something more lasting than the hyacinth, and a great number of 25 or 30-cent plants could be sold if we had them.

I don't know anything that will fill the bill better than the zonal geranium. A few hundred plants of some of the good double varieties (none better than S. A. Nutt) that were propagated in the fall can be selected, and if they are now in 3-inch, put them into 4 or 4½-inch pots; with the center just pinched out they will soon break, and if kept in a light, warm house will be very attractive plants by the middle of April and should have two or three trusses of flowers.

The flowering of a geranium greatly depends on the soil. They don't want a rich soil such as you would give fuchsias or begonias. It may be somewhat rich, but should be rather heavy and by all means firmly potted. Give the plants a light, warm house, say 55 degrees at night, and you will soon have them in bloom, and there is something about a geranium that the "common" people never tire of because they know its utility. Wm. Scott.

ROSE NOTES.

Feeding.

Of the various fertilizers none is better and safer than cow manure, either in the natural state or in liquid form. It should be well decomposed and turned over once before being used as a mulch. Roses that have been planted in a naturally rich soil to which a quarter or a fifth of manure has been added will not of course require as much feeding as those planted in a poorer soil. It is impossible to tell anyone exactly how or when to use a stimulant without first seeing the plants and examining the soil.

A mulching or manure watering at an improper time or in an improper way will result in great harm. Never mulch or feed when the plants are off crop. At that time you will want your benches somewhat on the dry side. The mulching will necessarily have to be followed by a heavy watering, and as the plants are not then in condition to take it up the soil will stay wet too long and thus seriously check the root action.

Watering with weak liquid manure is sometimes very beneficial when the roses commence to break again. A mulch can safely be applied when the roses are in full growth. It should never be more than one inch thick; less than that is better than more. After a mulch has been put on the watering must be done more carefully than before as the mulch holds the moisture for a long time. The mulch should be stirred over several times during the first two or three weeks in order to allow the air to penetrate to the soil.

Before mulching or applying liquid manure have the beds somewhat on the dry side though by no means real dry. Make it a point to give a thorough watering after mulching, and give a good general watering when applying liquid manure.

Liquid manure can be used freely from now on—say every ten days or two weeks. It is of course not necessary to use it the first few weeks after mulching. If the roses were in crop about Christmas time, as they should have been, they will by this time be in full growth and ready for a good mulching.

STICKY ROSE LEAVES.

I send you a few leaves taken from our Meteor rose plants. I cannot account for the sticky substance on them. Will you inform me as to the nature of this and why it is there. I have never noticed it before. M. A.

The sticky substance on the leaves comes from the presence of greenfly, which emit this sweet secretion. Besides being very sticky and objectionable in itself, it is also a resting place for soot and dust. Your correspondent must have neglected fumigating for a long time. I would advise him to get rid of the greenfly as quicky as possible and to always syringe hard. It will take some time to get his roses fairly clean again.

IRON GUTTERS AND POSTS.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph taken last summer during the construction of the new range of glass of Mr. A. H. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill. The range was designed and erected by Mr. Geo. M. Garland, and the Garland iron gutter and iron post construction was used throughout. There are six houses, each 26 ft. 8 in. by 200 ft., and the picture shows the progress made up to six weeks after setting the first post.

The posts are 2-inch wrought iron pipe and are set in cement. The holes were bored 2½ feet deep with 6-inch post hole auger, a hard brick placed in the bottom, the post set and the hole filled with a cement composed of one part Portland cement to three parts torpedo sand. The cement was rounded up around the post above the ground so as to prevent water from standing around the pipe. The posts are 5 feet apart and 6 feet high.

The houses run east and west and the sashbars on the south side are 14 feet long, while those on the north side are 16 feet long. On the south side the purlin is 6 ft. 8 in. from the gutter (at further side of first walk) and on the north side the purlin is a trifle farther from the gutter. The purlin supports are 1-inch pipe. There are no supports under the ridge, but at frequent intervals a No. 6 wire is stretched from gutter to gutter over the tops of the two purlins. This wire passes through the drip groove of each gutter and there is a nut on each end which makes it possible to stretch the wire as required and to keep it taut. This not only insures holding the sides of the house firmly in position, but prevents any possibility of the purlins lifting.

Each house contains four benches each 5 ft. wide and four walks each 20 in. wide. A wider walk crosses the middle of the range. There are no dividing partitions and it is practically one large house.

The lightness and strength of the iron gutter and iron post construction is well shown in the picture and the engraving will undoubtedly prove interesting to all.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

"Uneasy lies the head that wears a crown." So, too, the head that is responsible for the welfare of a range of greenhouses just now. Winter is here. The storm king came with a rush last week that sent the mercury zero-ward and kept the fires red hot.

Early in the week it became evident that most of the big growers were completely off crop. The small growers as units scarcely count in midwinter. It is only when they combine that they become a factor in the market. So the wholesale commission men had a chance and prices advanced. Business improved in the stores and by the end of the week when the cold wave came there was a regular rush to get stock. Roses of the choice grades were scarce. A great many Beauties were used in decorating for a large ball on the 18th. Liberty, Meteor and Bridesmaids were in brisk demand.

Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful. Tulips have arrived: scarlet Due Von Thol, La Reine and Yellow Prince are the varieties. The Dues bring $3 a 100, the others $4 a 100. Freesia has fallen in price; the Jerseymen do not appear to have much sand; $1.50, $2, $2.50 and $4 a 100 are the figures.

Various Items.

The Farmers' Institute meeting held in Horticultural Hall on Tuesday afternoon and evening was very interesting. The attendance was excellent, the speakers from a distance giving it as their opinion that Philadelphia gatherings of this kind were more appreciative than those held in other cities, most of those present here being attracted by a desire to learn and not, as in other cities, by curiositiy.

The most interesting talk from a florist's standpoint was that delivered by Edwin Lonsdale on house plants and their care. Mr. Lonsdale gave his own experience with plants in the house and advised retail florists to make experiments for themselves in order to advise their customers intelligently on what plants are suitable for this purpose.

Illness prevented John G. Gardner from telling how the lawnmower is the worst enemy of the lawn. It is understood that his idea is that lawnmowers are often set two low, especially early in the season, and that in this way much harm is done.

I am informed that the views stated in this column in reference to the Christmas trade in Philadelphia have been criticised by the plantsmen, who think that it was not a cut flower Christmas and that the views expressed were simply a reflection of those expressed by the commission men and by those retailers who consider plants too bulky to be profitably handled at such a busy time.

This is a mistake. The views expressed by the writer were formed and written before the commission men's opinions were received. In fact these expressions of opinion were requested because it was believed to have been a cut flower Christmas despite the great efforts made by the plantsmen.

In order, however, to be perfectly fair the Review has requested six of the leading plant growers who supply this market with foliage and flowering plants to give their views on Christmas trade. All answers received will appear in this column next week. Phil.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

The condition here is volcanic. There is surely a good, strong, steady current to the stream of trade, but particularly in those goods that are applicable to funeral work. This of course suggests the thought that this unseasonable weather is producing much fatal sickness. Violets, however, are coming in such quantities that prices upon them remain low, 50 or 60 cents per 100 being about the limit on an ordinary lot, the best ranging from 75 cents to $1. Light colored pinks bring good prices, but darker kinds do not move so readily.

This unseasonable weather is also somewhat accountable for shortness in crops, roses especially being in that condition. But can it be responsible for it all? Shall we not have to go away back into those warm days of autumn to find the main root of the difficulty? They did strain the producing capacities of the plants fearfully, you know, and brought out blooms that in the nature of things were not due until about now perhaps, even if this does seem a little late to expect the evil results. However this may be, the Boston market has not been so shy on small roses for a long time. A salesman with several boxes full of them could remember both his friends and his enemies immediately to his taste. It is not of much use to quote prices on them just now; they depend entirely upon the degree of antagonism between the contracting parties! Carnations bring just a fair figure, a very few fancies going as high as 8 cents. The boundary on the other end of the line is 1 cent.

Bulbous goods are coming freely and going freely at low prices. There is a scarcity of green material, like hardy ferns, asparagus, adiantum and smilax.

Various Items.

Has the Belgian hare craze struck our art? Henry McGrady pleads guilty to the ownership of a $30 pair of old ones and a litter of nine small ones. Severe measures should be taken immediately.

Are the floral clubs of Boston in the proper shape to start a new century? Should there not be another one established on more social lines, and should it not receive such favor that membership enough and interest enough can be maintained to hold meetings oftener than once per year, or even four times per year? What are the criticisms against one with headquarters at the Co-operative market with open doors as much of the time as can be utilized. There is a flutter of a movement in that direction, too. And I overheard a couple of members of the "Old Guard" discussing the affairs of the Massachusetts Hort. Society. It seems that at the last election of officers a member voted for the new president largely as a complimentary expression, taking it as granted that the former incumbent would be re-elected. Too many, however, voted that kind of a ticket and the new administration in order to propitiate the old order of things gave its representatives honorable positions on a committee to frame a new constitution and by-laws for the society. A storm breaks when this committee reports a constitution which others claim is calculated to carry too much authority back into the hands of the former magnates. A member who is "Bright" on argument and repartee, openly worded this thought in sentences as long as a string of Asparagus plumosus nanus and as prickly as a rose stem. As a result the whole thing is "laid on the table" until the October meeting when it is expected an effort will be made to get out the largest vote that the organization has ever cast. There is too much valuable property in the background for the sentries to be allowed to sleep at their posts.

Mrs. W. H. Elliott met with a distressful and perhaps dangerous accident one day recently. While taking a short cut from the E. M. Woods conservatories to the Natick station in company with Mr. Elliott and Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Montgomery she tripped and fell, striking her forehead heavily on the railroad track, rendering her unconscious and cutting a bad gash. Unfortunately she had to remain there in the snow for two long hours while Mr. Montgomery obtained a doctor. She was then taken home and has been rapidly recovering.

B. F. Washington, of North Stockton, being struck by a fire engine and unable to be around on account of a damaged knee, his place at the Park street stall has been very ably filled by his daughter.

Mr. Nicholson returns from the West with a very interesting account of the mammoth establishments visited. Three places aggregating 1,700,000 feet of glass will rather attract the attention of the ordinary New England grower.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Market conditions have changed but little from last week except that roses are even scarcer. There are plenty of low grade carnations and enough of high grade to go around. The best tea roses now go as high as $10 and good carnations can still be bought at $1.50 to $2.00 with fancy at $3.00 and $4.00. Sometimes ordinaries go as low as $1.00.

In carnations Gomez has lost heavily in popular favor. Last year customers bidding against each other forced the price up as high as $6.00 a hundred and now they go begging at $2.00. Evidently crimson sorts are no longer the popular fancy.

Violets also seem to have lost favor. The situation is even worse than last week and quite a lot have failed to find buyers of late.

Some good Harrisii are coming in and they go fairly well.

Trade is inclined to be spasmodic, being remarkably brisk one day and as remarkably quiet the next. It is a hard market to figure on just now. A good many funerals have helped to make white in demand.

Bulbous stock seems to grow less and less profitable every year. One grower who has cut his order for bulbs in two each year for several years finds he still has too much and is thinking of cutting it out altogether.

Still on the average business has been fairly good though it is doubtful if the season does more than equal that of last year in the aggregate.

An Excursion.

Last Friday over a hundred florists boarded the special car on the Rock Island road for the trip to the greenhouses of the Chicago Carnation Co. at Joliet. And it was a truly representative crowd, including not only quite a few from other cities but the proprietors or representatives of about every greenhouse concern in the vicinity of the city.

Mr. Jas. Hartshorne, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., was in charge of the car and had a pleasant greeting for all. On arrival at the greenhouses the party was led in procession first through the houses devoted to seedlings and then through those planted with standard varieties. Many seedlings are on trial and an inspection of them was convincing proof that Mr. Hartshorne is doing some splendid work in crossing. There are a number that have not yet been exhibited that will surely command attention when they are. It would take a good deal of space to mention them all in detail and we must for the present be satisfied with saying that some good things will surely come forth from the many seedlings on trial. The new white, Bon Homme Richard, seemed wonderfully prolific, as did also Sunbeam, the new pale pink. The whole establishment was in first class condition and reflected the greatest credit upon those in charge.

The iron frame house 30x300, erected for the Carnation Co. by the Lord & Burnham Co. last summer, attracted much attention and we overheard several visitors say their happiness would be great could they have a range of such splendid houses.

In addition to those from Chicago and vicinity there were present on this occasion Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Vesey, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Thos. Dale and Edw. Dale, Brampton, Ont.; E. T. Grave and Chas. Knopf, Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. C. Eickholt, Galveston, Texas; N. Zweifel, Milwaukee; E. R. Gesler, Galesburg, Ill.; W. L. Kring, Fairbury, Ill.; Geo. Souster, and B. O'Neil, Elgin, Ill.; Fred. J. King and daughter, Ottawa, Ill.; Thos. Archer, St. Joseph, Mich.; Andrew Peterson, Paxton, Ill.; Jas. Souden, A. W. Hoppock, T. Robertson and F. Overholt, Minneapolis, Minn.

Among the local people were A. McAdams, Geo. Woodward, Chas. McKellar, Anton Then, Peter Reinberg, N. Wietor, S. A. Wolcott, F. Stielow, M. Weiland, Aug. Poehlmann, Geo. and Chas. Klehm, Luke Collins, Geo. Collins, Chas. Schweigert, John Hoeft, Geo. Garland, Frank Garland, N. P. Miller, J. F. Klimmer, D. F. Hawkes, G. Swenson, Frank Calvert, Edgar Sanders, C. A. Hunt, J. C. Vaughan, T. Earl, J. B. Deamud, J. S. Wilson, Walter Kreitling, Edwin Eagle, G. L. Grant, E. C. Amling, Frank Benthey, Andrew Benson and a host of others whose names we missed.

Coffee and sandwiches were served in the packing room before taking the train for home. All agreed that the time spent on this excursion had been well spent. It was the largest bunch of florists ever got together on one train in this city and there was no short count in the bunch.

Various Items.

A full report of the last meeting of the Florists' Club will be found elsewhere in this number. At the next meeting of the club, to be held Friday evening, Feb. 1, the subject of greenhouse construction will be taken up. The program includes a paper on "Iron construction of greenhouses versus wood," by W. N. Rudd, and one upon "Saving of space and other benefits of the iron gutter and iron posts," by Geo. M. Garland. The rapidly increasing use of the iron gutter and iron post construction in this vicinity and the great satisfaction expressed by those who have used it, makes this subject a peculiarly interesting one and there is sure to be a large audience to hear Mr. Garland's paper, which it is understood will present all the various points as clearly as they can be set forth.

McKellar & Winterson have been making further changes in their store, this time adding several hundred feet of deep glass cases for the storing of baskets and various supplies. Their stock of supplies is wonderfully varied and though they have a big floor space room is at a premium.

Billy Kyle, at Kennicott Bros. Co., is rejoicing over the arrival of a 10-lb boy that made his advent last Sunday. M. F. Kyle came in from Kalamazoo to see his grandson, it being the first that will be able to call him grandpa.

John Zech's little girl has recovered from the scarlet fever, but is now suffering from an attack of rheumatism, undoubtedly an after result of the fever.

Mr. C. Lawnrake Finley, of Joliet, was a recent visitor. Mr. Finley isn't raking any lawns just now but says he will have enough machines to rake all the important lawns in the country by spring.

During his stay in the city Mr. Jas. Souden became a warm admirer of the humid game of basket ball.

The bowlers play their next series of league games this Thursday evening. It is expected that the team will visit Milwaukee next Saturday evening and do up the bowlers "that made Milwaukee famous."

Among other recent visitors were Henry Smith and Eli Cross, Grand Rapids, Mich., and B. Hasselbring, Flint, Mich.

Chas. Schweigert will soon add a new house, 15x100 to his range at Niles Center.

A. F. Amling's new addition at Maywood will consist of two houses 36½x150 each.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Items.

This climate of ours is equal to anything! Within a week we have had vernal skies and balmy airs, and, by way of variety, an arctic storm, the worst of the winter, with the mercury as low on Saturday night as 8 degrees. Today (Jan. 21) it is April again with southerly winds, and by turns scudding clouds or an empyrean of spotless azure.

Trade has been unusually brisk, beginning on Monday with urgent demands for a large funeral, violets being especially in request, keeping up all through the week, and promising well for the present one. All sorts of flowers and greens have been eagerly sought, and there has been a notable shortage on good stuff, roses, especially Beauties and pinks, being noticeably lacking. Carnations have not been overabundant, but the cold of Saturday night caused the market people to abandon business and dispose of their stocks to the stores. Prospects are improving, and from now on a more regular supply may be counted on, as the sun gains in power and brightness.

The funeral alluded to above was that of a woman of fashion, with large connections and of wide society acquaintance. The decorations, which were by John Cook, were profuse and handsome, the grave being lined with greens and pink roses, a huge pall of violets covering it, and the wreaths, bunches and designs which were sent by friends numbering, according to the newspaper stories, several hundred. One reporter, in his ambition to make a sounding narrative, declared that in respect to the quantity of flowers sent it was one of the most notable funerals ever seen in this city, there being over 300 designs, "estimated by a leading florist to represent a cash value of $10,000." Of course about one-fifth of this large sum would have been nearer the mark, but unquestionably the event made an active local demand, and the influence will be widely felt to the advantage of the trade, since the example will be followed; whereas, had the some-time notice been given in the announcement of this social leader's funeral that "it is requested no flowers be sent," a similar request would have obtained in other cases.

The Florists' Exchange celebrated last Monday another year of its existence, the volume of business done considerably exceeding that of the preceding year. This is the clearing house for the producers and retailers of this location. It remains under the management of Mr. Alexander Scott, who has long been in charge, and who is painstaking, courteous and obliging, and, above all, possessed of the confidence of those who do business with the establishment. Its quarters are small, cramped, but there are some signs that before long some change will be made which will add to its efficiency and to the comfort and convenience of patrons and employes.

The liberal employment for the decorators at the Astor ball and the Vanderbilt-French wedding of Golden Gate roses promises to bring added popularity to that lovely variety. We are told by some of the storekeepers that the public is beginning to ask for this rose by name, and the demand for it, which is deserved by its merits, will be increased by the hall stamp of social approval. A vase of fine specimens of this rose may usually be seen in the window of Wm. J. Halliday, and Mr. Moss recently exhibited at the Gardeners' Club some beautiful examples of what superior culture will do for it.

One of the daily papers reports that at a meeting of the club one of the savants of the State Agricultural College delivered a lecture on "Bacteria on Plants, and their Diseases," and spoke chiefly of the "Calla Rat" and the spotted violets. Of the terms in which he spoke of this new type of rodent no mention was made.

Active preparations are being made for the reception and entertainment of the coming Carnation Convention. A committee has been raised to arrange for the banquet, and Mr. Edwin A. Seidewitz has been appointed its chairman, as well as delegated to act as toastmaster. As Mr. Seidewitz is a resident (and mayor) of Annapolis, which may be regarded as the very center almost of the oyster and terrapin industry, his experience is likely to give him peculiar fitness for the first important post, and he will doubtless prove in the second capacity not only eloquent himself but a provoker of eloquence in others.

The bogus check man recently made his advent in Baltimore. After "doing" Chas. E. Smith and John Eberhart, his career was stopped by William J. Halliday, who detained him until an officer was called by phone, and he now languishes behind bars.

Building greenhouses continues. Geo. V. Smith acquired several houses and their appurtenances from the directors of the city jail, who have gone out of the florists business, and has erected with the material several large houses on his place on the York road at Waverly. Mr. S., who for many years has had a store in the east end, has now started another at the west, on Madison avenue. Fred. C. Bauer, Govanstown, has built an additional house, 14 by 75 feet, has it already filled with callas and young pink and white Cochet roses (which become more and more popular) and is looking around for a site for the next one.

Halliday Brothers had a decoration recently where one table was adorned with Genevieve Lord carnations exclusively, and Robert H. says it was the prettiest sight in its line he ever saw. His endorsement of Lord is emphatic, and our experience leads us to endorse the endorsement of the capable and knowing President of the American Carnation Society. RIX.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade for the past week has been rather brisk with all kinds of work plenty. There was but little stock coming in though which was unfortunate for those who had large orders to fill. The quality of the roses that are now coming in is very poor. Nearly all the local as well as shipping growers are off crop and with the exception of violets and carnations the supply is not equal to the demand.

American Beauties have been very scarce all week. The call for them, however, has not been large and the price remains about the same as reported last week. Good Brides and Bridesmaids are received in limited numbers only and not enough to go around. The best are sold as high as $6 and $8 though poorer stock could be had for $4 a 100. Meteors, Perles and other roses seem about the same. The wholesale men claim they never saw stock in roses so scarce as it is at present.

Carnations show a great improvement in quality. The shipments are quite large, more so than heretofore, and better prices are being realized. Very little inferior stock is coming in now. Prices the past week were from $2 to $3; extra fancy, $4; and very few were sold below $2 per 100.

In bulbous stock Romans and paper whites are selling well and there is not the marked glut generally noticeable at this time of the year, $3 and $4 are the prices for first pickings. Callas are in demand at 15 cents each. Harrisii and tulips are still out of the market and none to be had. Some extra fine valley is coming in which brings $3 and $4; short-stemmed flowers, however, can be had at $2. A few sweet peas are coming in which are fine and go at $4 per 100. Violets are moving easier than they have and the glut has been relieved somewhat. Some very large orders have been filled the past week at 50 cents per 100 in 1,000 lots; hundred lots go at 60 cents.

At the wholesale houses flowers in all lines have been cleaned up the past week at good prices; carnations averaging $2 and roses about $6, with other flowers well up. Messrs. Kuehn, Ellis and Berning are well pleased with the business they have done so far this year.

Various Notes.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt, E. W. Guy and Henry Emundt, all of Belleville, Ill., were in town the past week. Mr. Guy who has been sick for some time with the grip is now well again.

Mr. Chas. Connon, of Webster Grove, Mo., who was reported sick some time ago, is up and attending to business again.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers is up and around again, having been sick since the holidays. Will Adels, her able assistant, reports plenty of work of all kinds, especially funeral work.

Riessen Floral Co., on So. Broadway, report plenty of work since the holidays, decorations and funeral work being their main orders.

Fred Foster will move from his present location at Eighth and Olive streets March 1st. Fred is now proprietor of the Garrison cafe, at 3000 Chestnut street.

Treasurer Sanders, of the show committee, wound up the affairs of the late show the past week. All prizes were paid in full and the final report will be made at the next meeting of the club.

The Eden Floral Co., with Mr. Potts as proprietor, has opened a store at Eighteenth and Olive streets. The Eden was formerly on Finney avenue.

The bowlers will now be found every Monday night rolling at the court house alleys and would like some of the oldtimers to show up again. Such men as E. Schray, Carl and Robert Beyer, Frank Fillmore and John Kunz and others would like to be seen by their friends every Monday night. As the time for the S. A. F. meet is rolling on, a good club to represent St. Louis must be selected to go to Buffalo and bring the championship back to St. Louis where it belongs.

Bowling.

Ten members of the Florists' Bowling Club rolled Monday night and only two members rolled in form. Kuehn and Ellison. Some of the older members have promised to come back and help make a strong team to represent St. Louis. The scores were as follows:

	1.	2.	3.	Total.	Av.
C. A. Kuehn	161	182	168	522	174
A. Y. Ellison	161	179	162	502	167

WASHINGTON.

Business for the past week has been a record breaker. The chief events were some very large dinners. Funeral work of all kinds has been in great demand.

Roses have been very short for the past week and not as fine as might be. Maids and Brides are bringing 10 to 12 cents; La France, 10 to 15 cents; Perles, 8 to 10 cents; Meteors, 10 to 12 cents. Carnations, 2 cents to 3 cents; shipped ones can be had for 1½ to 2 cents. Violets are now coming in plentifully and can be had from 30 cents per 100 up. Lilies at 12 cents. The demand for plants is very good—that is for 50-cent to $1.50 sizes in blooming plants, such as primroses, azaleas and potted tulips.

J. H. Small & Sons have captnred the order for the decorations at the inaugural ball, March 4. The decorations for the occasion will surpass those of previous years.

Z. D. Blackistone has his hands full with teas and dinners for the coming week.

Gude Bros. are always on the go, funeral work and plenty of it, dinners, weddings, in fact, everything.

F. W. Bolgiano is doing a good business; last year being the best in his experience.

J. L. Loose is doing a nice, steady business. Mr. Loose says: "We have all we can do." F. H. KRAMER.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Mr. Watson Johnson, of Morenci, Mich., and at one time with the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has moved to this city and entered into partnership with M. J. Pierce. The firm name will be Pierce & Johnson and they will carry on a general florists business.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Minneapolis Floral Co. (John Monson) will soon erect seven rose houses each 22x153. The material will be supplied by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago.

LINCOLN, NEB.

Meeting of Nebraska Hort. Society.

Lincoln has had its full quota of meetings this week, there being the annual meetings of the Horticultural Society, Agricultural Society, State Forestry Association, Poultry and Pet Stock, Swine Breeders and several others.

The Horticultural Society had a very pleasant and profitable meeting. There was a good show of fruits and flowers, though no premiums were offered. At the election of officers the following were chosen for the ensuing year: Geo. A. Marshal, president; L. M. Russell, first vice-president; G. S. Christy, second vice-president; Peter Younger, treasurer; Clyde Barnard, secretary; Louis Henderson, E. F. Stephens and W. J. Hesser, board of directors.

Messrs. Henderson and Hesser represent the floral wing of the society. The election again testifies to the worth in which they are held by this society. Mr. Henderson having served several years as director and Mr. Hesser as both vice-president and director. These gentlemen will see that the florists fare well at the hands of the society.

Many interesting papers were read, among which were the following: W. J. Hesser, Plattsmouth, "Culture of Palms and Ferns"; Lewis Henderson, Omaha, "Plants for Winter Blooming"; J. H. Hadkinson, Omaha, "Tidbits in Horticulture and Floriculture"; Paul B. Floth, Omaha, "Proper Soil for Floriculture"; L. C. Chapin, Lincoln, "Vines and Creepers." These papers were prepared largely as aids to amateur culture.

We also had with us F. W. Taylor, who has been a member of our society for years, serving several years as president and secretary, and who was superintendent of horticulture at the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, and is now at Buffalo. In fact we lacked only J. Austin Shaw to transfer ourselves back to Omaha, as we had Peter Younger, of Geneva, Geo. Marshall, of Arlington, and Henry Augustine, of Normal, Ill., all of Trans-Mississippi fame.

Prof. Taylor told of what is being done at Buffalo in horticulture and floriculture, and from what he said of the work being done there and knowing the effort he has put forth all his life to advance these interests, we shall expect great results from the Pan-American as an educator of the people, and when the florists of Nebraska go down to do battle upon the alleys (rented by Scott by the year) we shall expect to come home loaded down, not only with trophies in shape of cups, badges and diamonds, but with a better idea of the importance of our profession as regards horticulture and floriculture.

The society passed resolutions asking the legislature (now in session) to make a liberal appropriation for an exhibit of horticulture, agriculture and forestry at the Pan-American.

Among the visitors from other states were Silas Wilson, of Atlantic, Iowa, and Henry Augustine, of Illinois. Both of these gentlemen took part in the sessions and stayed through the entire meeting, which was held on January 15, 16 and 17.

NEW GERANIUM LITTLE PINK

Or Double Pink "Mars," one of the best novelties of the Mars family. The first double of this class ever offered to the trade. It is a very dwarf, bushy, compact and extra free blooming variety, not exceeding 4 to 6 inches in height. Its trusses a pleasing shade of bright pink, upper petals white at the base. Unlike Mars or America in color, it has no trace of salmon shading. Its miniature trusses stand erect, 3 to 6 inches above the foliage. It is excellent for bedding, for the border, or as a pot plant. Too much praise cannot be given this grand little pink variety. Price $5.00 per doz., $35.00 per 100. Half-tone cuts will be furnished free of charge for catalogue. Correspondence solicited. Orders booked now for fall and winter delivery. Received certificate of merit at the New York Convention of the Society of American Florists.

OMAHA.

Various Items.

The Omaha florists are always busy, although they have not been tooting their horns to a great extent. Trade has been brisk with a few intervals of lull. Stock is getting to be more plentiful (as there has been plenty of sunshine) and is selling at fair prices.

Hess & Swoboda are bringing in a fine stock of flowers, including a fine variety of tulips and lilies.

L. Henderson has some of the finest azaleas and rhododendrons in town.

Paul Floth is an expert in growing carnations and callas to judge by the quality and quantity he brings in.

Henry Peterson, of Florence, has a fine stock of violets.

S. B. Faulkner is getting to be quite a bowler. He really thinks that if the Omaha team should get to Buffalo the other teams would not be in it.

The annual meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society was held at Lincoln, Jan. 15, 16 and 17. There was a large attendance and an interesting program consisting of reports from various districts and experiment stations. We are greatly indebted to the Illinois and Iowa State Horticultural Societies for the valuable assistance received through their delegates, Capt. Augustine, of Normal, Ill., and Silas Wilson, of Atlantic, Iowa; also to our friends, F. W. Taylor, J. N. Adams and Simon Fleishmann, of Buffalo, for their presence and for their cordial invitation to come to Buffalo with a state exhibit.

A committee was appointed to introduce a bill in the senate for an appropriation of $25,000 to cover the expense of a horticultural and agricultural exhibit from Nebraska at Buffalo.

L. H.

CHRISTMAS PRICES.

A daily paper tells an amusing story of a young man who ordered two dozen of the finest American Beauties to be sent to his sweetheart as a Christmas present. He thought they would not be more than 25 cents each, and when he was told the bill would be $48.00 he went off in high dudgeon and bought his Angelina a muff, finding fur less costly than flowers.

Of course, this may be used as an argument against high prices at Christmas, but a man who expects to get the finest American Beauties at 25 cents each at any time during the season is not a very promising subject for the florist.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Wm. Donaldson & Co., the general merchandise firm, is preparing to add 30,000 feet of glass to their plant this spring. The glass has been already purchased and representatives of the firm recently visited Chicago to get figures on the other material.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The R. I. Horticultural Society held their 56th annual meeting last week in Tillinghast's Hall. About 30 members attended.

Vice President J. E. C. Farnham presided. The meeting was mostly of reports. Prof. F. W. Carr, of Kingston, was elected to membership. The necrology was read; the names being those of Samuel Wall, Charles H. Smith, William H. Haskell, Edward M. Bannister, Eleazer Waldron, Joel Spencer and Olney Arnold.

It was voted that hereafter the secretary receive $100 a year for services, and the treasurer 10 per cent of all he collected.

The election of officers resulted in:

President, J. E. C. Farnham; vice presidents, R. H. I. Goddard, Royal C. Taft, Joseph D. Fitts; secretary and treasurer, Charles W. Smith; librarian, Christopher R. Browne; botanist, Prof. W. Whitman Bailey; board of trustees, Silas H. Manchester, chairman; Marcus M. Burdick, Farquhar Macrae, N. D. Pierce, Jr., Fred P. Hunt, Wm. Hill; finance committee, John G. Massie, Charles E. Godfrey, N. B. Whittaker; audit committee, Edward I. Nickerson, Henry F. Manchester, G. H. Hogan; committee, Daniel A. Cook, Jacob Swarts; lecture committee, L. W. Russell, C. W. Smith.

A collation of oranges, raisins, and a platter of paper shelled almonds was served, and the treasury's standing was read as $9.81.

DREER'S CATALOGUE.

The 1901 catalogue of H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, has reached us. It contains 200 pages and is even more comprehensive than heretofore. This catalogue is one of those that is always preserved for the intrinsic value of its contents and we have placed it in our collection of those that we reserve for reference. It should be in the possession of every one in the trade and if you have not received a copy you should send for one.

We are gratified to note that in this catalogue too the half tone engravings are becoming more numerous. All the novelties are illustrated by half-tones from photographs except in a few cases where wash drawings have been used and these are so designated. It requires a better quality of paper to make the half-tones show up well, but they are a vast sight more satisfying as well as insuring absolute accuracy.

NORWAY.

The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A business, money-making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size (3½-in. diam.), length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous, growth free, uninterrupted, continuous profusion of bloom. Flowers open very quickly; no waiting three or four days for them to develop. Like Genevieve Lord it blooms early and keeps it up. We unhesitatingly recommend it to every grower as the best white. If you grow Norway you will not be compelled to grow several varieties in order to keep up a succession. Its sterling worth must at once be apparent.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, $75 per 1000.

READY FEBRUARY 15th.

EGYPT.

Scarlet crimson. The most really good dark carnation which can boast of first-class commercial stems (2½ to 3 feet) and a rich, spicy odor. It is regal in appearance, possesses all the attributes of a first-class commercial carnation; it is decidedly the best keeper of all dark varieties. Does not bloom as early as some varieties, but can be had in good flower by November 1st to 15th. Its rich color, about same shade as Jacque Rose, makes it a good seller. The stiff stem gives it that substantial appearance which always insures a good price. It is so distinct that every grower should have it.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10 per 100, $75 per 1000.

READY FEBRUARY 15th.

GENEVIEVE LORD.

The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to the proud prestige of having superseded the hitherto invincible William Scott. It is not only as good as Scott was in its palmiest days, but is actually superior to that variety in every way. Certainly a large claim, but one which is fully borne out by facts. In addition to this, Genevieve Lord commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. A carnation like this is only produced once in a great while. Our stock is in extra fine shape, free from all disease. Ready now. Order at once. It is having a great second year run.

Price $5 per hundred, $40 per thousand.

The above three varieties are a great trio. There is wisdom in placing your order early.

PROSPERITY, ROOSEVELT, IRENE, QUEEN LOUISE, DOROTHY, LORNA, MERMAID and other new varieties at introducers' prices.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TIMOTHY EATON and all other good new varieties; also the best standard sorts.

W. J. & M. S. VESEY, Fort Wayne, Ind.

50,000 rooted cuttings, ready to ship. We have enlarged our plant 10,000 feet last summer and will devote our entire time to growing carnations for the trade. We do not expect to make any money this year. Our whole object is to introduce ourselves and stock to the public. To do this we will sell at an extremely low figure, with a standing guarantee that at any time our stock is not satisfactory on receiving, send it back at once at our expense, and if you had paid for same we will refund full amount.

JOSEPH LABO, Joliet, Ill.

NORWAY. The biggest commercial white carnation ever introduced. A business-making, money-making carnation in every sense of the word. It combines large size, length and strength of stem, wonderfully vigorous growth and is a free and continuous bloomer.

EGYPT. Scarlet-crimson and the first really good dark carnation that can boast of first-class commercial stems and a rich, spicy odor. The best keeper of all dark varieties.

Price of the above two varieties, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1,000. Ready Feb. 15.

GENEVIEVE LORD. The only pink carnation which can rightfully lay claim to having superseded Scott, and it commands a price beyond the reach of the best Scotts which ever grew. It is having a great second-year run. Ready now. Price: $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1,000.

Prosperity, Roosevelt, Irene, Queen Louise, Dorothy, Lorna, Mermaid and other new varieties at introducers' prices.

We make a specialty of rooted cuttings.
F. DORNER & SONS CO., LaFayette, Ind.

RUSSELL. Again this has proved the most prolific and profitable carnation, giving us so far fully 75 per cent more blooms than Crocker and eight other varieties under same conditions. It never splits its calyx, which Crocker and some others do so badly. After five years' trial, under ordinary culture, it has proved the most profitable and best all-around carnation we ever grew. As large as Scott and of a bright shade of light rose-pink. Strong, well-rooted cuttings now ready at $2.00 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Ethel Crocker, $3.00 per 100. McGowen Sport, $1.50 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

SIDNEY LITTLEFIELD, N. Abington, Mass.

FLORIANA
The Best All Round Pink Carnation Ever Introduced.
Large size, fully as large as Marquis or Crocker; color, a beautiful shade of light pink. A strong grower, very fragrant, an early continuous bloomer, very productive, does finely both in winter and summer, good stem, perfect calyx that never splits, not subject to disease, good keeper. Brings fancy prices in New York market. Come and see them. Prices, $1.50 per dozen, $10 per 100, $60 per 1,000. Ready February 1. Pillow & Banks, Westport, Conn.

LIBERTY.
Bright salmon carnation. Sells for either red or pink; an early and continuous bloomer; perfectly healthy plant; stiff stems, 18 inches, never splits calyx; sells for 3 and 4 cents when Scotts bring 1½ and 2 cents. The most free-blooming carnation I ever saw; it is a pleasure to grow, pick or sell it. $1.50 per dozen, $10 per 100, $60 per 1,000. M. L. Tirrell, Randolph, Mass.

The Market.

Our Christmas trade was never better and everyone connected with the sale of cut flowers and pot plants had his hands full, the weather was splendid and helped out our sales to a large extent. The greatest demand was for violets, roses and carnations. Poinsettias sold well in the cut state, but in the pots and pans went rather slow in some cases. Harrisii were scarce. Roman hyacinths were very plentiful, but went slowly and many bunches of the Christmas cut could be seen after the holidays. Holly sold well and the usual large sales were made in wreaths of all kinds. Smilax was scarce and brought a high price. The quality of roses was fair. Carnations were first class in quality and many grand vases of Hobart, Crocker, Marquis, Lawson and Bradt could be seen in the various stores. Quite a number of orchids were disposed of and the demand seems to increase as each year passes. All classes of stock, good and bad, went at good prices both to growers and retailers. Satisfaction reigned all around as they shook hands and wished one another a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

Business since the holidays has been rather quiet, as might be expected, and stock of all kinds is not so very plentiful, a few sharp frosts of late having helped out the scarcity.

Prices: American Beauties, $2 to $5; Brides and Maids, 25 cents to $1.50; Liberty, 75 cents; Meteors, 25 cents to $1; C. Brunners, 10 to 15 cents. Carnations—Hobarts, $1; Crockers, 50 cents to 75 cents; Bradts, 35 to 50 cents; Hill, 35 to 75 cents; mixed fancy, 50 cents; Scotts, 30 to 35 cents; Portias, 25 to 35 cents. Chrysanthemums, 35 to 50 cents. Violets—Princess of Wales, 75 cents to $1; California, 75 cents to $1; Marie Louise, $1. Harrisii, $3 to $3.50. Roman hyacinths, 25 cents per doz. Paper whites, 75 cents per 100. Smilax, 10 cents per string. Valley, 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen.

Various Items.

H. S. Sanborn, of Oakland, lost several cases of holly by making the mistake of having them sent by freight. Let this be a warning to others on the coast when shipping stock from the East. Have your orders sent by express at least. The journey is a long and trying one and very hard on plants or greens. On opening the boxes in this case the holly was found to be worthless.

E. Gill, of Oakland, reports his Christmas trade the best he ever had, selling immense quantities of holly, wreaths and cut flowers; plants moved slowly.

Sievers & Boland, Post street, made a splendid Christmas display of roses and carnations, the finest in San Francisco.

Peliçano & Co., Kearney street, had a great lot of Bridesmaids, also a fine display of carnations. This firm made a fine show of Roman hyacinths in pans, making altogether a couple of very catchy windows for Christmas.

Shannahan, Powell street, had an exhibition of orchids in his window during Christmas week which was "the talk of the town," there being nothing like it in San Francisco. Mr. Shannahan reports his Christmas trade the best in years.

Stevenson, the London florist, Powell street, did his usual large Christmas business, but reports the one just past the largest he ever had. Mr. Stevenson's wagon that has been in a dormant state for a few years is once more on the road. It's a dandy "and there are only a few of them left." Thomas could not stand and see that beautiful rig become covered with dust, so he got hold of a duster and scattered the dust to the four winds.

The Orange Grove Nursery Co., of Los Angeles, have started a place of business at 576 Fourteenth street, Oakland. They make a specialty of lemon, orange and deciduous fruit trees, ornamental plants and shrubs. The stock is certainly very fine and should sell well.

Stevenson, the London florist, made a floral horseshoe for our only Tod Sloan, presented to him by a few of his turf admirers on the occasion of his first and only tournament in America since his return from England. The shoe was a large one, twenty dozen Bonaffons being used in its make-up. The calks on the tips were made of English holly, and the pedestal that held the shoe was made of holly, as if it were a small tree of holly, and a corsage of large Bride roses was tied on one side of the shoe with a bow of real satin ribbon. The piece cost $150. Our only Tod lost the "blawsted race, doncher know," but 'e got the blooming 'orseshoe. He ought to have got it before the race.

Madam Prentice, on Washington street, Oakland, made a specialty of violet hampers made from German birch bark as a novelty. They sold well during the holidays and were a profitable venture for the madam.

N. Smymaeoplus, our Broadway florist, reports a splendid Christmas business done at his store. Mr. Smymaeoplus certainly had a fine lot of high-grade stock on hand.

Mr. J. Brown, of Piedmont, has a fine lot of white stocks that will be in bloom in a little while. Mr. Brown grows his stocks under glass and declares that they pay him about as well as anything he has on the place. The flowers are not cut with stems, but each bloom is picked from the stem as it develops. In that way the plants produce a great many more flowers and are just as handy for the florist, who uses them for funeral work. Mr. Brown has a few benches of carnations. Triumph is a favorite; Bradt he likes. He has a bench of Psyche and every time he passes that bench he gives it a look like a married man would give his mother-in-law. Psyche will be discarded.

Mr. J. Gilmore, of Elmhurst, is starting in to cut roses and carnations of fine quality. The foliage on the roses was badly affected with mildew owing to lack of heat last fall, but since the new boilers have been started the quality of the roses is improving right along. His Portias are the finest in the market.

Mr. T. Bennett, of Alden, has a fine bench of tomatoes in fruit that are expected to ripen soon.

At the annual meeting of the State Floral Society, held in San Francisco on the 11th of January, the idea of a floral congress in conjunction with its annual spring flower show was the chief topic of discussion. The members present were enthusiastic and the idea immediately took root. Committees are to be appointed and the work of arranging for the congress will be taken up at once. It is the intention of the society to make the congress surpass in interest and usefulness previous affairs of its kind. In conjunction with the congress the society will hold the regular spring exhibition. The blooms of California will be shown in all their glory and fragrance. Invitations will be extended to all horticultural societies west of the Rockies to send delegates and no doubt many will attend. J. N.

WAYNESBORO, PA.

Henry Eichholz, the geranium specialist and introducer of Mars and America, has started the erection of two houses 30x120 on his newly purchased property, his increasing trade and his seedling geraniums requiring a larger area of glass. At his place everything is in prime condition, and his progress in putting larger flowers on the Mars type of geraniums is remarkable. Eben E. Rexford, a pretty large pink flower with white eye, and Dr. E. A. Hering, a brilliant scarlet overlaid with red, indicate that the long and tall growers will have to take a back seat. These varieties are being introduced this year and as a few firms have bought a part of the stock the supply is limited.

On trial here are three double Mars seedlings, one of the S. A. Nutt color, a second of the exact Mars color, and the third a glowing cerise pink. There are others in the zonal section, round flowering, Bruant type, awaiting another summer's trial. The thousands of plants of America and others are remarkably thrifty stock and they are twice transplanted before being sent out.

A house of carnations in the pink of condition is for local trade, and of novelties sent out last year Lawson and Crocker will be retained. It was thought that Genevieve Lord would here replace Frances Joost but the latter is always selected by the buying public when both are placed together. His list now is Hill for white, Crane for red, Bradt for fancy, Maceo for dark, Daybreak for its own color, Joost for pink and Crocker and Lawson for fancy.

Mr. Eichholz considers March 1st as too late a date for the distribution of seedlings as cuttings sent out at that date have with him never made plants large enough to give proper results. He says it is a case of nursing the novelties into health every time and not until the second year can a fair trial be given. The only variety that was an exception to this rule was Ethel Crocker, but the rooted cuttings reached him Jan. 1st and these cuttings did make as good plants by fall as his own standard varieties.

As a pointer on seedling buying he says to always buy rooted cuttings of novelties from the originator; don't allow a rooted cutting to be packed twice or handled a second time when it isn't necessary. This he considers a very important factor in the purchasing of novelties. H.

BENSONVILLE, ILL.—W. F. Dunteman will soon build two houses, each 26x200.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florists.
GEORGE M. KELLOGG.
Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle.
Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. I am delighted with it.
Chicago. JOHN THORPE.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same. M. S. WORDEN.
North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual.
Hartford, Conn. GEO. S. OSBORN.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need.
BOBBINK & ATKINS.
Rutherford, N. J.

Am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading.
Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time.
Milwaukee, Wis. N. ZWEIFEL.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and does you credit.
BENJAMIN HAMMOND.
Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and instructive contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade.

Milwaukee, Wis.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid text-book.
JOHN WELSH YOUNG.
Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants.
Columbus, O. B. BUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, complete and to the point. W. A. KENNEDY.
Milwaukee, Wis.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference.
Macomb, Ill. F. E. BONHAM

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience.
Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day.
Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

We have gotten much valuable instruction from the Florists' Manual and prize it highly.
Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist can afford to be without it.
Madison, N. J. A. J. BAUR.

If everyone has enjoyed your book as I have it's a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants.
Flushing, N. Y. H. D. DARLINGTON.

I am more than pleased with the Florists' Manual. OTT BROWN.
Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published.
Joliet, Ill. AAS. HARTSHORNE.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist will find it as a guide in this progressive era of the florists' business. J. T. TEMPLE.
Davenport, Ia.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual."
After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.
The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours,
COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS.
H. CORYELL, Gen'l Supt.
Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical gardening literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine.

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Published by Florist Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.

From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial plant culture in America, or some portions of it rather, have been placed on the market; but the teachings which they convey have, as the years rolled by, become to a greater or less extent obsolete, owing to the continued mutability in methods, etc., so that the Manual contains, as it does, matter which is strictly up-to-date, and thoroughly practical, should meet with a ready acceptance among all engaged in the industry upon which it treats. The caliber of Mr. Scott's instructions, in matters horticultural, is too well known in the trade to require any elaboration at our hands; suffice it to say that the same completeness of doctrine, and masterful handling of every subject dealt with, generally characterizes the text of the book now before us. Nearly 200 individual items are discussed, and, as regards plants, largely those of commercial value, the staples of the trade receiving greatest attention.—Florists' Exchange.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details, but it need not be confined to circulation among the florists and others commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting their requirements. Rather judge it through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * we will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small index confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and thoroughly illustrating the subjects treated. Critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not made very obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Meehan's Monthly.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Christmas trade was far better than ever before. Cut flowers sold at a very high price.

Mr. S. F. Stephens cut some fine roses and 'mums for Xmas. He has completed a new house, which he expects to use for carnations.

Livingston Seed Co. had the best decorated store in the city.

New Year's was a very busy day for E. L. Charles with funeral work.

Mr. Underwood has several unnamed seedling carnations of which he is very proud.

Mr. E. Metzmair has had the natural gas, which did not prove satisfactory, taken out of his boiler and has gone back to coal and slack.

Mr. J. Brust has his coil boiler just about completed.

Mr. Coursy, of the state hospital, had some fine pot callas for Xmas, which came in very handy for his decorations.

Mr. F. K. Luke, of the O. S. U., has the plants beautifully arranged and labeled, which makes it very interesting for visitors.

Miss N. Anna Long was married on Dec. 25th to Mr. J. Acton, of Potomac, Ill. Miss Long was an amateur florist, having made a large display at the state fair last year, and is well known to many florists. G. E. A.

THE GLASS TRUST.

Notification of an advance of 20 per cent in the price of window glass was received last night by every jobber in the United States. The notice came from a committee representing practically all of the window glass manufacturers in the country, and means that the war between the American Window Glass Company, commonly known as the window glass trust, and the independent manufacturers has been patched up.

The war between the two classes of manufacturers prevailed all of last year and during the closing months of 1899. It began with a cut of 30 per cent in prices in a single day in November of the latter year, and at one time during the year just passed prices were nearly 50 per cent below the highest prices prevailing in 1899. Prices were so low in fact that only the factories most advantageously situated could run at a profit.

Both sides in the controversy, after over a year of trial, finally decided that the task of acting as philanthropists to an unappreciative and unsympathetic public was not conducive to health or longevity. The first steps toward a settlement were to form the independent concerns into one organization similar to the original window glass trust and then to get the two into harmonious working relations by the election of an executive committee to act for both. The basis of output for each is fixed at 1,200 pots for the American Window Glass Company, or original trust, and 700 pots for the Independent Window Glass Company, representing the former outsiders. The total of 1,900 pots is a reduction of 300 from the total in operation before the two combined.

It is an open secret in the trade that the new double-barreled combination has set aside a working fund to be used in a warfare on the Belgian window glass manufacturers, who have always been a thorn in the side of the American manufacturers particularly along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, where the elements of freight and breakage and the average duty of 100 per cent are not as effective barriers as they are inland.

The advance in window glass, which goes into effect at once, will have no bearing on plate glass. Prices of plate glass remain unchanged at the level established in 1898.

Prices of window glass were withdrawn by all manufacturers over a month ago, and none of the big buyers, such as sash and door makers, etc., have been able to cover their season's demands. Stocks in all positions are of ordinary proportions. —Chicago Times-Herald, Jan. 18.

GREENHOUSE BUILDING.

The glass surface of the country is rapidly expanding. During the year 1900 the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, alone supplied building material for 49,760 lineal feet of greenhouses, which required 1,094,952 square feet of glass to cover. Of the glass noted, 915,464 square feet were lapped and 179,488 feet butted. About 65 per cent of it was 16-inch glass. Of the 49,760 lineal feet of greenhouses 37,238 feet had ventilating sash that opened from the ridge, and 12,522 feet that opened from the header.

The John C. Moninger Co. are doing a little remodeling on their own account, making extensive improvements in their factory that will greatly increase their capacity and enable them to get out rush orders in double quick time.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Schlegel & Fottler, 26 So. Market St., Boston, Mass., wholesale price list of seeds, bulbs, fertilizers and sundries; L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, Minn., May's catalogue of northern grown seeds, plants, bulbs and fruits; M. Crawford Co., Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, catalogue of strawberry plants and gladiolus bulbs; The Steele, Briggs Seed Co., Toronto, Ont., seed catalogue; Pinehurst Nurseries, Pinehurst, N. C., surplus list of American seeds; The McGregor Bros. Co., Springfield, Ohio, 1901 wholesale price list of plants for florists.

BELLEFONTAINE, OHIO.—Messrs. Poole & Purllant, purchasers of the Hover greenhouses here, have arrived from Middletown, Conn., and are now in possession of the plant. They brought their families with them and will make this city their home as well as business headquarters. They intend to considerably develop and extend the business.

PIQUA, OHIO.—On January 1st The Piqua Floral Co. opened a cut flower store at 132 No. Main street, and later they intend adding a full line of seeds, bulbs, etc. The proprietors are F. H. Frisch and H. G. Hershey.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—Hans Tobler, gardener at the State Insane Asylum, has lately recovered from an attack of appendicitis, and is now apparently in his usual good health again.

A CLIMBING CHRYSANTHEMUM.

We have received from B. M. Wichers & Co., Gretna, La., a photograph of a chrysanthemum that shows a climbing habit. The photograph is hardly clear enough to reproduce but the habit of the plant is unmistakable. The flowers are single and Messrs. Wichers & Co. report that the plant is perfectly hardy with them and covered with flower from October to January or later. It originated with them about four years ago.

LAKE CITY, MINN.—A local daily prints some interesting information regarding the Jewell Nursery Co., established here in 1868. Some items taken from their inventory for one year are as follows: 252,000 apple and crab apple trees; 34,000 plum trees; 23,000 cherry, peach, pear and apricot trees; 100,000 evergreens; 500,000 strawberry plants; 55,000 grape vines; 125,000 shade and ornamental trees; 47,000 roses; 80,000 currants; 63,000 ornamental shrubs; 50,000 gooseberries; 49,000 ornamental climbing vines; 110,000 raspberries, blackberries and dewberries; 155,000 hardy herbaceous plants; 2,000,000 seedling shade trees for timber claims. The establishment has entirely rebuilt its greenhouses and they now have about six thousand feet of glass devoted to tender plants.

FAULKNER, MASS.—J. Francis Harrington, the florist, has filed a bankruptcy petition. He owes about $2,000, with no available assets.

LORAIN, O.—M. A. Wilhelmy will discontinue the business formerly in charge of his son here, and has closed the store.

READERS will confer a favor by sending in items of trade interest.

OUR GRAND NEW ROSE
Queen of Edgely
PINK AMERICAN BEAUTY,

Writes—December 31, 1900, as follows:—
"Having had the pleasure of visiting your greenhouses and seeing—for the first time—your new rose 'Queen of Edgely' growing on the plants, I should like to say that my first impression as regards its sterling worth has been greatly strengthened. At the time of my visit it was a sight worth going a long way to see, having stems 6 to 8 feet long. With its luxuriant foliage, exquisite color and fragrance, large size of bloom, together with its free budding qualities, I consider it a grand introduction and a money maker for all growers of American Beauty Roses."

ROSES

GRAFTING ROSES.

About to graft some roses, a question occurs to me: Why is it necessary to have a tight box to enclose the newly grafted stocks? It is a common, everyday job, one performed by just ordinary workmen in nurseries, and yet when the subject of rose grafting is approached one of the very first things asked is, have you a case?

It strikes me that we may be following in the footsteps of our preceptors without thinking for ourselves; in other words, keeping in a rut, perhaps, when we might strike out a better route.

Let us look at the reason of the process. The object of grafting is only to make a weaker scion unite with a stronger stock. Of course, both scion and stock must be in the same condition of growth; a dormant scion can be, and frequently is, used on a dormant stock, as in outdoor work, the main necessity being to keep air from where the union is to take place. It is true the outdoor work is usually done when sap is about to start, in the spring, but there is no hard and fast rule; the main precaution is to use plenty of wax.

Now, to apply the same practice to our roses, may we not put dormant scions, taken from outdoor plants, and look for the same results? Provided, of course, we secure like conditions, stocks being potted a short time and making roots. Would it be necessary to have a bell-glass for them to unite?

Now, take the case of budding in the rose house; every one knows that nothing is more simple; it seems sometimes as if it is only necessary to bring the bud and stock into juxtaposition, in any old way, to have them unite. Why will not the same rule apply to grafts, both scion and stock being in moderate growing condition?

Why can we not graft without the Wardian case? Can we not let Manetti get a reasonable start on the ordinary bench, then take our scions from growing plants, join them much as in ordinary outdoor work, using plenty of wax, and stand on the ordinary bench in an ordinary house?

I ask these questions because I want to know, and not because I have any curiosity. Perhaps someone has tried this and knows that it will not work, but for one I cannot see why.

ROSE NOTES.

The American Beauty.

While I do not pose as a past master in Beauty growing I have always had a fancy for this rose and have grown it with good success for years. I do not know whether my way of growing them is generally practiced and I would like to hear from growers who differ from me as to their methods. We are never too old to learn and a little pointer at the right time will often save a whole house from ruin.

In taking wood for cuttings avoid that which appears spindly, weak or in any way diseased, and use that of medium strength and neither very soft nor very hard. The best plants will be from cuttings that have retained their leaves. It is a waste of time to pot a cutting that is not properly rooted. As a rule they will die off, and even should they grow they will make inferior plants. It is not advisable to buy Beauty cuttings. The roots are so easily broken that no matter how carefully packed, they are always more or less injured and in consequence a percentage will die after potting. If you have to buy it is best to buy plants, and the best are none too good.

After the young plants once start to grow they will grow very rapidly and will soon need a shift into 3-inch pots. Don't let red spider get a start on them or go to extremes in watering. Don't let the plants get checked by becoming pot-bound. Pot into 4-inch pots if the house is not ready for planting by the time they should be out of the 3-inch.

I believe in early planting so that the roots may have time to get a good hold of the soil and the plant make a good growth before fall or before flowers are wanted. My experience is that early planted Beauties do the best during winter while those planted later will be best in the spring. By early planting I mean planting about the end of May, and by late planting I mean planting about the end of June.

Soil that will grow good Brides and Maids will also grow good Beauties. I prefer a rich loamy sod mixed with about one-fifth of cow manure and I allow one sack of bone meal to a house 23x150. If the bone is not mixed with the soil it can be spread on the bed and then worked in with a hoe or spade. I like to have the soil five inches deep and well firmed before planting.

For planting use only clean and thrifty stock. Poor and sickly plants may apparently do very well for awhile and "grow out of it" as we say, but the defects will show when we are cutting the flowers. I plant four rows on a 5-foot bench, the plants 10 inches apart in the rows. The day before planting on the bench the plants should be watered well so there will be no dry ones among them. Always have a bucket of water handy when planting and if an occasional plant is dry let the ball soak awhile before planting it.

I take care not to set the plants too deep and a basin is left around each. They are then given a thorough watering. I widen the basins as the roots spread and discard them only when the roots are pretty well all through the bed. The Beauty likes plenty of water when growing, but let the bed get fairly on the dry side before giving water, and then water so as to have a uniform moisture all through the bed. I like to be able to press my finger through the soil to the bottom.

A great many failures result from improper watering. If you give only a light watering every day or so you are apt to have the soil on top too moist at all times and in this way encourage black spot to get a start, or you will have the lower half of the soil too dry and thus check the growth of the plant, which will increase the amount of blind wood. During hot summer weather I find one good watering will last two days, and later on when the bed is watered all over it can stand for three days. In winter time one watering a week will often do and in spring again it must be done more frequently. There can of course be no set rule established. We have to be governed by the condition of the soil, the weather, our benches and heating arrangements. Always try to select a sunny day for watering and then do it before noon.

The young plants can be syringed twice a day during the summer months. This should be done not later than 11 o'clock in the morning and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This syringing at noon is not so much to dampen the foliage as to get more moisture into the atmosphere. For this reason I like to wet the walks or under the benches occasionally. Even in the winter months when firing hard I wet the walks or under the benches rather than to do so much syringing of the plants.

As fall approaches our aim must be to keep the atmosphere of the house as dry as possible and syringing must be done with more care. It is of the greatest importance to have the foliage dry before night as otherwise black spot will soon get a start. Syringing must be done to keep down red spider, but this does not necessitate doing it on every favorable day during fall and winter. One syringing with a nozzle and with 60 to 80 pounds pressure will do more good than a half dozen lighter ones. One to three syringings during the week according to the weather ought to be enough to keep red spider down. In the spring when more ventilation can be given syringing can be done more freely but always avoid having a surplus of moisture in the air for any length of time.

The treatment of the plants for the first two or three months after being benched is of the utmost importance as regards future success, for during this period we build up our plants and get them to store up energy and strength for future work. They are in training for a contest that will tax their powers to the utmost and should receive every advantage that may help to put them in the best possible condition for it. It is also the time when we lay the foundation for blind wood.

There are various ways of inducing the plants to break from the bottom. The poorest of all is to cut them back, and this is especially injudicious when the wood is quite soft. This has a tendency to induce the starting of a lot of thin and slender shoots that may run up six to eight feet and generally come blind, or if they bring flowers they are poor ones. In general Beauties have only one branch when planted. If left to themselves they will naturally break out from the bottom and send up one or two good shoots, but it sometimes takes too long and we have to assist them.

The forming of a bud when the shoot is 15 to 18 inches high will check the plant enough to induce it to make a bottom growth, but if the plant shows no inclination to set bud when 20 to 24 inches long I give it a short bend downward where the wood is about half ripe. I do not break it but it injures the bark enough to check the growth in that direction somewhat. In this way the plant is not deprived of any foliage nor is its growth otherwise seriously interfered with, but I accomplish my purpose. The eyes around the bottom soon send up young shoots, of which I select from three to five of the strongest and cut the rest off before they get very long. They will generally grow 15 to 24 inches high and form a bud. Of these I pinch off some as soon as they show color; others I leave on longer and then cut the bud with two or three leaves. By the time the last operation is performed the first disbudded shoots will have started to grow and from this time on I never allow all the shoots on a plant to form a flower at nearly the same time. The first disbudded shoots will form buds while the last and somewhat cut back ones will still be in full growth.

If any stem is not long enough I take the bud off—not cut it back—and let it make another growth. This second growth is generally from 18 to 36 inches, which is added to the original stem. Started in this way I have a pretty even cut of Beauties. They will also not grow too long in the stem and bloom as surely as any other rose.

If an extra supply of Beauties is wanted at any special date you can help a great deal by taking off some buds about six weeks before you want flowers on those shoots. But make it a point to keep the plants in a growing condition at all times and never cut the whole plant down during a period of but a week or two.

Black spot is caused by too much moisture or a cool damp atmosphere. Proper ventilating and firing in time are the best preventives. Always keep some sulphur on the pipes. I often use carbolic acid, one teaspoonful to three gallons of water, to keep it from spreading. Three ounces of carbonate of copper and one quart of ammonia to 50 gallons of water is also highly recommended, but the best way is to pick off the affected leaves, burn them, and keep the air of the house dry.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Prices.

The past week was a very trying one to most retailers in the large cities. Perhaps all throughout the country good flowers were scarce and the consequences were attended by much anxiety and general unpleasantness. In New York roses particularly were very few compared to the demand, and higher prices were asked for them than on Christmas day. Some few delight in seeing extremely high prices realized for stock, but the fact remains that great harm is done by putting an almost prohibitive price on flowers at any time of the year.

It would be much better in every way for the retail business if the growers would agree among themselves to charge a set and steady price for their stock changing the price at stated intervals; as it is today many a retailer dare not charge his customers what he himself has to pay for the stock, and he is wise in not doing so. The general public cannot and will not understand how or why they should be charged twice as much today as yesterday for the same grade of flowers. The logic of supply and demand is very dim betimes to impatient, perhaps unreasonable humanity. To have to pay $15.00 per 100 wholesale for weak stemmed roses of the Bride and Bridesmaid class in the third week in January, whereas on Christmas eve the same grade could be had for $4 or $6, is a hard nut to crack; a particularly hard one if you had the misfortune to win a decoration by giving a hair-splitting estimate, and where you promised so many roses.

The actual wholesale prices for flowers in New York last week were: Beauties, 6 to 75 cents each; Brides, Bridesmaids, Golden Gates and roses of that class, 4 up to 25; Meteors ran medium between the above because they are usually like round buttons; lily of the valley took a drop, but you had to pay from 2½ to 4 for it when wanted; yellow trumpets brought 6, tulips 4 to 6, paper whites 3, Romans 2 to 3, freesia 20 to 25 a bunch, same for sweet peas—both of them just enough for a buttonhole; carnations from 2½ up to 10; violets 50 to $1.00, cattleyas 50 cents. There might have been chances where a wholesaler didn't exactly know how much he could charge, or perhaps his charitable mood was on, where one could pick up a bargain, but the above were the prevailing prices last week, and it was very hard to realize much profit on the stock over the counter.

The cut flower public were in a mood to buy, too, and the better class of stores were busy, still there were hundreds of cases where either people refused to buy or grumbling took cheaper substitutes, and then again you all know a stock of fresh flowers must be kept in the store whether there be business or not.

Decorations.

The difficulties confronting one by a scarcity of cut flowers can very often be overcome by a little serious thinking and a judicious use of plants, green or flowering. Flowering plant decorations have been the rule of late in New York, and the principal material used has been Begonia Lorraine and Simon Mardner azalea. The ball given by W. C. Whitney early in January was one of the most important events of recent times; his great house is a home for the purchascable treasures of Europe. We wish every retailer could have seen it decorated. The decorations were not elaborate, they were simple and very rich. Vases containing 100 or 200 long stemmed American Beauties can make a better effect artistically than all your hangings and draperies; of such was the greater part of this decoration. Another pretty item was the arranging of 75 hanging baskets of Begonia Lorraine under a lighted glass roof; the effect was very charming, and then again peeping over a white Venetian marble balustrade was a hedge-like row of Mardner azaleas. It was all good and J. H. Troy deserves credit for the work.

Door Wreaths.

A reader in Burlington, Ia., asks for information as to the making of door wreaths. By this we presume is meant funeral wreaths to hang on the bell knob. This is a very ancient custom and was used by the early Greeks to mark the houses where festivals were being given as well as sorrows were keen; the difference was known by materials used; foliage or flower meant much more in the language of sentiment then than they do today.

We once in a while see these wreaths in the larger cities, but a garland is more frequently used. They are made by tying a few white flowers, roses, hyacinths or such, on a string of smilax or asparagus and hanging it on the bell or door knob (in ancient times it was hung on the knocker). A piece of white or purple ribbon is often tied on the garland or wreath, but the whole is supposed to be very simple.

Of course there is a wide opportunity for improvement and the exercise of individual ideas in these designs, some of which we will be pleased to give you later.

Funeral Designs.

In regard to the query as to moss or tinfoil on wreaths, by all means desist from using tinfoil on funeral designs. The brazen glitter of it makes a wretched contrast to what is used at such a sad event. In New York we have a green sheet moss; in the absence of that we use ferns or any kind of greens. First line the frame with this material, facing it outwards, then fill in with gray moss. A wire design of any kind should be completely covered with green back and front before a flower is put in it. No paper or tinfoil is used in choice funeral work today; they who use it when green moss or any kind of green, be it ferns, hemlock, or spruce, are obtainable, are behind the times.

We must apologize to our friends for the manner in which we have conducted this department but we promise them more than their dollars' worth in the days to come.

A STORE DISPLAY.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the display in the store of Mr. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo., during his chrysanthemum show last November. During the three days of the show the number of visitors is estimated at over 5,000 and that it was appreciated by the visitors was evidenced by the commendation bestowed.

Most attractive features of the display were two dinner tables, both decorated with orchids, a round one with cattleyas and a long one with odontoglossums and Farleyense fern.

In the rear of the store is a balcony and here was stationed an orchestra of three pieces. The attendance and appreciation shown and the subsequent results have convinced Mr. Rock that such displays pay.

LILY OF THE VALLEY AND DEUTZIA.

A subscriber wishes to know when to start lily of the valley for Easter, and at what heat the bed should be kept. We will presume that the inquirer means in the forcing of pips, the usual method, and not the clumps which are sometimes forced for Easter. There is not much difference between the treatment for Easter and that given at the present time. Having been very successful for the past season or two with lily of the valley, I would as well briefly state our method. The same will do identically for Easter crops.

We have four 4-inch hot water pipes boxed in tightly so that all the heat is confined beneath the bed. The bottom of the bed is roofing slates on which is placed six inches of sand. The boards project above the sand about a foot, but the top board is hinged at a level with the top of the bed so that when watering we lay that board down and can run the hose between the rows of valley without wetting the bells, because wetting the bells after they once show color is a serious matter and must not be done. The bed is soaked every day the first ten days. The bed is covered with shutters made of half-inch boards in four-foot lengths, that are light and convenient to handle. By this time the growth is pretty well up and then we cover with similar sized frames on which is tacked cheese cloth. We keep them on till the buds are pretty well developed, but for two or three days before cutting if not sunny we remove these and give them the full daylight.

I would add here that the sand keeps constantly at a temperature of about 80 degrees. Now to make sure of having them in in good time you should allow twenty-one days from the time you put the pips in the sand until you cut them. They should not be cut and immediately sold or they will wilt. They should have at least twenty-four hours with their stems in cold water before selling.

I have passed through some experience with Deutzia gracilis, having one year allowed too short a time. We will suppose that these plants have been grown in pots; they always force much better when they are, still they will force even if lifted from the ground. They are more serviceable if brought along moderately cool and not rushed with great heat From the time you bring them into the greenhouse allow eight weeks and then you will be sure to be in time. The ideal temperature for them would be about the first four weeks in a temperature of 45 to 50 and the last four weeks 50 to 55 degrees.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Store Display by W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo., last November.

CARNATION RECORDS.

I do not know but that it is customary for carnation growers to keep an exact record of the daily cut of each variety, but I know of quite a number that do not do so. After following the plan for two seasons we have come to the conclusion that it is the only correct way to do if we desire to know exactly which varieties are paying and which are not.

We found last season that the old stand-by, Wm. Scott, was not giving us as large an average number of blooms per plant as some other varieties, though a person going through the houses any day would say exactly the reverse from just looking at them. I will admit that it is a little more trouble to keep such a record and yet with a proper book it does not take so very much more time and we consider it well spent. As a result we can turn to our record book and tell just how many were cut any day through the season, also the weekly and monthly totals and the total to date for the season, all of which is exceedingly satisfactory from all standpoints.

You will find in this way the kinds that do the best at the holiday time, when, of course, you want the most and also the kinds that "crop," which are never as satisfactory to us as those that average more evenly. As the result of this record we annually reject a number of kinds, and often it is a kind that you would not otherwise discard.

I think someone would like to know what our average per plant has been on a few varieties from Sept. 29 up to Jan. 1 Of course the fraction does not always come out exactly, so when it is a little over we mark it plus and when a little under, minus.

	Blooms.
Gen. Maceo	12 1-3
Morning Glory	10 3-4
New York	8 3-4
Daybreak	7 2-3
Wm. Scott	7+
Gen. Gomez	7—
Glacier	6 2-3
Flora Hill	4½+
Victor	4 1-3—
Crane	3 1-4—
Marquis	3—
Olympia	3 1-2
Bradt	3—

Now I have not any idea if they have averaged what specialists make them do or not (I wish I did) and I wish that others who keep such records would let us hear from them. It is very interesting to look over the records and see how each kind is doing month by month. One result of keeping them, too, is the improvement in quantity and quality that we cut from year to year.

I presume all growers that have a local trade will retain some varieties that on the whole are not entirely satisfactory because of some special demand that they may have, at least, until they test some new variety that fills the bill and has the additional virtue of making a good record. R. E. SHUPHELT.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

New Carnations.

Registered by Geo. W. Binstead, Summit, N. J.—"Maid of Honor"; Color soft blush pink a little deeper than Daybreak, exceedingly free flowering with good strong stems averaging 24 inches. Size of flower, 2½ to 3 inches; grown under same conditions as Scott and McGowan it has for two seasons produced more flowers than either from an equal space.

Special Notice.

Mr. Douglas H. Thomas, Park Commissioner of Baltimore, Md., has kindly offered a cash prize of $25.00 for the best unnamed seedling carnation raised in Baltimore, to be exhibited at the coming show of the American Carnation Society in that city.

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

We read the carnation number of the REVIEW with a great deal of pleasure. It is one of your best and it will be carefully preserved for reference.

Friend Scott gives, it seems to me, some of the best hints on what to expect when we pay money for cuttings of novelties. Insist on No. 1 stock or return the cuttings. This trying to doctor up sickly cuttings and plants is nothing but taking the road to disappointment.

GREEN MOULD.

I am having trouble with a green mould or fungus forming on the soil around my seedlings. What causes it? I use a loam soil lightened with leafmould. Has the ventilation of the greenhouse or overwatering the general run of plants in the house anything to do with it? J. C. Morgan.

J. C. M. is not alone in his troubles. Seed pans where the seeds germinate slowly and the soil has not been previously sterilized will invariably become covered with some low plant organism. If the house is damp and close the quicker will these minute plants germinate and flourish, for light and air are not congenial to their growth.

Without going into a long story of their growth, which would not be profitable, for the prevention of this fungus is what is needed, I would say that any spores of fungus or mosses or weeds that exist in the soil either that you sow in or the material you cover with can be easily killed by baking the soil, which can be done in several ways. Or if you use steam you can put some soil in a tight box and turn in a jet of steam. Either plan will rid the soil of all germs and weed seeds. Wm. Scott.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lilies.

From the present outlook the Japan longiflorum lilies will want a high temperature every day between now and the 6th of April. Others may have obtained an earlier start, but they never arrive here for any waste of time. Each individual bulb has its own quality and some are earlier than others. Particularly is this so with the Bermuda type. There is usually one end of a house warmer than the other or you have a still warmer position to give them, so you should not delay in giving the backward plants a still warmer temperature. You have now two months to do this, and it is easier done in that time than doing it all in the last three or four weeks.

The Bermuda lilies are always in time or there is no excuse in their being late, but Easter (April 7th) being rather early the large bulbs forced for that date will by no means want anything but a good warm house. So much depends on weather it is impossible to give definite time, and two weeks bright weather end of March will do more to hasten flowering than a month of cold, cloudy weather.

The lily lasts in flower so well that it is much better to be on the early side. We have often thought that people would be satisfied with two flowers open and three or four buds to come, but the great majority are not. They want a show. For church purposes, where most of them go, this is reasonable and proper, but for a present you would think they preferred a plant that would longest be in flower, but it is not so except in a very few instances. So my humble advice is, be in time and have a little time to spare.

The Bermuda lilies have with us just about the average number of former years that are diseased and useless, yet if you lose 50 per cent and have the sense to throw out the diseased plants the moment you detect it, they are yet as profitable as anything we grow, for they do not, compared with the price, occupy much space on the bench and are all out of the way in time for most of our bedding plants. The lilies, particularly the Bermudas, are often seen with the tip of every leaf brown. I have never heard a satisfactory explanation of the cause.

Nothing is more troubled with the green aphis than the young, crowded leaves of the lily and sufficient fumigation to kill them down among the crowded leaves would be more smoke than is healthy for any green leaf. While a weekly smoke will easily keep down the green fly on any expanded leaves it is much better to rely on an application of tobacco water to destroy those that are deep down in the crown of leaves and buds. If you use the Rose Leaf Extract dilute it 75 to one of water. If the Nikoteen, then dilute 200 to one. You will often see a lily bloom twisted, "busted" and distorted on a perfectly healthy plant and it is usually the first flower on the stem. This I believe is caused by the puncture of the aphis when the bud was a very small affair.

Azaleas.

The generally mild winter we have been having is bringing along the Easter azaleas rather earlier than is desired. This is the case with that splendid variety Mme. Van der Cruyssen and the good white Niobe. Azaleas that you grew last summer can be easier controlled, but there is something about the change of climate or the conditions they are subjected to in the sea voyage that starts the buds, both leaf and flower.

I have often reminded you that if you want to sell them this spring and want a fine show of flowers you must keep the young leaf growth pinched off or it will grow at the expense of the flower. You must do this and in a week or two they will show a great inclination to be sending out their young growths. Now this very important plant differs entirely from the lilies in the condition our customers want it. They know that an azalea that is entirely out in flower will soon have many flowers dropping and I have noticed they repeatedly ask for a plant that has flowers enough to be attractive and yet has buds to open.

Now when once in full bloom they are difficult to keep in good order and color. We have had 200 plants in a cellar or basement for 10 days before Easter and although not a loss they were poor stuff compared with those in the greenhouse. Now is the time to do the retarding with the varieties that you think will be too early. A cold pit will do, or any place that will not actually freeze. I know from observation that our plants of some of the varieties will be too early if kept in the greenhouse in a night temperature of 45 to 50 and it's much better for them now to be put into a low temperature than when showing color.

Geraniums.

There is sure to be as big a demand as ever and in some localities a still greater for the ever popular geranium. The plants we shifted from a 2-inch to a 3-inch at New Year's will now give us a cutting from the top. Don't destroy the plant for a cutting, but if you have two good eyes you have enough for a good plant. Pot these cuttings firmly in 2-inch pots. When I say firmly I mean get your thumb and finger down as a wedge so that the soil is solid around the base of the cutting—that is important. They make better plants than when put in the sand and it's much less trouble. We stand these cuttings on a light bench and give them one good soaking and after that we don't water again till they are decidedly dry. These young plants if grown right along and shifted as soon as rooted make excellent bedding plants by the middle of May.

A VISIT TO KEW.

Vice-president Benjamin P. Ware, of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, recently read a paper before the society on "A Visit to Kew Gardens and Hampton Court." He said in part:

Kew Garden was originally a private fruit and vegetable garden of seventeen acres, belonging to the Prince of Wales, the father of George III., who began to improve it as a botanical garden and pleasure ground in 1730. It has received additions from time to time, so that at present it contains 270 acres. It became public in 1840, and was placed under the control of Her Majesty's office of public works, with an annual appropriation for its maintenance of £32,650, or $163,250. It is said to be the finest and most complete botanical collection and arboretum in the world. As for tree planting, it can hardly be excelled.

Kew Garden is accessible by steamboat, omnibus or steam railroad. It is seven miles from the center of London; the surface is undulating, with carriage drives around and through the grounds; with broad graveled walks in various directions, opening long vistas through well-grown trees—some in rows, but generally irregularly planted with plenty of room for the full development of each tree. Every variety of tree, shrub and herbaceous plant is plainly labeled. It was intended that every variety that will grow in that climate should be represented in its very best possible condition, and as the winters in England are much milder than ours in New England, many more varieties may be grown there than here.

It is very delightful when traveling in a strange land to meet anyone from your own country, even though an entire stranger at home, and I found it even so to see in this collection of specimens our beautiful white pine, hemlock, spruce, elm, mountain ash, white ash, and oaks, and among the herbaceous plants, our fall asters and goldenrod in variety and many other familiar friends, not excelled in beauty by those of any other country.

As tree planting there began more than a hundred and fifty years ago, some of the trees are very large; among these are a dozen or more cedars of Lebanon of immense size, four or four and one-half feet in diameter. As they stand well apart, and were allowed to branch near the ground, they grew in a form peculiar to that species; with their deep green, compact foliage and majestic forms, they readily command the attention and respect given to this tree by early scripture writers, who frequently used the cedars of Lebanon as symbols of strength, beauty and grandeur.

Near the group of cedars in the garden is an immense Scotch pine, towering above all others, with a clean trunk, about 100 feet to its first branches.

The shrubs are in such great variety, so well grown, and plainly labeled, that they afford a superior opportunity for study. Rhododendrons are especially fine here, and a collection of over 6,000 flowering hardy herbaceous plants, embracing more than a thousand varieties, may be seen—among them the original wild chrysanthemum brought from China 105 years ago. It was first introduced into Europe, making our magnificent chrysanthemum shows possible, as well as the one held last November at the Royal Aquarium in London, when its small yellow flower was shown in contrast with the latest triumph of the florist—a flower fifteen inches in diameter.

The most noticeable structure in the garden is the Chinese pagoda, built in 1761, the grounds around it so laid out that it may be seen directly in front from several points, through long irregular lines of trees. Another very prominent object is the flagstaff, a single spar of Douglas pine brought from Colorado, supposed to have been 250 years old. It is 163 feet high, with twelve feet underground, enclosed in solid brickwork to insure its security from wind and decay.

The Palm House is probably unequaled in beauty and grandeur the world over. It is 362 feet long, with an ell on each side, and is filled with a great variety of palms and other plants requiring the same conditions, many grown as high as the top of the building, and all in perfect condition. The Horticultural Museum is a large three-story brick building containing an herbarium, library and many horticultural curiosities of interest. Between these two buildings is a very beautiful artificial pond which makes a frontage for each building. Around this pond are beds of flowers of the most brilliant and showy kinds.

There is a Wood Museum, containing specimens of wood from all of the British colonies and other countries; also seventeen or more green houses adapted to the needs of different families of plants, one of them devoted to exotic water lilies, among which the Victoria regia is prominent. Another is devoted to the citrus family of fruits and another to the cactus in great variety.

A portion of the grounds is set apart as a wild garden, with a perfect tangle of trees, shrubs and herbaceous plants, without order or design. The collection of Marianne North's paintings of flowers, containing 833 pictures, is arranged in a brick building provided especially for it, adding very much to the interest of the garden.

Where there are no flower beds the surface is a beautiful English lawn, such as we have often read of—so closely shorn, so green, so soft is it, that one is reminded of a velvet carpet. The signs are not "Keep off the grass," but "Please do not tread upon the edge of the grass." When any portion of these lawns shows signs of exhaustion, the sod is carefully removed, a heavy coating of old stable manure forked in, then the sod is replaced so carefully that no signs of its removal is noticed.

Kew Garden is so accessible, so beautiful and so instructive that it is not surprising that from 60,000 to 80,000 people visit it during the season annually.

The palace at Hampton Court is fifteen miles distant from London, and seven miles beyond Kew Garden, and is reached by the same lines of travel, continuing through Kew and Richmond by omnibus, or if one prefers, by a coach and four in-hand from Piccadilly Circus on Sunday mornings.

The approach to the palace is through Bushy Park, of 400 acres, by a broad avenue about a mile long. On each side of this avenue are five rows of horse-chestnut trees, set fifty feet apart. These trees are two or three feet in diameter and about eighty feet high, and cover with their shade a space, including the avenue, not less than 800 feet wide.

The garden, of forty-four acres, was laid out on each side of the palace by William III. The right side, called the Pond Garden, is in the Dutch style, with elevated terraces, sunken paneled lawns, arcade walks formed by flowering shrubs, flower beds, and a goldfish pond. Here is the old grapery, containing the famous Black Hamburg vine that is 132 years old. The stem at the entrance of the glass house is a foot in diameter. There it sends out three or four branches three inches in diameter. These are trained so that the whole roof, 100 feet long and 40 feet wide, is completely covered, and the fruit is so carefully pruned and thinned that the bunches hang about a foot apart from every part of the vine. As I saw them—1,200 clusters, fully ripe and well colored—they presented a sight that I shall never forget. This enormous crop is maintained by an annual application of a heavy coat of old stable manure and ground bone, which is forked into a plot of ground about as large as the grapery just across the graveled roadway, the main roots passing under the road to this feeding plot.

The part of the garden on the other side of the palace is differently arranged, and planted chiefly with larger shrubs and trees.

A FINE DELIVERY WAGON.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the delivery wagon of Mr. Thomas Stevenson, San Francisco. It cost $1,000 and is the finest wagon of the sort in that city. The picture also shows part of the front of Mr. Stevenson's store.

A BOTANICAL STATION.

The University of Minnesota will open a botanical station on the west coast of the island of Vancouver next summer if the present plans are carried out. T. M. Baird, Jr., of Victoria, has presented a tract of land for that purpose. The station will be complete in its equipments, and is a novel departure. Minnesota being the second university to open and operate such a station. Leland Stanford university has one in operation, known as the Hopkins seaside laboratory.

A party of thirty or more botanists from Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas has been formed to open up the work in June. It is expected that a few more will avail themselves of the advantages offered by the station and join the party.

TROUBLES

Conducted by LEONARD LAWTON

Twentieth Century Troubles.

"The way to resume is to resume." Here we are again. How about the troubles of the Twentieth Century? Troubles are always with us. They change in character, increase or diminish, but never leave us entirely.

Is the Business Overdone?

We recently had a conversation with a carnation grower who was considerably disturbed over the fact that the prices of fancy carnations had averaged lower in the Chicago market this season than for some years previously. He wondered whether the day was not rapidly approaching when high grade blooms would no longer bring a price that would make them profitable to grow. He asked us what we thought about it.

Our reply was that many more startling changes than this had taken place during the last fifteen years and that the possibilities of the future were immense. If anyone had fifteen years ago predicted that the volume of trade in cut flowers would in 1901 reach its present magnitude he would have been considered a fit subject for treatment by a specialist in mental diseases. We live in the greatest age and the greatest country and under the greatest system of government the world has ever seen. And we are still infants in swaddling clothes as regards the use of flowers. The greatest development is yet to come.

It will be necessary for us to adjust ourselves to new conditions as they present themselves but the expansion of the business as a whole will go on without even a temporary halt. It is true that an immense glass surface is being annually added and that the demand has at times been caught up with and even passed. But the trade has suffered no injury as a whole. Prices have fallen steadily on low grade stock but those on first class flowers have as a rule been well maintained.

But will not the early future bring us to the point where even high grade stock will not bring the present rates? It is quite likely, but it will result in a reduction of the cost of production in ways now unknown to us, just as the cost of production has been markedly reduced during the past fifteen years.

Will not the big establishments eat up the little ones? Yes, this is apt to result unless the little place is conducted by a man having sufficient skill in producing some specialty to overcome the advantages possessed by the large establishment whose strength runs more in producing at a minimum of cost. It will be a case of the survival of the fittest and the fittest will not only survive but will wax fat.

The time has already arrived for the owner of a small place who produces all ordinary grade stock to so change his methods as to produce strictly high grade or drop out of the race. And if he can't change his methods the sooner he drops out the more he will have left to start with in some other line.

The business will pass through the changes that all other businesses have passed through during the transition from a little trade to a large and important one.

It will not be many years before there will be but few houses devoted to the production of cut flowers in small places for purely local demand. The reduction in the cost of production at the big establishments near the large shipping centers will make it possible for them to supply cut flowers at prices that will make it folly for the retail grower to produce them himself. And close study of the best methods of cutting, packing and shipping will do away with most of the present troubles regarding delivery at destination in perfect condition.

But will the glass of the retail growers be thereby lessened in value? Not at all. They will devote more and more of their space to the production of plants —good plants—plants that will meet part of the expanding demand for flowers. And these plants will ever be a check on the prices of cut flowers and prevent exorbitant charges for them should the production eventually be confined to a few hands and trust methods be adopted to push prices up.

In finely grown, well flowered plants lies the business strength of the retail growers in small places.

But let them have an eye open for the purely store florist who will invade their territory and take away their trade with outside grown flowers should they fail to keep up to date and adjust themselves to the changing conditions.

Yes, the Twentieth Century will have troubles of its own and it will take wisdom to meet them.

Maybe we are too free in prophesying, but we think there are some points worth considering in what we have said.

Good advice can come from a doubtful source. A lady was much taken with the words of wisdom that appeared in a column in one of the daily papers under the heading "Advice to Mothers." She decided to interview the writer of these hints in person. On arrival at the office she asked for the lady who wrote the "Advice to Mothers," and the office boy replied: "That's him, in the pink shirt, smoking a cigarette."

Send Them In.

If you have any Twentieth Century troubles of your own you would like us to tackle, send them in. We don't do this all alone and can bring the experience of many wise men to bear upon your problem.

Chemical Fertilizers.

C. R. wants to know whither we are drifting in the matter of chemical fertilizers and whether such fertilizers are not doing more harm than good. While it is no doubt true that harm has been done by the too free use of chemicals, it has undoubtedly resulted entirely from mistakes or a misunderstanding of the power of the substances used. It has been predicted that it will not be long before every grower will have his little chemical laboratory and we are inclined to believe the prophet.

Retail Credits.

Ein Deutscher writes: "I read with interest the articles in the Review on credits. It shows that something is being done to abate the credit evil. The great loss on charged accounts is due to the unwise credit extension to customers who have no appreciation of the business or moral obligations involved. An axiom of ecoromics is: 'That which is common loses its savor.' When unpaid for wares are displayed everywhere, what will conscientious buyers do to compete with such a display?

"If the tradesman will bear in mind that it is a sound business principle to cover the cost of production he will be better off financially when the fiscal year is up. Tradesmen are awaking to the seriousness of losses on credit sales and find when they check the evil in whole or part they are uplifting the ethics of trade."

W. F. G. says: "In reference to the question of credits to retail customers, will say we have been in the retail business eleven years and by careful observation and using ordinary judgment, we are pleased to say that the credit question gives us little trouble. As a rule, we find most flower lovers and buyers to be honest. Although we have a rather large list of credit customers, we have no reason to regret extending credit generally, for in very few instances have we gone amiss or found difficulty in collecting our bills.

"But one matter we consider of utmost importance, and that is to keep the books posted up to date, so a customer can at a moment's notice have the amount of his account should he call for it. Another important thing is to mail a statement to each and every customer on the last day of each month. This avoids much misunderstanding and facilitates bringing in the cash. We feel that with ordinary judgment on the part of the proprietor and clerks, florists need lose very little money through bad bills."

BUFFALO.

Business has been pronounced rather quiet for the past two weeks and with the exception of violets the supply has also been quiet. Roses have been quite scarce and carnations might be much more plentiful to the advantage of both grower and retailer. A few parties are straggling along, and will, we hope, till Lent begins.

Mr. C. F. Christensen with all his salt and gypsum water has been producing a grand lot of carnations. They have been and are now a very high quality. Most of them, and these the best, were never planted out of doors. They were kept in 3-inch pots till the first of August and then planted on the benches and the glass put on toward the end of September. Crane, White Cloud, Joost and Bradt have been his bread winners.

At last the Webb greenhouses at Corfu have changed hands. The place has been purchased by Mr. George Troup, the very able superintendent of Forest Lawn Cemetery. Mr. Troup is not going into the flower business. Oh, no. Buffalo could not spare him. But he has a son for whom the place is purchased. There is lots of room in these houses and this winter indicates that the supply is not yet overdone and never will be for the right quality, so we look for a success with this new firm.

We had Mr. Withers, proprietor of American Gardening, with us on Saturday and had a good ramble over the grounds of the Pan-American. Mr. Withers was, to say the least, delighted, and to use his own words as we stood on the grand Esplanade, "You have got the Worlds' Fair beat." Mr. Withers is taking a sincere interest in the cut flower exhibits to be held during the summer and we are grateful for it.

W. W. Greene.

Yesterday arrived a large delegation from the woolly west—but Chicago does not call itself west. It's the metropolis of everything outside of New York City. There was in the party Mr. J. C. Vaughan, Mr. Barker of The Florist, Mr. Kanst, Jr., Mr. Beatty of Oil City and a good looking gentleman from Chicago not in the trade. They saw about all there was to see of our great undertaking and they, too, were amazed and delighted. Nothing pleased Mr. Vaughan more than the wonderful coloring of the beautiful buildings. As he leaned back in admiration of the Towers of the Electricity Building and its charming tints he exclaimed that "it possessed all the component parts of a peach."

I don't get around among the boys as much as I used to and I miss little items, and they must excuse my omissions. One serious mistake was failing to tell you of the splendid Xmas box that Mrs. S. A. Anderson presented to her husband. It was splendidly timed and arrived in perfect order, and it was one of those presents that you don't tire of or only to be used on state occasions. We hope it will last as a joy for years and, although the present may be duplicated a dozen times, this one will be highly prized because its selection was a source of great anxiety. It was in short (about 15 inches) a fine boy. W. S.

GREENE & UNDERHILL.

The firm of Greene & Underhill, Watertown, N. Y., is widely known to the trade all over the country through their extensive shipping business in young plants and rooted cuttings and we have pleasure in presenting herewith portraits of the members of the firm and of Mr. W. W. Greene, the founder of the business.

When established by Mr. Greene, Sr., in 1875, the glass consisted of but one house 16x50 feet and it was at first conducted as part of his business as a vegetable grower. Now there is 40,000 feet of glass and the stock of plants is one of the most varied in the country. Mr. J. Frank Greene became a partner in his father's business in 1878 and when W. W. Greene retired about five years ago Geo. H. Underhill acquired an interest and the present firm name was adopted.

A considerable local business is done but this is exceeded by the trade in small plants which are shipped to other florists at other points. New geraniums have been rather a hobby with the firm and any novelty that possesses merit is sure to find a place in their stock.

J. Frank Greene.

As seen by the pictures the members of the firm are in the early prime of life and have many years in which to further build up their large business.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Good roses are scarcer than ever and it is doubtful if first class roses were ever before in so short a supply at the season. Prices are held sharply up to quotations in consequence. Of poor grade carnations there is an abundance but of the higher grades there are none too many. The general supply seems to be somewhat less in volume than last year, but demand also seems rather smaller, though there is sufficient to keep roses at a much higher level on account of the serious shortage. Carnation prices are averaging rather less than at the same time last year.

Violets are moving more slowly than ever and the returns to the grower will surely run much below those of last season. Only the very best sell fairly well and these bring only $1.00 to $1.25 per 100. Poorer grades, or those that have been held, have been cleaned up at as low a figure as 5 cents a bunch and we hear of some accumulations that failed to "clean up" at any price.

Tulips are coming in and are in fair demand being made to take the place of roses wherever possible. Good long stemmed La Reine, Keizerskroon and Yellow Prince bring $4 and $5 while shorter ones go at $3.
